PREFACE.

The year 1778, which this volume of newspaper extracts embraces, was one of great importance in the military annals of the State of New Jersey. The close of the campaign of 1777 found the Anglo-Hessian army in complete control of Philadelphia, with New York City also under its domination. Winter saw Washington and his troops starving in Valley Forge, and the rich agricultural counties of New Jersey, lying upon the Delaware, the Hudson and the waters tributary to New York bay, exposed to marauding, food-searching expeditions sent out by British commanders.

All that had been gained at Trenton seemed to be lost. Early summer, however, brought a change.

General Clinton evacuated Philadelphia, and dragging his army, encumbered by camp followers, across the plantation lands and wooded tracts of central New Jersey, met General Washington upon the field of Monmouth. Soon thereafter the second anniversary of the birth of the independence of the United States, celebrated by the American army at New Brunswick, gave New Jersey to the patriotic cause and turned the tide of war to the southward. Thence, until the end of the year, the military events in the State were of such purely local interest as to be of no national importance.

It is with the details of these great movements that this volume deals. One finds, in the official reports published in the Whig and Tory newspapers, various tales of the naval fight at Red Bank, not printed until 1778, and the expeditions into Salem and Burlington counties. Then, too, is told the "Story of the Kegs," immortalized by Francis Hopkinson, one of the triumvirate of Whig satirical poets of New Jersey, and of the midnight raids in the vicinity of Paulus Hook, now Jersey City, near Elizabethtown and on the "north shore" of Monmouth county.

The evacuation of Philadelphia and the battle of Monmouth are detailed by Washington and Clinton, and over against all stands Charles Lee, and his hitherto forgotten letter to the New Jersey Gazette, in which, like many another military leader caught in a sorry fix, he pleads a "suspension of judgment."

But there is much that does not relate to matters purely military. For the first time in the history of New Jersey journalism, a woman, "Belinda," contributes to Isaac Collins' newspaper. There is something familiar in the signatures and arguments of "Equal Taxer" and "A True Patriot," while other discontented citizens "advise" the legislature and "warn" those in authority. "Adolphus," in verse, tells of "The Future Glory of America" and initialed contributors pour out political and economic essays.

Among all the contributors to the New Jersey Gazette, from which so many extracts are taken, "Hortentius"—Governor William Livingston stands pre-eminent. In satirical poetry, in essay writing, and in legislative messages, he found constant place in the columns of the Gazette, outranking, even, John Witherspoon, who was the friend and associate of the editor.

There is much that throws light upon the social conditions of the time. Not even war, with uncertainties of government and depreciated currency, prevented the sales of real and of personal property. Landowners and storekeepers advertised everything from mansions to patent medicines, while admiralty sales of captured vessels and their cargoes scattered luxuries throughout the State. Slaves and soldiers ran away, and farmers suggested methods of cultivation of flax and the making of molasses, sugar and spirits from Indian corn and pumpkins.

From the inquisitions found and returned in the county courts may be ascertained the names of Tories of New Jersey, whose property had been confiscated and was to be sold. That this Tory element, as late as 1778, was large is clearly shown by the list presented in the index of this volume. Many of these names are not to be found in the usual works of reference and form a striking commentary upon the continued prevalence of the doctrine that in adherence to the King, a family name, a reputation in the community, worldly goods and even life, should be sacrificed to his cause. The interest attached to such names is unquestioned.

Among the extracts are the neglected records of the naval engagements from Sandy Hook to Cape May, the eulogies of men and women whose very names have been forgotten, the loss of lottery tickets, the announcements of horse breeders, an industry once so prominent that a "nag's head, proper" is emblazoned, as a part of the crest of the great seal of the State; the strangely untrue accounts of successes met with by British arms, circulated by the New York Gazette and Weekly Mercury, and the sincerity of Quaker Isaac Collins, who issued the Gazette, and said that if he couldn't fight he could write for the cause of Independence.

To the PRINTER of the NEW-JERSEY GAZETTE.

SIR,

THOUGH I am an old man that cannot render my country any active services, I am willing to contribute my mite to its prosperity, in the only way in which I can be useful to it. Having lost that vigour and vivacity which is peculiar to youth, and necessary for the more busy scenes of life, I am retired from the bustle of the world, resolved to spend the remainder of my days, not as an idle spectator of the struggle in which we are engaged, but with a resolution of conveying to the public, through the channel of your paper, such hints and observations on our internal police, as I think may be salutary to the cause of liberty and virtue.

We have, by the blessing of Providence, established a glorious fabric of freedom and independence; but unless that fabric is supported by the same spirit of patriotism by which it was reared, I am afraid that it will not be of long duration. Whenever our public virtue decays, our government, which owes its origin to and was founded upon public virtue, will languish; and upon the total extinction of the former, (which heaven avert from ever proving our case) the latter will crumble to pieces, and be totally demolished. It requires great virtue in the people, and great wisdom and activity in their rulers, to prevent the constitution from degenerating in anarchy and confusion. I shall therefore, from time to time publish my sentiments, as well on the errors of the people at large, as on the failings of those who are placed over us, either as legislators or magistrates, and that with the freedom becoming the subject of a free government, but at the same time with the deference and decorum due to superiors. For the present be pleased to insert my thoughts on the duty of representatives, which are honestly meant, and I hope will be graciously received.

Characteristics of a good Assembly-Man.

I.

To accept his delegation with a sincere desire, and for the sole purpose of rendering his country all the service in his power.

II.

Seriously to consider what laws will be most beneficial; industrious in collecting materials for framing them; and prompt to hear all men, especially the the most judicious, on the state of his country; and the regulations proposed to render it more happy and flourishing.

III.

To make conscience of doing his proper share of business in the House, without leaving it to others to do his part, by which they must necessarily neglect their own; every member being bound in honour to do as much as he can.

IV.

Candidly and impartially to form his own judgment for himself, yet to be always open to conviction; and upon proper arguments for that purpose, ready to change, and frankly to confess the change of, his sentiments.

V.

To detach himself from all local partialities, and county-interests, inconsistent with the common weal; and ever considering himself as a representative of the whole State, to be assiduous in promoting the interest of the whole, which must ultimately produce the good of every part.

VI.

Never to grudge the time he spends in attending the sessions, tho' his private affairs may suffer, since the loss he may thereby sustain will be amply recompensed by the delightful testimony of his conscience, in favour of his disinterested patriotism; while no pleasure arising from the advancement of his fortune, to the neglect of a superior obligation, can balance the upbraidings of that faithful monitor.

VII.

In every vote he gives, to be solely directed by the public emolument; and never influenced in his suffrage by motives merely selfish or lucrative.

VIII.

To give no leave of absence to a fellow member on trifling occasions, in hopes of the same indulgence in return; but to be strenuous in supporting the rules and orders of the House, (which are the life of business) tho' he may thereby disoblige an irregular, or disappoint an home-sick individual.

IX.

Inflexible in his resolution of acting agreeably to the dictates of his conscience,—to be utterly regardless of the applause or censure, that may ensue upon the discharge of his duty.

X.

Never to be instrumental in promoting to any office or trust, his dearest connections or intimates, whom he believes not qualified for the department; nor ever to oppose the promotion of any that are, from personal pique or resentment.

XI.

As the best calculated laws will be found ineffectual to regulate a people of dissolute morals, he will recommend by his conversation and example, virtue and purity of manners; and discountenance all irreligion and immorality, as equally fatal to the interests of civil society and personal happiness.

XII.

Serenely to enjoy the praises acquired by his merit, as an additional testimony to the approbation of his own heart, of the rectitude of his conduct; but from public clamour and obloquy, to retire within himself; and there to feast on his own virtue, without seeking to retaliate the ingratitude of unreasonable men, save only by putting their malevolence to the blush, by fresh and more extensive services to his country.

CATO.

To the PRINTER of the NEW-JERSEY GAZETTE.

SIR,

AMONG all the apparatus of General Howe's army, not even excepting some of the sultan's conveniences, I cannot learn that he carries with him a single poet, to celebrate his exploits. He maintains indeed two historiographers in New-York, who furnish us with weekly accounts of his heroic achievements. But as these royalists and loyalists have neither sufficient integrity for impartial narrative, nor genius for poetical flights, the future conqueror of America seems to derive but little renown from their aukward eulogiums. Besides, those trumpeters of his praises, have by this time been so often detected in fiction, that they would not now be credited, should they by accident happen to blunder upon the truth. I would, therefore, advise Sir William to carry with him a prompt bard, able to celebrate all his victories, past, present, and to come; and as I have a nephew, Mr. Printer, of a natural genius for poetry, and at present out of employ, I could wish to introduce him into his Excellency's family for this laudable purpose. It is true he is at present a whig, but I doubt not that which has made every body else a tory, who really is so, the expectation of personal profit, may also accomplish the conversion of my kinsman.

As a specimen of his skill in poetical composition, I present you with the following stanza, which the young gentleman delivered this morning at the tea-table, ex tempore.

Yours,

HORTENTIUS.¹

On General Howe's late expedition to attack the army of the United States.

Threat'ning to drive us from the hill,
 Sir William march'd t' attack our men;
 But finding that we all stood still,

On Tuesday last the schooner Little Hope, with part of her cargo, consisting of rum, sugar, coffee, tea, and a number of blankets, drifted from Philadelphia with the ice above Point-no-point: The day following Major Edwards, with eight more,¹ boarded her, after having with much difficulty worked their way through the ice. Previous to their boarding her, the Captain of the schooner, with five sailors, paraded as though they intended to dispute the matter; but, their hearts failing them, they saved further trouble by a ready surrender.

The same day (several vessels drifting in the ice between Philadelphia and Gloucester Point) Capt. Robert Quigley,² with twenty-four of the militia, boarded and took the transport brigantine John, and the armed schooner Industry, with thirteen English seamen, among whom are two Captains. The brigantine had several hogsheads of rum, &c. on board; and the schooner some tobacco. After taking out the valuable articles, and stripping them of their rigging, sails, &c. they were burnt.

Another party of our militia, on the same day, made prize of the transport Lord Howe, which was also stripped and destroyed; and the day following a sloop, on her way from Chester to Philadelphia, was taken with about twenty barrels of flour on board. In these little expeditions, thirty-four British seamen and soldiers were taken; and on Friday last, they passed through this city on their way to a place of security.

On Wednesday night last four deserters, who were under sentence of death, and confined in the gaol in this city,³ found means to escape, but two of them were presently re-taken. The others got quite off.

Extraordinary Wages,

and an exemption from serving in the militia:

AND still higher wages, without such exemption, will be given to a few choice wood-cutters and labourers, to be employed at the independent salt-works,¹ about eighteen miles southward of the forks of Little-Egg-Harbor, and two miles northward of Absequean river.

Apply at the said works to

NATHANIEL PETTIT.

A PERSON well qualified in all respects to do the duties of a principal clerk in a publick office, may meet with immediate employ on good terms, on applying speedily at the secretary's office in Trenton, to

CHARLES PETTIT.

¹One of several works, at this period, established on or near the New Jersey coast. Salt was frequently obtained by using the solar process in evaporating sea water.

A TRACT of near six hundred acres of good land, in three plantations, adjoining each other, with houses, barns, stables, and other improvements, lying in the county of Middlesex, and eastern division of New-Jersey, is to be exchanged for a well improved plantation of equal value in the western division of New-Jersey, any where between Woodberry and Crosswicks. The title of the above-mentioned land is indisputable, free of every kind of incumbrance, and has been purchased some time. For further particulars enquire of Mr. Peter Shiras in Mount-Holly.

N. B. A good chair and saddle horse, also a riding chair with a top and apron complete and almost new, to be sold, enquire as above.

WAS LOST, The first of January, 1778, between Trenton and Crosswicks, A RED MOROCCO POCKET-BOOK, containing between eighteen and twenty dollars, ten States lottery tickets, No. 916, 917, 918, 931, 932, 942, 943, 5518, 5498, 5499, and sundry other papers which will be of no use to any but the owner. Whoever hath found the same, and will bring it to the Printer of this paper, shall have the money for their trouble.—New-Jersey Gazette, No. 6, Jan. 7, 1778.

PHILADELPHIA.

From New-Jersey we learn that, in August last, about one hundred and four of the loyal inhabitants of that government, wearied out with the oppression and persecution of the rebels, assembled together, and agreed, if possible, to get to New York. But the first night, while the rest were sleeping in a barn at Hunterdon county, one of them deserted and gave information of the whole affair; in consequence of which, the next day, they were way-laid by a party of the rebels, when some of them flying to the swamps, and concealing themselves, escaped; the remainder, above fifty, were taken prisoners, and made to march loaded with irons, and tied together, first to Trenton—then to Burlington—from thence to Princeton, and from there to Morristown, where they were lodged in jail, and some time after tried, and near forty of them sentenced to be hung, two of which were executed the second of last month; some of the others, to save their lives, listed in the rebel army, and some still remain in Morristown jail; Two of those that listed, have deserted them, and come into town.—The Pennsylvania Evening Post, January 10, 1778.

New-York, January 12. The Rebel Privateer Brig. called the Active, Capt. Williams, lately taken by his Majesty's Frigate the Mermaid, is cast away on the Coast of New Jersey; the Vessel is lost, and the Crew consisting of about 20 Men, are now Prisoners with the Rebels.

Last Wednesday died of the Small-Pox, in her 48th year, Mrs. Barton, Wife of Lieutenant-Colonel Joseph Barton, of the 5th Battalion of the new Jersey raised Corps; she had been driven with 7 small Children from their Estate in Sussex County where she had endured every Sort of Persecution from the Rebels, who, also stripped her of all her Property, whilst the Lieutenant Colonel was Prisoner at Weathersfield, in Connecticut. She was a valuable Member of Society, and her Death is greatly regretted. The Children are under the Protection of a Person in Town, until their Father can be removed from his Durance.—New York Gazette and Weekly Mercury, January 12, 1778.

Letter from Major-General ROBERTSON to His Excellency Governor LIVINGSTON.

New-York, January 4, 1778.

SIR,

I AM interrupted in my daily attempts to soften the calamities of prisoners, and reconcile their case with our security, by a general cry of resentment, arising from an information ———

That officers in the kings service taken on the 27th of November, and Mr. John Brown, a deputy commissary, are to be tried in Jersey for high-treason; and that Mr. Iliff and another prisoner have been hanged.

Though I am neither authorised to threaten or to sooth, my wish to prevent an increase of horrors, will justify my using the liberty of an old acquaintance, to desire your interposition to put an end to, or to prevent measures which, if pursued on one side, would tend to prevent every act of humanity on the other, and render every person who exercises this to the king's enemies, odious to his friends.

I need not point out to you all the cruel consequences of such a procedure. I am hopeful you'll prevent them, and excuse this trouble from, Sir,

Your obedient humble servant

JAMES ROBERTSON.

N. B. At the moment that the cry of murder reached my ears, I was signing orders, that Fell's request to have the liberty of the city, and Colonel Reynolds¹ to be set free on his parole, should be complied with. I have not recalled the order, because though the evidence be strong, I can't believe it possible, a measure so cruel and impolitick, could be adopted where you bear sway.
To William Livingston, Esq. &c. &c.

Governor LIVINGSTON'S Answer.

January 7, 1778.

SIR,

HAVING received a letter under your signature, dated the 4th instant, which I have some reason to suppose you intended for me, I sit down to answer your inquiries concerning certain officers in the service of your king taken on Staten-Island, and one Browne who calls himself a deputy commissary; and also respecting one Iliff and another prisoner, (I suppose you must mean John Mee, he having shared the fate you mention) who have been hanged.

Boskirk,¹ Earl² and Hammel,³ who are, I presume, the officers intended, with the said Browne, were sent to me by General Dickinson as prisoners taken on Staten-Island. Finding them all to be subjects of this state, and to have committed treason against it, the council of safety committed them to Trenton gaol. At the same time I acquainted Gen. Washington, that if he chose to treat the three first who were British officers as prisoners of war, I doubted not the council of safety would be satisfied. General Washington has since informed me that he intends to consider them as such; and they are therefore at his service, whenever the commissary of prisoners shall direct concerning them. Browne I am told committed several robberies in this state before he took sanctuary on Staten-Island, and I should scarcely imagine that he has expiated the guilt of his former crimes by committing the greater one of joining the enemies of his country. However, if General Washington chooses to consider him also as a prisoner of war, I shall not interpose in the matter.

¹ Captain Jacob Van Buskirk, of the Third Battalion of New Jersey Volunteers (Loyalists) and a son of Lieutenant-Colonel Abraham Van Buskirk, who, after the war, became Mayor of Shelburne, Nova Scotia. Jacob Van Buskirk was severely wounded in the battle of Eutaw Springs, South Carolina.

² Lieutenant Edward Earle, of the Fourth Battalion and, in 1781, Captain of the Third Battalion, New Jersey Volunteers (Loyalists).

Iliff was executed after a trial by a jury, for enlisting our subjects, himself being one, as recruits in the British army, and he was apprehended on his way with them to Staten-Island. Had he never been subject to this state, he would have forfeited his life as a spy. Mee was one of his company, and had also procured our subjects to enlist in the service of the enemy.

If these transactions, sir, should induce you to countenance greater severities towards our people, whom the fortune of war has thrown into your power, than they have already suffered, you will pardon me for thinking that you go farther out of your way and find palliatives for inhumanity, than necessity seems to require; and if this be the cry of murder to which you allude as having reached your ears, I sincerely pity your ears for being so frequently assaulted with cries of murder much more audible, because much less distant, I mean the cries of your prisoners who are constantly perishing in the gaols of New-York (the coolest and most deliberate kind of murder) from the rigorous manner of your treatment.

I am, with all due respect,

Your most humble servant,

WILLIAM LIVINGSTON.

James Robertson, Esq. &c. &c. &c.

P. S. You have distinguished me by a title which I have neither authority nor ambition to assume, I know of no man, sir, who bears sway in this state. It is our peculiar felicity, and our superiority over the tyrannical system we have discarded, that we are not swayed by men—In New-Jersey, sir, the laws alone bear sway.

To the PRINTER of the NEW-JERSEY GAZETTE.

SIR,

WHOEVER considers the importance of education in a political light, will readily acknowledge it worthy the greatest encouragement from the public. The superior advantages derived to the community from men of letters, in the various offices of government, and especially in the character of legislators and magistrates, to what are to be expected from those who have neglected the cultivation of their minds, are too numerous to be recounted. Impressed with a deep sense of the happy effects of literature upon civil society, the wisest lawgivers have ever been studious to promote and encourage it. For this purpose, they have founded seminaries, endowed colleges, pensioned men of eminent erudition, and explored even foreign nations for the ablest professors in every science.

Of the advantages that have already redounded to this State from the college of New-Jersey, many of the gentlemen who have been there graduated, and since preferred to different offices, have afforded us abundant and striking proofs. We cannot, therefore, compare the late flourishing figure of that institution, (in which the means of education were perhaps not inferior to those in the most celebrated universities of Europe) with its present deplorable condition, without lamenting the change; and feeling ourselves deeply affected for the interests of posterity. Nor can it be expected, that parents will put their children to college, while they are subjected, in the course of their studies, to be called out in the militia; which not only endangers their morals, but must of necessity obstruct their progress in learning. And indeed to oblige matriculates to perform military duty, is a thing so unexampled, that there is perhaps not an instance of it in history. They are, I believe, universally excused from war; and for that reason not treated as men bearing arms, when their country is invaded by an enemy.

Considering, therefore, the unspeakable importance of a liberal education to civil society, the impossibility of obtaining it under its present embarrassments, and how highly it becomes the legislative body of a free people to encourage the liberal arts, (which naturally inspire the most exalted love of our country) and by that means nurture for the succeeding age, a race of sages and patriots to carry to full perfection, that illustrious fabric of liberty, the foundation of which has been laid by the present.—Considering these things, I say, I flatter myself that our superiors will not, for the comparatively trifling service which the collegians are capable of rendering the public in the capacity of soldiers, continue the present embargo upon the seat of the muses; nor compel the arts and sciences, against which none ought to wage war, to war against any. And should I be disappointed in my expectations, the disappointment will be greatly alleviated by the pleasing reflection of having discharged my duty, in endeavoring to encourage the advancement of learning; which, next to religion, deserves the most serious attention of the guardians of the people.

To his MAJESTY of GREAT-BRITAIN.

DELUDED Prince! how wretchedly art thou mistaken in thy idea of true grandeur? That Prince is truly great who draws his sword with reluctance, and sheaths it with pleasure—Who draws it against the enemies of liberty, and the oppressors of human kind—Who builds on his empire, what in real value transcends all empire, virtue, patriotism, philanthropy, and the happiness of millions; and thus makes his throne a scaffold to the skies. But what are thy notions of glory, who art waging war unprovoked and beyond example sanguinary? War against those it was thy duty, thy bounden thy sworn duty, to protect; and for complaining that thou didst not protect them? War against liberty, and against men for defending liberty?

Tutored by preceptors of arbitrary principles, and but too prompt a scholar under such tutorage, thou wast early intoxicated with the love of despotic sway. Prerogative over-rating, undervaluing law, and mistaking the true glory of a British monarch, and of all monarchs—the power of doing good; you placed it in power boundless and unlimited. To secure to yourself this delusive phantom, you eagerly adopted a plan (a plan of murder and havoc, desolation and tyranny) invented by hell, matured by a Scotch faction, and now executing by hell's prime agents, thy bloody, mercenary ministers of vengeance. A plan for depriving, by fire and sword and plunder and torture, of liberty and property, habitation and life, a people who never gave thee cause of offence, but loved thee for thy grandfather's sake; and would have loved thee for thine own sake, hadst thou not compelled them, by a reversed ambition, to turn their love into hatred, and defend themselves by open force against the bloody schemes of a raging tyrant, whom neither reason could convince, justice reclaim, nor supplication mollify.

HORTENTIUS.

BURLINGTON, Jan. 21.

A correspondent desires to insert the following: Extract from a letter dated Philadelphia Jan. 9, 1778.

“This city has lately been entertained with a most astonishing instance of the activity, bravery, and military skill of the royal navy of Great-Britain. The affair is somewhat particular, and deserves your notice. Some time last week two boys observed a keg of a singular construction, floating in the river opposite to the city, they got into a small boat, and attempting to take up the keg, it burst with a great explosion and blew up the unfortunate boys. On Monday last several kegs of a like construction made their appearance—An alarm was immediately spread thro' the city—Various reports prevailed; filling the city and the royal troops with unspeakable consternation. Some reported that these kegs were filled with armed rebels; who were to issue forth in the dead of the night, as the Grecians did of old from their wooden horse at the siege of Troy, and take the city by surprize; asserting that they had seen the points of their bayonets thro' the bung-holes of the kegs. Others said they were charged with the most inveterate combustibles, to be kindled by secret machinery, and setting the whole Delaware in flames, were to consume all the shipping in the harbour; whilst others asserted that they were constructed by art magic, would of themselves ascend the wharfs in the night time and roll all flaming thro' the streets of the city, destroying every thing in their way.—Be this as it may—Certain it is that the shipping in the harbour, and all the wharfs of the city were fully manned—The battle begun, and it was surprizing to behold the incessant blaze that was kept up against the enemy, the kegs. Both officers and men exhibited the most unparalleled skill and bravery on the occasion; whilst the citizens stood gazing, as solemn witnesses of their prowess. From the Roebuck and other ships of war, whole broadsides were poured into the Delaware. In short, not a wandering chip, stick, or drift-log but felt the vigour of the British arms. The action began about sun-rise, and would have been compleated with great success by noon, had not an old market woman coming down the river with provisions, unfortunately let a small keg of butter fall overboard, which (as it was then ebb) floated down to the scene of action. At sight of this unexpected reinforcement of the enemy, the battle was renewed with fresh fury—the firing was incessant till the evening closed the affair. The kegs were either totally demolished or obliged to fly, as none of them have shewn their heads since. It is said his Excellency Lord Howe has dispatched a swift sailing packet with an account of this victory, to the court of London. In a word, Monday the 5th of January 1778, must ever be distinguished in history for the memorable BATTLE OF THE KEGS.¹

To the MAGISTRATES in TRENTON.

Gentlemen,

I HAVE the honour to acquaint you, that having the command of a corps, which, from the fatigues of a laborious campaign, and the severity of the season, is under the necessity of taking shelter to recruit and re-establish itself in your State, am desirous of guarding against any attempts of the enemy which might bring distress upon the good people of this town and its neighbourhood, as you must undoubtedly be sensible that the seat of war is ever exposed to the fury and depredations of the enemy—Nothing on my part shall be neglected to prevent such evils; but all my vigilance may not suffice, without the assistance of the inhabitants, to render my quarters secure: I therefore request of you gentlemen, and the good people of this town, to give me the earliest intelligence of any movement of the enemy you may discover towards this quarter, when, upon all such occasions, I shall take the most efficacious measures to exempt the inhabitants of this town from falling victims to the rage of desperate and cruel enemy, and convince the publick that the zeal of the troops I command, will prove the justice of those inestimable rights they defend.

I further request you will use your endeavours to procure me every convenience necessary for the subsistence of my troops while they occupy this post, in order that I may be enabled to make head against any incursions of the enemy. I expect that your patriotism will inspire you with that diligence and activity requisite to give satisfaction to those men, who from motives of honour, sacrifice themselves to a cause so righteous as that of

A gentleman from Tom's river, in Monmouth County, East Jersey, saw six or seven topsail vessels at sea, seemingly bound to New-York; and ascending a vessel's masts, he discovered ten or twelve more, pursuing the same course. Two American vessels unknown, which the enemy had captured, and sent for that port, have some weeks since been wrecked on the Jersey coast.

New-York, January 26. Alexander Worth, a Soldier belonging to Col. Barton's² Battalion, being cut off from his Company when the Rebels were last over on Staten Island, was obliged to have Recourse to a Canoe, and paddle over to the Jersey Shore, where he concealed himself for some Days, but was at Length taken and carried to Morris Town, where he was tried on Suspicion of being a Spy, found guilty by their Laws, and had his Choice either to be burnt in the Hand, or serve in the Continental Army, and fight against his King. He declared he would suffer Death, rather than comply with the last Requisition, but nobly bore the former, which was performed by one Carmichael, Sheriff of the County of Morris, with great Dexterity, by fixing his Hand and Arm down to a Block Died since our last, John Barton, aged 15 years, and Joseph Barton, aged 6 years, both Sons of Col. Barton, now a Prisoner in Connecticut. Since the Colonel's Confinement he has lost his Wife and three Sons.

From the very uncommon Quietness of the Rebels in the different Parts of the Country, there is Reason to conclude they are meditating some Stroke against his Majesty's good Subjects in America, and from the best Accounts we can assure the Public there are very few Men to be seen in Arms in almost any Part of the Province of New-Jersey, in the East or West Side of the North-River, or in the North East Part of this Province, towards Connecticut, and we are told that Putnam is gone to Peek's Kill.

By a late Law of the Province of New-Jersey, one half of the Inhabitants are always to be on Duty, to guard Elizabeth-Town, Newark, &c. &c. In case of Refusal, or Neglect of any Person, the Capt. of the Company to which he belongs has Power to hire a Man in his Room, for a certain Sum agreed upon for one Month, which Sum is to be levied off the Delinquent's Estate, at the Expiration of the Time, and sometimes the Fine amounts to £100.—New-York Gazette and Weekly Mercury, January 26, 1778.

.On the 19th instant died, in the sixty-sixth year of his age, FRANCIS FUGLER, the Hermit, who existed alone twenty-five years in a thick wood about four miles from this city,¹ through all the inclemencies of the seasons without fire, in a cell made by the side of an old log in form of a small oven, not high or long enough to stand upright in or lie extended. His recluse manner of living excited the curiosity of strangers, by whom he was often visited. His reasons for thus secluding himself from human society we believe he never communicated to any person in these parts, but it is thought he meant by it to do penance for crimes committed in his own country; for he was a man subject to violent passions. He subsisted upon nuts and the charity of people in the neighbourhood. From whence he came or who he was no body could find out, but appeared to be by his dialect a German, yet he spoke that language imperfectly, either through design or from a defect in his intellects.—The evening before his death a friend carried him a little nourishment, of which he partook, earnestly praying for his dissolution; and would not suffer himself to be removed to a more comfortable dwelling. Next morning he was found dead in his cell, with a crucifix and a brass fish by his side; and on the 20th he was decently interred in Friends burying-place in Mountholly.

A gentleman of credit lately from Fishkill informs, that the Mercury, a British ship of twenty-eight guns, coming down the North River, struck on the chevaux de frise and sunk, in so short a time that not half of her crew were saved—she had many sick on board.

Wednesday last several persons, who had been taken up a few days before in Gloucester county, were brought to the gaol in this city,¹ where they are confined—charged with trading, contrary to law, with the enemies of the United States now in Philadelphia.

IN COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

WHEREAS it has been represented to us, that some evil minded persons, enemies to the liberties of America, or preferring private lucre to the important interests of their country, endeavour to persuade the more ignorant and unwary, that a certain act of the legislature passed the eleventh day of December last, intituled, *An act for regulating and limiting the price of sundry articles of produce, manufacture and trade, and to prevent forestalling, regrating and engrossing,*¹ will not be carried into execution; hoping by such wickèd arts to discourage a due obedience thereto, and to defeat the salutary purposes thereby intended: And whereas the public safety indispensibly requires, and the executive authority of this State is in duty bound to have the said act punctually carried into effect; it is therefore earnestly recommended to, and strictly enjoined upon all Justices of the peace and other officers whom it may concern, on pain of being prosecuted for neglect of duty with the utmost rigour of law, to execute the said act with all possible vigour and diligence; and if need be, to apply to this Board for their aid and co-operation in the premises, and to transmit the names of all such delinquents (together with those of the witnesses) who shall presume to speak contemptuously of the said law, or to act in violation thereof, in order that they may be brought to speedy and condign punishment, and treated as persons dangerous and disaffected to the present government.

Mr. COLLINS,

As the celebrated Mr. Galloway, late attorney litigant, but now attorney militant, has already had such a Rowland for his Oliver, my observations on his low artifice in the Pennsylvania Evening Post, shall occupy but a small part of your Gazette.

This gentleman having been sufficiently flagellated for publishing an affidavit taken suppressio veri, with design thence to avail his sinking cause, by the suggestio falsi; I shall confine myself to his false charge, That the Americans publish falsehoods concerning the probability of a French war. Pray, Mr. Superintendent, do the Americans compose the English papers, which are full of a rupture with France? Do the Americans make speeches for the Members in Parliament, who look upon such an event as avoidless? Did the Americans frame Lord Stormont's memorial to the Ministers of France, which appears conceived in such humiliating terms, and dictated under such apprehensions of war, that one would swear the trembling Ambassador (who lately swaggered to their High Mightiness like a true English porter) already wanted new linings to his breeches? But let me tell this minute politician, that the Americans do not found their hopes of success against the tyranny of Great-Britain, on the expectation of being assisted by the French: They do not pretend to be certain of such an event. But were they certain of the contrary, not a single American (except such turncoats as Mr. Superintendent) would, upon that account, be diverted from his opposition. We have begun, we have continued, and we can conclude the war without foreign succours. It is beneath the dignity of Congress, to go cap-in-hand for despicable mercenaries, to every petty, paltry, pitiful, penurious German Prince, whose territories are not larger than the county of Bucks, and whose subjects are scarcely worth our killing, after being brought above three thousand miles to kill us. It is upon God and our Right, and not upon Lewis the XVI, that we depend for our deliverance. And considering our success hitherto, we should have no reason to be discouraged, tho' we knew that His Most Christian Majesty would never interfere. It was not by French assistance that we forced General Burgoyne and his whole army to surrender; nor was it by French assistance, that we defeated the British troops at Trenton, and spread the terror of our arms to Bordentown, where this gentleman was then an humble dependant on the Hessians, and sat shivering on his horse with a for Heaven's sake whither shall I flee? in a hard shower of rain, to which, hard as it was, he added not a little by the spontaneous efflux of a certain natural jet d'eau, prone to such involuntary extillations upon any extraordinary impression of terror.

But to shew him what consternation the ruinous condition of Britain has already excited in the realm itself, and that if France does not speedily assist us, Britain undoubtedly will, by being divided against itself, I send you a number of queries,¹ extracted verbatim from one of their own papers, which I hope you will give an early place in your Gazette.

New-York, February 2. We hear that all the Grain in New-Jersey is to be threshed out by the first of March, and most of it to be transported to the back Part of Pennsylvania; that those who refuse to comply with this Order, their Wheat and Rye is to be taken away in the Sheaf, and paid for in Square Dollars only as Straw; that the People in general are much averse to the Measure, and declare their Unwillingness to comply with such a Mandate; that near Morris Town, a Bacon 40 Feet high has been lately erected in form of a Block House (with a 6 Pounder on the Top) filled with Dry Wood and other Combustible Stuff, for the purpose of catching fire soon, in order to the more quick Discharge of the Cannon, on the Report of which, and the Light from the Building, the Country is to take the Alarm, and those who do not turn out, may, by their Laws, be instantly put to Death by their next Neighbour, and escape with Impunity. Buildings of a similar Construction are also erected at Long Hill, and on the Heights at Bound Brook.

From Newark we are informed, that the Inhabitants of that Place, some Time ago having received Notice to remove from thence, many Families were already retired with their Effects back to the Mountains, and that Orders are received there for the immediate constructing of Barracks, for accommodating a very large Body of Troops.

On Thursday afternoon, on his Way to gratify an ardent Desire to see his Family, who were ill of the Small-pox, Mr. JOHN RICHARDS, of New-Barbadoes Neck, was taken near Bergen by two armed Men, and on the Road between that and the three Pigeons, was shot dead by one of them, as he was preventing the other from robbing him of his Watch. He was a Man universally known, and as universally beloved, warmly attached to his Friends, humane and candid to his Enemies, benevolent and hospitable to all Men, and has now fallen a Sacrifice to his unsuspecting and generous Temper, for when warned of the Danger of his intended Visit, his Answer was, "that his Countrymen, even if they should take him, would never injure him."

Mistaken Man, to trust to the Generosity of those, who have involved their Country to Ruin.

The Names of the Monsters who perpetrated this horrid Tragedy, are Brower and Le Sheair,¹ the former Shot him dead.

Beech near Barnagat. A number of people from the shore went to their assistance and saved all the men, but one that was drowned. She was from Cape Nichola Mole bound to Philadelphia, laden with 1600 bushels of salt, 40 hogsheads of molasses, some rum and sugar. She went to pieces in a few hours, and all was lost except about 160 gallons of rum. The hands went to Philadelphia—and Capt. Bonnet went on board the sloop Endeavour at Toms river, to take his passage home to Hispaniola, but unfortunately on the 25th of last month in the night, she parted her cable and was cast away in the bay and Capt. Bonnet with every soul on board perished.”—The Pennsylvania Journal, February 3, 1778.

Phila. Yesterday about twenty West Jersey loyalists crossed the Delaware, from this city, in order to assist some of their friends, who had expressed a desire of taking refuge here, to avoid the horrid tyranny and implacable persecution of the rebels. At the mouth of Mantua creek, they fell in with a party of the enemy in ambuscade, whom they soon repulsed, advanced four miles into the country, and took one Wilson prisoner, who was a committee man, and, it is said, very active in distressing the friends of government. They returned this day with the prisoner, and their friends. The loyalists had one man killed, but what the rebels suffered is not known. Wilson is in confinement.—The Pennsylvania Evening Post, February 3, 1778.

Wednesday, the 28th ult. Mr. EDWARD CATHRALL, in the 72d year of his age, after a life well spent, paid the last debt to nature. His facetious temper and christian deportment endeared him to his numerous acquaintances; and, during his last indisposition, he exhibited the greatest resignation to the Divine Will, patiently waiting to be removed from this transitory state of existence to a habitation, not made with hands, eternal in the heavens.

Friday following his remains were interred in Friends burying-ground, attended by a respectable number of his friends and fellow citizens.

 The public are cautioned against counterfeit Thirty Dollar bills, dated Feb. 26, 1777, badly imitated on copperplate. The counterfeit bill is easily discovered from the smoothness of the paper, which is always the consequence of paper passing thro' a rolling-press on a copper-plate. The word Baltimore is not only larger, but in other respects very unlike the same word in the true bill. The words Spanish milled dollars in the counterfeit are very ill engraved and not like the Printer's letters.—The mountains, in the device, on the face of the bill, are strongly shaded in the true bills, and are little more than a drawing in the counterfeit.—The head in the clouds on the back of the bill, representing the wind, is much larger and worse done in the counterfeit than in the true. There are many other differences between the true and the false, easily seen on comparison, but the above particulars will be sufficient for detection.

Any gentleman inclined to employ such a person, by sending proposals (either inclusive or exclusive of militia fines) to the printer hereof, shall be duly answered.

To the PRINTER of the NEW-JERSEY GAZETTE.

SIR,

IT has frequently happened, and may happen again, that the militia of New-Jersey make prize of vessels belonging to, or in the service of the enemy; and as privatering is rather a novel business to landsmen in general, it may be of use to them if you will make them acquainted with the following extracts from the resolutions, orders, and regulations of Congress, by which they may the better know how to conduct themselves in the business, and in what manner to proceed in order to ascertain their property in any prizes they may take.

IN CONGRESS, November 25, 1775.

Resolved, 4. That it be, and is hereby recommended to the several legislatures in the United Colonies, as soon as possible, to erect courts of justice, or give jurisdiction to the courts now in being, for the purpose of determining concerning the captures to be made as aforesaid, and to provide that all trials, in such cases, be had by a jury under such qualifications as to the respective legislatures shall seem expedient.

5. That all prosecutions shall be commenced in the court of that Colony in which the captures shall be made, but if no such court be at that time erected in the said Colony, or if the capture be made on open sea, then the prosecution shall be in the court of such Colony as the captor may find most convenient; provided that nothing contained in this resolution shall be construed so as to enable the captor to remove his prize from any Colony competent to determine concerning the seizure, after he shall have carried the vessel so seized within any harbour of the same.

March 23d, 1776.

Resolved, That all vessels, with their tackle, apparel and furniture, and cargoes belonging to any inhabitant or inhabitants of Great-Britain, and all vessels which may be employed in carrying supplies to the ministerial armies, which happen to be taken near the shores of any of these Colonies by the people of the country or detachments from the army, shall be deemed lawful prize, and the Court of Admiralty within the said Colony is required on condemnation thereof, to ADJUDGE that all charges and expences which may attend the capture and trial, be first paid out of the monies arising from the sales of the prize, and the remainder equally divided among all those who shall have been actually engaged and employed in taking the said prize. Provided that where any detachments of the army shall have been employed as aforesaid, their part of the prize-money shall be distributed among them in proportion to the pay of the officers and soldiers so employed.

RULES for the regulation of the Navy of the United Colonies.

One of the articles is as follows.

All papers, charter-parties, bills of lading, passports, and other writings whatsoever, found on board any ship or ships which shall be taken, shall be carefully preserved, and the originals sent to the courts of justice for maritime affairs, appointed or to be appointed by the legislatures in the respective Colonies for judging concerning such prize or prizes; and if any person or persons shall wilfully or negligently destroy or suffer to be destroyed any such paper or papers, he or they so offending shall forfeit their share of such prize or prizes, and shall suffer such other punishments as they shall be judged by a court-martial to deserve.

INSTRUCTIONS to the Commanders of private ships or vessels of war which shall have commissions or letters of marque and reprisal, authorizing them to make captures of British vessels and cargoes.

Art. 3. You shall bring such ships and vessels as you shall take, with their guns, rigging, tackle, apparel, furniture and loadings, to some convenient port or ports of the United Colonies, that proceedings may thereupon be had in due form before the courts which are or shall be there appointed to hear and determine causes civil and maritime.

4. You or one of your chief officers shall bring or send the master and pilot, and one or more principal person or persons of the company of every ship or vessel by you taken, as soon after the capture as may be, to the judge or judges of such court as aforesaid, to be examined upon oath, and make answer to the interrogatories which may be propounded touching the interest or property of the ship or vessel and her lading, and at the same time you shall deliver or cause to be delivered to the judge or judges, all passes, sea-briefs, charter-parties, bills of lading, cockets, letters, and other documents and writings found on board, proving the said papers by the affidavit of yourself or of some other person present at the capture, to be produced as they were received, without fraud, addition, subduction or embezzlement.

5. You shall keep and preserve every ship and vessel and cargo by you taken, until they shall by sentence of a court properly authorized, be adjudged lawful prizes, not selling, spoiling, wasting, or diminishing the same, or breaking the bulk thereof, nor suffering any such thing to be done.

—New-Jersey Gazette, No. 10, Feb. 4, 1778.

London, October 4. Copy of a letter from lieutenant-general Sir Henry Clinton, to Gen. Sir William Howe, dated Kingsbridge, Sept, 23, 1777.

"In the last letter which I had the honour of writing to your excellency of the 6th of this month, I mentioned my intention of making an incursion into Jersey; the object of which was to make a small diversion in favour of both armies, at what, I supposed, a critical time; having learnt by rebel accounts that you had landed on Elk-river.

My principal motive was, if possible, to attempt a stroke against any detached corps of the enemy, if one offered, or, if not, to collect a considerable number of cattle, which would at the same time prove a seasonable refreshment to the troops, and deprive the enemy of resources which I understood they much depended upon, and finally to retire with our body, by the only road practicable with those embarrassments, to re-embark, return to our camp, or proceed to some other expedition if any thing presented itself.

All the arrangements being settled, the landing was made at the four following places, viz., at Elizabeth-town-point by brigadier general Campbell, with the 7th, 26th and 52d regiments, Anspach and Waldeck grenadiers, and 300 provincials.

At Schuyler's-ferry by captain Drummond with two pieces of cannon, 250 recruits of the 71st regiment, and some convalescents.

At Fort Lee by major-general Vaughan, with captain Emmerick's chasseurs, five companies of grenadiers and light infantry, the 57th, 63d, and prince Charles's regiment, and five pieces of very light artillery.

And at Tapan by lieutenant-colonel Campbell with 200 provincials, and 40 marines.

The corps which landed at Elizabeth-town-point to proceed towards Newark, driving cattle, disarming the inhabitants, and if it met with the enemy in any force, so as to prevent its proceeding to Aquakinack, its retreat over the Passaic-river was secured by a small corps with cannon on the heights of Schuyler, who had landed at Schuyler's-ferry, and were aportee to take possession of the high grounds which command the environs of Newark, &c. If the Elizabeth-town corps continued its march to Aquakinack, it was there received by the corps which had landed at Fort Lee, and marched by Newbridge, Hackinsack and Slatterdam, where it was in a situation to fulfil that object. A post was left at Hackinsack, and I ordered general Vaughan to leave one battalion and two pieces of cannon at Newbridge, to cover that very important pass. Lieutenant-colonel Campbell, who had landed at Tapan, to remain there, and if pressed to fall back on Newbridge; this, however, subject to any alterations that general Vaughan should think necessary to make. Finding that brigadier-general Campbell had landed on Friday the 12th about 4 o'clock in the morning, without opposition, I then went by Newark-bay to Schuyler's landing on Hackinsack-river. The cannon were that instant landed, and I ordered them to proceed, through the cedar swamp, to the high grounds near Schuyler's house, where captain Sutherland, with 250 men had been for some time. Finding it necessary to amuse the enemy, who being informed of the landing at Elizabeth-town-point, were retiring with their cattle, the troops were ordered to shew themselves, and about noon the enemy were much increased in number, and had got one piece of cannon. They had all the boats on their side of the river. Firing of musquetry and cannon continued the whole day with little or no loss on either side. Much loose firing was heard beyond Newark, and at night we had a private report that general Campbell had taken possession of that town. I sent immediately to tell him our situation, but soon afterwards, by the noise of cattle driving and march of troops, found he had continued his route, was opposite to us, and on his way to Aquakinack. I judged it best to order him to halt till morning. At day-break the rebels appeared in some force, and about noon they had three pieces of cannon in battery on their side of the Ravine. I went over to observe them, and had every reason to suppose, from their clothing and artillery, that they were reinforced by what is called continental troops. To try their countenance, and give no opportunity to the provincials, I ordered Buskirk's¹ battalion to march through a corn field, with an intention of taking in flank a body of the rebels posted behind a stone-wall, and which it would have been difficult to have removed by a front attack. The regiment marched with great spirit, and their march, with some little movement to favour it, obliged the rebels to quit without a shot. I then repassed the river, desiring general Campbell to lose no opportunity of giving them a brush, and, if possible, of taking the cannon.

In the evening the rebels retired, as we supposed, to the neighbouring woods, and I waited only to hear of the arrival of a squadron of cavalry, which I had ordered to join general Vaughan from Paulus-hook,² to settle a plan in which part of general Vaughan's corps might co-operate with general Campbell's in endeavoring to surround them. In the meantime I received a letter from general Vaughan, acquainting me, that, by information from his patrols, the rebels were assembling in great force at the Clove. This intelligence, and their leaving us so suddenly, gave me some suspicion of their intention, and made it necessary for me to assemble our little army as soon as possible, occupy Newbridge in some force, and send lieutenant-colonel Campbell from Newbridge towards Tapan, to observe their motions in that quarter.

Gen. Campbell began his march at day-break and was not followed. I ordered the small corps on the Heights of Schuyler, reinforced with two companies of grenadiers, to fall back and cover the entry of the defile; and when the cattle we had got on that side had passed the river, they were to pass also, and remain with their cannon on the other side.

I then went to general Vaughan at Slatterdam, and having assembled the little army and the cattle, I ordered him to march to Newbridge, and general Campbell towards Hackinsack.

The whole assembled at Newbridge on the 15th, and then hearing nothing of the Enemy, having collected our cattle, the soldiers without tents or blankets, and the weather threatening, I thought it advisable to fall back. I accordingly ordered general Campbell to continue his march to English neighbourhood, taking with him the cattle, amounting to 400 head, including 20 milch cows for the use of the hospital. (which was all I would suffer to be taken from the inhabitants) 400 sheep, and a few horses.

On the 16th general Campbell marched to Bergen point, where he embarked for Staten-island and general Vaughan to Fort Lee, not followed by a single man, where he repassed the North-river, and the whole returned to their former stations by two o'clock.

I wish upon this occasion to express the very great assistance I have received from the navy; indeed I have experienced it in every instance: but the excellent arrangement of the boats in this affair, and the secrecy with which every thing was conducted, demand my particular acknowledgment.

Your excellency will permit me to give the highest commendation to the regularity of the troops, both British, foreign, and provincials, during this excursion. Their strict attention to discipline did them and their officers great credit.

Total of the killed, wounded, prisoners, and missing of the following corps during an excursion to Jersey from the 12th to the 16th of September.

Total, 8 rank and file killed; 1 lieutenant, 17 rank and file wounded; 1 drummer, 9 rank and file, missing; 5 rank and file taken prisoners.

Copy of a letter from brigadier-general Campbell, to Sir Henry Clinton, dated headquarters, Staten-island, August 23, 1777.

Sir,

I had the honour of informing you yesterday morning of a descent made by the rebels on this island, and of my being on my march with the 52d regiment of British and 3d regiment of Waldeck, with two field pieces to each battalion, to reconnoitre, and, if possible, to attack them. I am sorry now to add, that the enemy effected a total surprize of two battalions of the Jersey provincials, which occasioned nearly the whole loss sustained by his Majesty's troops, as will appear by the inclosed return.

Soon after I wrote, I had intelligence that the enemy was moving towards Richmond,¹ with intention (as I conjectured) of occupying the adjacent heights, and thereby be enabled to cut off the retreat of three provincial regiments stationed beyond that village, which determined me to move forward to prevent the sacrifice of that corps; but a messenger soon after arrived from lieutenant-colonel Dongan,² with information that an attack had likewise been made on the west part of the island; that lieutenant colonel Lawrence³ and a good many of his corps had been made prisoners; but that he, and lieutenant-colonel Allan,⁴ and their battalions, with a few of Lawrence's that had joined them, had taken possession of some works formerly thrown up by the rebels near Prince's-bay, where they should be able to defend themselves until supported, or that boats should arrive to carry them off. This strengthening me in my former resolution, I advanced on the footsteps of the enemy, and proceeded without the least interruption to the village of Richmond, where I was obliged to halt to bring up the rear, and to refresh the troops, who were even at this time very much fatigued from excessive heat. From this place brigadier general Skinner⁵ was directed to send repeated expresses to inform

² Edward Vaughan Dongan, youngest son of Walter Dongan, of Staten Island. Severely wounded in this skirmish, he died soon after in his 29th year.

col Dongan of my approach, and desiring him to endeavour a junction. I had proceeded but a short way beyond Richmond, when I was informed that the rebels had reached the Old Blazing-Star,¹ and were using the greatest diligence in transporting their troops to the Jersey shore. At this very instant an officer arrived from colonel Dongan that he was a little more than at a mile's distance on his way to join me: whereupon I sent him orders to turn towards the enemy, and to attack whatever body he could come up with, and I was following with all expedition, and would immediately support him. He obeyed my orders with spirit, bravery, and resolution, and engaged the rear for near half an hour, when the 52d regiment coming up, exchanging some shots, and moving to take them in flank, and the cannon having by this time begun to play upon their boats, about 150 surrendered themselves prisoners to lieutenant-colonel Campbell of the 52d regiment, and the remainder of nearly the same number, retreated towards the extremity of the island opposite Amboy, of which last number I have since learned was brigadier-general de Bore; and reports render it still doubtful whether he has as yet made his escape from off the island; however, the troops were by this time so much fatigued that I found it altogether impossible to pursue them; and I fear the greater part, if not the whole, found means to cross over near Amboy.

The troops lay for that night under arms, and this morning I detached the greater part of general Skinner's brigade towards Amboy, and proceeded with the regular troops on my return. A party was this day also ordered to bring off the enemy's boats under the cover of a piece of cannon, which was effected without any loss.

I must not forget to mention that colonel Buskirk's battalion was early in the day ordered to attack a party left to cover the enemy's boats, which they did with charge of bayonet, and obliged to retreat to the Jersey shore.

By prisoners reports and from an inclosed order found in general Smallwood's major of brigade's pocket, who was killed, it appears that this attack was carried on by select and chosen troops, and formed from three brigades. . . . Sullivan's, Smallwood's, and de Bore's, and headed by their respective generals, besides Dayton's and Ogden's battalions. We have taken in all 250 prisoners, among whom are 1 lieutenant-colonel, 3 majors, 2 captains, and 15 inferior officers. Their loss in killed cannot be ascertained, but must have been considerable.

I cannot do too much justice to the bravery and spirit of the troops. Both officers and men seemed only anxious to engage, and emulous who should be foremost in the race of glory, and I must add, that the several commanding officers did justice to the ardour of their troops, which they knew to temper with judgment and conduct. For further particulars I refer you to brigade major Campbell, who was present at the whole affair, and charged with the delivery of this. I have, &c

New-York, February 9. Brower the Person who last Week murdered Mr. John Richards, of New-Barbadoes Neck, has, from the admirable Measures concerted for that Purpose, been secured, and was on Thursday Afternoon lodged in the Custody of the Provost Guard.

Upon examining into the Means used by the four intrepid and loyal Persons, who voluntarily undertook to apprehend the aforesaid Brower, and brought him to Town, it was found they had endured inexpressible Anxiety and Fatigue; to reward such brave and fortunate Exertions, a Subscription is opened at Mr. Rivington's and Mr. Gainé's for collecting the Contributions of those who have a generous Sensibility of their spirited Enterprize.—New York Gazette and Weekly Mercury, February 9, 1778.

We hear, that Colonel William Allen's regiment of Pennsylvania royalists, is entirely broken up, and what few men were deluded into so infamous a service as that of taking arms against their native country, have been incorporated into other regiments.

On the 29th ult. Major Goetschius, who commands a party of rangers in Bergen county, had despatched John Leshier¹ and Abraham Brower, two of his men, to reconnoitre the enemy's picket at Paulus-Hook. As they lay in ambush at *Prior's mill, within sight of the enemy's centry, they were passed by John Richard with a Negro man belonging to himself, and another to Cornelius Van Vorst, upon a Waggon. John Richard had a pass from Col. Turnbull to go to Bergen. Maj. Goetschius's men thought it their Duty to carry Mr. Richard and the two negroes to their commanding officer for examination. Upon the road, about six miles from the place where they were taken, Mr. Richard and his negro took hold of Leshier's musket, (they being in the waggon, and Brower at a little distance on horseback) with design, as Leshier thought, to kill him. Upon this he called to Brower to come to his assistance. As Brower came up, the negro took hold of Leshier, and Richard turned to seize Brower—but Brower, to prevent him, shot him dead on the spot, and the negroes were carried to Maj. Goetschius's.

For the NEW-JERSEY GAZETTE.

ANNOTATIONS upon his most gracious Majesty of most gracious Great-Britain's most gracious speech.

IT is a great satisfaction to me that I can have recourse to the wisdom and support of my parliament in this conjuncture—

No doubt it is a satisfaction to your Majesty, to be able to apply for each, to those who must support you in measures in which themselves are accomplices; and who are too dependent upon you to refuse any of your requisitions. The more money they give you, Sir, the more offices you give them; and this old trick of one good turn's deserving another, has more than half ruined the nation already.

When the rebellion in North-America demands our most serious attention.

How wonderful, that his Majesty begins to think the reduction of America a serious matter! Had he and his parliament considered at all, they would have thought it a serious matter when they first began it. But they wanted, it seems, at least three years, to discover that the enslaving of three millions of people was a serious undertaking. Notable geniusses to govern three kingdoms and the western world into the bargain, who require three years of blood and slaughter, desolation and havoc, to make them serious.

The powers which you have intrusted me with, I have faithfully exerted—

What powers his Majesty was intrusted with I know not. But the powers he has exerted, have been the powers of breaking his oath, and violating all laws, divine and human; and if he undertook to suppress the revolt, he has not executed his trust, for that he has not done.

But I am persuaded that you will see the necessity of preparing for such farther operations as the contingencies of the war, and the obstinacy of the rebels, may render expedient—

What, Sir, a necessity for farther preparations, when General Gâge was to have done the business with four regiments? Why don't you order the invincible Grant to strike a terror thro' the whole Continent with a file of musqueteers?

And if I should have occasion to encrease them, by contracting new engagements—

Worse and worse! What, increase your troops to beat an undisciplined militia, after having imported thirty-five thousand already! And increase them you certainly must, or quit your purpose with infamy. But whence to procure the augmentation? aye, that's the question—the Prince of Hesse will tell you, bye der donder, ich hebber nix meer.

I have received repeated assurances from foreign powers of their pacific dispositions.

And does your Majesty believe those assurances? Out of your own mouth I will prove that you do not—For,

But at the time when the armaments in the ports of France and Spain continue—to confirm, I suppose, the assurances of their pacific disposition. What, all the powers of Europe pacific, and France and Spain continuing their hostile preparations! For shame, sir, bastille your speech-maker, for not putting his contradictions at a greater distance than that of two sentences.

I will always be a faithful guardian of the honour of the crown of Great-Britain.

A very proper keeper of what has been lost ever since the 25th of October, 1760, the very day that your Majesty ascended the throne!

The various services I have mentioned to you will unavoidably require large supplies.

As true a word as ever was spoken; and larger supplies than your parliament can furnish. Have you heard, Sir, that your troops have already been obliged to take Pennsylvania currency; and that when they cannot rob, you cannot pay?

I will steadily pursue the measures in which we are engaged for the re-establishment of that subordination, &c.

How long your Majesty intends to pursue, is best known to yourself—But I am confident you must run much faster than you have ever yet done, or you will not overtake it. By your constitutional subordination we understand a most tyrannical domination, which we have long since bequeathed to your loyal subjects of Great-Britain, whom you had previously prepared to relish that kind of a legacy.

But I shall ever be watchful for an opportunity of putting a stop to the effusion of the blood of my subjects, and the calamities which are inseparable from a state of war.

Ring the bells! Ring the bells backward! To church, all hands to church; for Nero is to give us a sermon against murder, and Jonathan Wilde an exhortation to abstain from robbery!

And I still hope that the deluded and unhappy multitude will return to their allegiance—

And when the sky falls we shall catch larks.—And so the late insignificant faction is now multiplied to a multitude. Indeed, did you but know, Sir, what a multitude it is, you would as soon think of levelling Mount AEtna, as of conquering America. But they are not deluded, Sir. They knew that you had projected their slavery; and they will not be enslaved. If there be any delusion in the case, it is the British nation that is deluded, and it is deluded by you, and yourself are deluded by a set of villains, who expected to have divided our estates upon the success of your arms. Allegiance we owe you none. Then, Sir, did we show our allegiance when we lay prostrate at your throne, supplicating for the continuation of those liberties, which God and nature and the law had given us; and when you spurned us from it.

That the remembrance of what they once enjoyed, the regret of what they have lost, and the feelings of what they now suffer under the tyranny of their leaders, will rekindle in their hearts a spirit of loyalty to their sovereign, and of their attachment to their mother country.

If you will be pleased, Sir, to allow yourself a moment's reflection, you will find they will have lost nothing that was worth keeping. They have lost nothing but the pleasure of being oppressed under colour of law; and of enriching myriads of harpies of your appointment, and appointed for the express purpose of fleecing them, and of lavishing the fruits of their toil and labour in British luxury and riot.—Is this a loss to be regretted? If it is, I know who will regret it. Their feelings indeed are very great, and for them you must answer at that awful bar, where your royalty will but aggravate your condemnation. As to the tyranny of their leaders, it is indeed so gross and thread-bare an absurdity, that I would advise your Majesty to drop it for the future for the sake of its vulgarity. In this contest, the people in reality had no leaders. They fled, spontaneously and self-led, to extinguish the common fire; and for conducting with greater regularity, the measures which you compel them to adopt, they afterwards appointed the proper officers. Those officers, (which to serve your purpose, you call leaders) cannot tyrannize over them, because they are constituted by the people, and by them removeable. Nor will any consideration rekindle in their hearts a spirit of loyalty to their former sovereign. That flame, Sir, and an ardent one it was, and more ardent than that of your subjects in Britain, you have extinguished, totally extinguished, with torrents of blood, not leaving a single spark to light up the antient blaze. And as for their mother country—America, Sir, is our mother country, and Great-Britain, making the most of the figure, could never claim to be more than our grand mother, and that she has been a most unnatural one is written in such characters of blood as none of your flimsy coaxings will ever obliterate.

And that they will enable me with the concurrence and support of my parliament to accomplish, &c.

And so we are to assist the parliament, it seems, in effecting our own bondage. Pray, Sir, do not flatter yourself with so vain an imagination. We have too great a reverence for the instructions of our mother, to follow the insidious advice of our grand-mother, so evidently calculated for our destruction.

HORTENTIUS.

—New-Jersey Gazette. No. 11, Feb. 11, 1778.

BURLINGTON, Feb. 18.

Wednesday last the GENERAL ASSEMBLY of this State met at Trenton, agreeable to adjournment.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman of character at Newark, dated February 7, 1778.

“Two persons came out of New-York the 5th instant, who informs us, there was great uneasiness in that city among the Tories, on account of an exceeding great mob in London, which with much difficulty after a number of days was quelled. The mob arose partly on account of the hot press in England, and partly because the manufacturers were out of employment and in want of bread. They were enraged at administration as the cause of the American war, which was the source of all their distresses, and their cry was “No Scotch counsels, no tyrannick measures.” They pulled down the houses of the archfiend Bute, and his second North, and insulted a number of the king’s friends and their tools.—But these things are only the beginning of sorrow to Britain.”

A correspondent informs us that “one William Pace of Schoolie’s Mountain, and Thomas Van Camp of Somerset county, both bound for Staten-Island, the latter with a quantity of flour, and the former with four quarters of beef which had been stall-fed two years, and was intended for a British General, were apprehended and brought before the president and council of safety the 28th of January last.—It not fully appearing to the Board that their respective cargoes were to have been carried into the enemy’s lines, which would have been high treason, Van Camp was adjudged to forfeit his flour, and to pay the fine prescribed by law for asking more than the regulated price, and also the fine for asking a higher price in continental currency than in specie; and Pace to forfeit his fat beef and to pay the fine for asking for it more than the regulated price, and both being bound over, they were dismissed—

“Evidence being produced the day after, that one Jacob Fitz Randolph, who lives at the Blazing Star, had met them at Spanktown,¹ and engaged to take their cargoes if they would bring them to his house, and to convey them to Staten-Island as soon as the ice would permit; the said Pace and Fitz Randolph have since been committed to gaol for procuring provisions for the enemy, and as dangerous to the present government; and a warrant is issued to apprehend the said Van Camp.”

We are further informed, that Congress, in a resolution dated the third of December last, recommended to the Legislatures of the United States, forthwith to enact laws, “requiring all persons within their respective States who may be possessed of any bills of credit struck under the sanction and authority of the King of Great-Britain on or before the 19th day of April 1775, forthwith to deliver in the same to a commissioner or commissioners for that purpose to be appointed in each county of the respective States, authorising each commissioner or commissioners to give in exchange for any sum so paid in continental money or bills of credit of their respective States; and to declare in the laws so enacted, that all bills of credit under the description above-mentioned, which shall not be so delivered in within such reasonable time as the respective States shall for such purpose limit, shall thenceforth become utterly irredeemable.”

WHEREAS sundry persons, upon various pretences, have made a practice of going from this city and county into the city of Philadelphia, whereby much injury has and still may accrue to the State of New-Jersey contrary to the tenor of an act of assembly of said state strictly prohibiting any intercourse with the city whilst in the possession of the enemy: This is therefore to give notice that the magistrates of said county are determined to put in execution the aforesaid law with the utmost rigour; and if any person or persons, be their pretences what they may, shall be detected in an attempt to go into the city of Philadelphia, or shall go into and return again from said city, they may depend upon incurring the penalties in said law specified, unless such person or persons can produce a pass or license from His Excellency General Washington, or some other person authorised by law for so doing.

THOUGHTS on bringing to a speedy and happy end the present war.

AMONG the numerous and pleasing advantages arising from a republican government, the people not only enjoy the perfect and unrestrained powers of legislation and taxation by representatives freely chosen among themselves, but each individual ever retains the unalienable right of instructing his representatives, and suggesting to them at all times every expedient he may judge most for the public good.—The sentiments published under the signature of Adolphus in the New-Jersey Gazette (Numb. 8)² gave pleasure to thousands—and these alone immediately executed are likely to bring to a speedy and happy conclusions the present war. His were the private thoughts of multitudes respecting our publick affairs, wherefore I was highly delighted with the publication of them.—And as his plan respects the United States in general, I take the liberty of seconding his motions and supporting his proposals with a particular application of the same to the State of New-Jersey.

² Printed January 21st, 1778. The article was dated "Pennsylvania," and was mainly a plea for filling up the Continental Regiments.

enabled early in the season to take the field with an army of fifty or sixty thousand men, depend upon it the British army, with all the reinforcement they can obtain, will not venture from their garrisons and strong-holds. Britain will say, her officers will say, and her venal administration will say, "It is in vain to contend with these Americans, for instead of becoming weaker, they grow stronger and more powerful: We may ruin ourselves, but we shall never be able to subjugate them."—But, if we idle away this winter, this infinitely important winter, in a lethargic security,¹ and have only a small army in the field next summer, they will apprehend from our supineness that we are weakened indeed, and we shall have a laborious and bloody campaign like the last, and perhaps less successful. Thus at the end of another year we shall be as far in prospect from peace as we are now.—Whereas in the spring if we parade before them our army having its requirements completely filled with effective men, which will then be but a small exertion of the real strength of these states, it will strike such a terror into England and her troops, pour such confusion into their counsels, will so baffle their projects, and turn to vanity their boasted promises, that they will in all probability immediately enter upon measures for negotiating a peace.—

As militia substitution has indeed greatly injured the recruiting our army, there is no way remains for completing our regiments but by drafting men. It will not take more than a tenth man of the militia of New-Jersey to furnish out our compliment. And what is it for every company of fifty men to turn out five for the service? Nothing of equal importance can be so easily accomplished.—Let a law be passed for drafting the men for nine months; their service commencing the first of April, and ending the last of December, when the campaign will surely be over. Let these drafts have the same quantity of cloathing, which is allowed a soldier for a whole year.

Let them have a reasonable and handsome bounty granted. Let each militia company meet together, and consider as every tenth man of them is to be drafted, it is best to collect a sum of money for those in the company who will offer their service. And upon such encouragements as these, there will be a sufficient number of hearty young men, who can be well spared, that will present themselves. The time of service will be short, the inducements great, and the cause is glorious.—But if there are any companies that do not choose this method, but will take their chance of a lot, then those on whom the lot falls, and are averse to the military employment, will easily procure substitutes in their places.—Thus our regiments will be filled, and filled with volunteers, and these volunteers such as are already well acquainted with military duty; so that as soon as they take the field they will not be regiments of raw recruits, but really veteran soldiers. For there are very few of this class of people among us, who have not been in the service a great part of their time these two years past, and have not been in numerous skirmishes and actions.

Some such plan as this being immediately adopted, and vigorously executed, will soon put an end to the war, and it will probably be ended without the further effusion of blood; and the blessings, the important blessings of peace and liberty secured unto us as the reward of our exertions. Had these measures been entered upon last winter, we have every reason to believe, under the smiles of Heaven, the war would have been over. But through our negligence we must now prepare for another campaign. Wherefore let us do it, as people who are awake and in earnest.—Remember the emissaries of Britain, and the Tories of America, will not be idle this winter, and while they are with the utmost vigilance collecting their strength to make their last effort next season, they will not relax in their endeavours to intimidate some, and lull to security others, by every misrepresentation and falsehood, in devising which, if they have not the most happy, they have the most fruitful inventions, so that nothing vigorously may be done either by Congress or the respective Legislatures. As there are baits for every fish, so lies will be variegated to delude persons of every make.—One while you will hear of hosts of Russians; another of the occult manœuvres of Prussia; then we shall be entertained with rebellions in Ireland; reconciliation, if we renounce independency; proposals for cessation of arms by Howe; peace in the spring, &c.—But if we really desire peace, and really wish to prevent the shedding more blood, let us hearken to none of these delusive tales; for be assured, under all these pretences, the enemy will be straining every nerve to crush us the ensuing year. Wherefore, let us not be fascinated by tory enchantments, but rouse like men, like men of wisdom, like men of valour, who abhor an ignominious slavery, and who fight for the richest blessings for ourselves and for millions unborn.—

Let the worthy and honourable Legislature of this State imitate the generous example set by the noble and spirited Virginians, and thus the zeal of exertion being propagated from state to state, the mighty strength of America, when displaying itself but a little, will cause to vanish the machinations of tyranny, rescue us at once from the terror of our enemies, secure our property, and establish a glorious peace, and the indefeasible rights of human kind upon a firm and lasting foundation.

Philadelphia, February 4. Yesterday a number of the virtuous inhabitants of New-Jersey, tired of the oppression of their new government, gave a proof of their loyalty and attachment to his Majesty, by seizing the person of one WILSON, Collector of the substitute fines in that province, and bringing him in to the British Head Quarters:—This example, it is hoped, will be followed by the injured and distressed people of Pennsylvania and New-Jersey, as they cannot doubt but their loyalty will meet with every reasonable encouragement.

New-York, February 23. We hear that the general Opinion of the Rebels in many Parts of New-Jersey is, that Peace is not far distant between Great-Britain and her Colonies.—New York Gazette and Weekly Mercury, February 23, 1778.

To the PRINTER of the NEW-JERSEY GAZETTE.

SIR

The reasons advanced in the enclosed letter, having fully convinced me of the absurdity of a certain measure, much talked of in some places of late; and as they might perhaps if handed to the public, have the like good effect upon others, I cannot but wish you to give the letter at large a place in your paper. Its not having been designed for the public eye, will, I presume, sufficiently apologize for any little inaccuracies that may be observed by the curious.

The legislation to which reference was made was entitled "An Act to raise a Fund by Taxation for discharging the Debts and defraying the necessary Expenses of the State of New Jersey," and was introduced early in November, 1777. Upon the 18th of that month the House spent the entire day in the discussion of the bill. The measure was finally passed March 26th, 1778. The objections made by the correspondent do not appear to have entirely influenced the members of the Legislature. It is provided in the statute that all mortgages, bonds, bills and notes upon interest deemed recoverable and to be of value, owing to inhabitants of New Jersey from any person or persons in the United States, shall be valued at one-thirtieth part of the principal thereof, including all moneys at interest under the care of executors, guardians and others acting as trustees. Exemptions were made in case of certificates for moneys lent the United States. "AND PROVIDED, ALSO, That if any Inhabitant of this State pays Interest for a Part or the Whole of the Sum, he receives Interest for, then and in that Case he shall not be rated or assessed for any larger Sum than the Sum he receives Interest for. exceeds the Sum he pays Interest for." See "Votes and Proceedings of the General Assembly of the State of New Jersey," October 28th, 1777, to October 8th, 1778, 2d Session; also, Laws of New Jersey, Chapter XXIII., 1778.

ESTEEMED FRIEND

YOUR favour of the 20th of last month I just now received, and am much pleased with your clear and circumstantial account of the state of our affairs; and also with your remarks upon some of the late proceedings of government. In the sequel, you are pleased to ask me, what objections I have to taxing bonds, bills, and other specialties, drawing interest? To give you a full answer to this question, would require more time than I can at present spare. I will, however, endeavour to send you a few of my objections in a short way.

First. The measure appears to me to be exceptionable, in that it would probably be attended with effects injurious to this State in settling our quota of taxes with the other States. The computed wealth of each State, may, hereafter, if not in the first instance, be the rule whereby to fix and regulate its quota; and as that will probably be taken from the assessors duplicates, where bonds and bills (which are really no part of the wealth of any country, farther than the value of the paper and parchment extends) to be inserted in our duplicates, as part of our property, it might be a means of raising the quota of the state far beyond what it ought to be.

But lest you should doubt the reality of what I have said respecting bonds and bills being no part of the wealth of a country; I will state a case, that perhaps will set it in a clear light. Let us suppose New-Jersey to be, at this time, worth just one million sterling; that the present proprietors sell it for that sum, to such of the community as have no property, and take their bonds and bills for the money. Here you see bonds and bills would take place for a million of money, without increasing the wealth of the state one farthing: New-Jersey would still remain to be worth but just one million. Which very plainly shows, as I said before, that bonds and bills are no part of the wealth of a country; nor does it less plainly show how absurd it would be to give them a place in our duplicates.

2dly. I object to the measure as impracticable. Bonds and bills, like cash, are usually kept secret. Some people perhaps would render an account of all they have, others of part, and some of none. And which way, let me ask, should we ever get rid of this difficulty—of this total uncertainty—so as to render the measure with any tolerable face of justice practicable? For my part I see no way: unless each assessor should be obliged to examine upon oath or affirmation, every person within his precinct, whenever a new assessment is made, respecting the bonds and bills he or she may then have. Nor indeed would this (though a curious piece of business) be very likely to answer the end. For if men can hardly swear the truth between neighbour and neighbour, where they are at all connected with either side, much less would they be likely to do it between themselves and the publick: and such frequent and general swearing, would naturally render an oath more and more familiar, and, in proportion, diminish the force of the obligation. In short, I fear the constant and strong temptation to perjury, that would attend this kind of swearing, would so far get the better of human virtue, as to render an oath of little or no signification. Perjury, like other crimes, would seem to lose its criminality in proportion as it would become fashionable.

"Vice is a monster of so frightful mien,
 "As, to be hated, needs but to be seen :
 "Yet seen too oft, familiar with her face,
 "We first endure, then pity, then embrace."

It might be observed too, that putting men upon their oaths in cases where their own interest is at stake, would be repugnant to one of the oldest and most approved maxims of our law. But then perhaps old maxims may not be worth our notice. For some of us, without one jot of experience in the business of legislation, and with but very little knowledge of the law, and less of politics, are so much wiser than our predecessors, either here or in Britain, notwithstanding their great experience in legislative affairs, their diligent researches after political knowledge, and the purest principles and theory of civil government, as to be able to form for ourselves maxims far superior to theirs, and to bring into existence schemes equally new and admirable.

It should ever be an invariable rule to make nothing taxable but what is visible: and the moment we quit this ground, we step into the dark, ridiculously to grope after what we can never obtain.

The parliament of Britain have long been at their wits end for ways and means whereby to raise supplies of cash adequate to the demands of the state: and yet they have never, in any one instance, undertaken to tax bonds, bills or mortgages. Our assemblies too have ever avoided the measure. But then what is that to us? We say they were all wrong. Are we sure that we are right? He who quits the old beaten way, should first take care to be well advised of a better. There is frequently more in old ways to recommend them, than we are at first aware of. Hence custom is said to be an argument of right: and this argument is directly against us. Custom too, is an apology for doing wrong. But if we should depart from the old ground, or mode of taxation, what apology will there be found for us, in case that should prove to be wrong?

People are generally best satisfied with what they have been most used to. It is not sufficient that you lay no greater burden upon a man than he has been accustomed to bear: You must lay it upon the very same shoulder that he has been used to carry it upon; otherwise he will feel himself uneasy and perhaps give you trouble.

We may think our leaders have all hitherto gone wrong: and we may have honest intentions to rectify their errors: but then don't let us be too hasty in making the attempt. A second thought frequently corrects the first; and this year's experience may render us much more capable of rectifying the errors of our ancestors, than at present we are; or it may possibly convince us, that they have left us none to rectify. It often happens that we think others err, merely because we have not judgment sufficient to discover the reason and rectitude of their conduct. And when this is the case, time, and a dispassionate inquiry, usually prove the best remedies.

3dly. I object to the measure as unjust. It would raise a two-fold tax upon property. Suppose, for instance, A to have a farm worth one thousand pounds, and no other estate; that B, who has no estate, purchases the farm of A for the sum mentioned, and gives him a bond for the money, payable with interest from the day of purchase. Here, 'tis plain, that A and B, taken together, would have but one thousand pounds worth of property; yet according to our scheme, they must be taxed as tho' they had two—B for the farm, and A for its value. A most glaring piece of iniquity! iniquity however that attends the measure, trace it where you will. For if B had borrowed a thousand pounds of A, and laid it out in a farm, or other taxable property, the case would have been just the same—B must have paid tax for the property, and A for its value.

As the property is ever in the hands of the borrower, there, and there only, it can with propriety be taxed. And if upon a general scale, interest is so high that the borrower can not afford to pay the tax, let it be reduced; or let him be authorized to deduct the tax out of the interest when he pays it. Either of these ways would be practicable and just; but the former, perhaps, would be much the most eligible. Our duplicates might then remain as they are—they would not exhibit an exaggerated idea of our wealth—they would not be disgraced by partial accounts of bonds and bills, mere imaginary property; nor would our assessors be degraded by being turned into so many legal pimps—by being compelled to pry into people's private and secret concerns - - - to inquire after their bonds and bills, debts and credits; matters that the publick in reality have no right to meddle with; and which genuine pimps alone would care to inquire after. Men of honour and delicate feelings would disdain the ungracious task. They would blush to ask the questions, and they would scorn to give the answers.

I admire the promoters of this curious scheme have never, in their great zeal for justice and impartial dealing, thought of setting on foot a similar one with regard to landlords and tenants. Surely it would be as just to tax both landlord and tenant for the property in the hands of the tenant, as to tax the borrower and lender of money for the property in the hands of the borrower. If it would be unjust to levy a two-fold tax in the former case, why not in the latter? Some indeed say they are for the better, because it would lessen the tax upon the rest of the community. (O how merciful!) But would not the former also? And were we to tax red hair and long noses, it would have just the same effect; and yet I suppose nobody ever dreamt of considering them as proper objects of taxation.

You lend me, on easy terms (which the legal terms are ever to be supposed to be) your money to make an estate with. Now the question is, whether you, or I, ought to pay tax for this money, whilst I possess it? For that we should both pay tax for it, is really a proposition too ridiculous to deserve any serious attention. And were you to ask me the question, I am sure I should be ashamed to answer, that you ought to pay the tax. I may very well be supposed to derive a much greater profit from the money than you will whilst it remains in my hands: And upon this supposition, your paying tax for it must be the height of injustice. But really I see no injustice in my paying tax for it, whilst I possess it with a view of gain; even though the benefit I derive from it, should not be equal to yours. For upon what principle of equity can I expect to have your property on equal terms of advantage with you? If you risk your money in my hands upon such terms, as to enable me to pay tax for it, and at the same time to increase my estate faster by the use of it, than I otherwise could have done, with the same care and industry, I am clearly beholden to you for that extraordinary gain. And why the profit I derive from your money, should exceed, or equal yours, in order to render it just for me to pay the tax, I cannot conceive; though I know it is a doctrine held forth by some. If by the utmost stretch of industry and care, I can now clear but fifty pounds a year, and by your lending me one thousand pounds, at seven per cent. per annum, taxable in my hands, I am enabled to clear fifty pounds a year more; am I to quarrel with the contract subsisting between you and me as hard or unjust, because the gain I derive from your property is not equal to yours? Surely if your money enables me to double my income, without any additional fatigue of body or mind, I ought to think myself exceedingly well dealt by, and greatly obliged to you for risking it in my hands. And was I to ask you to pay tax for it whilst I possess it, it would certainly evidence a degree of meanness, that you would most heartily despise. But then perhaps what would be mean—what would be despicable in an individual to ask, may well enough become a legislature to enforce.

The property being universally taxable in the hands of the borrower, it is to be supposed that all legislatures, whoever undertook to regulate the interest of money, would naturally regulate it accordingly --- that they would fix it so low as to enable the borrower to pay the tax. And this being done, how barefacedly unjust would it be still to compel the lender to pay it? or indeed to pay any tax at all for the money lent? Surely there is not a man of sense and justice, but what would blush at the attempt.

4thly. I object to the measure on account of the present great depreciation of cash. Whatever money might have been heretofore, it is certainly now so fallen in value, as to be utterly unable to bear a tax. Great numbers of the inhabitants of this state, who depend chiefly upon the interest of their money for support, know not, at this hour, which way to get bread to eat, and cloaths to wear. And shall government add to their distress, by saddling them with a burden equally oppressive and unpresidented: A burden not only unjust in its nature, but which they are by no means able to bear? Those indeed who have money at interest, and yet are in some kind of profitable business, as farmers, merchants, mechanicks, &c. may perhaps, from the great gain they derive from their respective employments, be able to bear the tax with some degree of ease; but among those who may more properly be called the monied part of the community, from their being chiefly supported by the interest of their money, I believe there are but few, very few, but what would feel it as a grievous oppression. If when every hundred pounds they had would bring them seven per cent per annum, and the necessaries of life were not half as dear as they now are, they could but just bring the year about; it is easy to conceive, that they must now be reduced to the greatest difficulty, and that a small additional burden would be exceedingly hard to bear. And that there are great numbers in such a situation cannot be doubted. Nor can it be doubted, by any who have the feelings of humanity, or are endowed with the common principles of justice, but that their case demands relief from government, rather than oppression. Especially when we consider, that many among them are covered with grey hairs—are persons who have spent the prime of their days in the virtuous discharge of their several duties, as christians and fellow citizens: that many among them are widows, with large families of children, who they are endeavouring to bring up in a decent and reputable way, in order to render them useful and honourable members of society.

Are not the monied part of the community, from the nature of the times, likely to be sufficiently injured, without the assistance of government? Are we not alarmed at the amazing fall of cash? Had A, for instance, sold B three horses two years ago, at thirty pounds a-piece, and taken his bond for the money, payable at this time; one of these horses, according to the general rise of things (or fall of cash which is the same thing) would now completely pay that debt. And shall A, out of the interest of this poor pittance, be obliged to pay tax to ease B's pocket and the pockets of others, who are in like manner taking advantage of the times, and raising estates out of the ruins of their neighbours? Is it not sufficient that individuals are thus endeavouring to ruin individuals? Or would it really redound to the honour of government, to have a hand in completing the iniquity?

Here, perhaps you will say, that as continental loan-offices are now open, and as the certificates bear an interest of six per cent per annum, were they to be exempted from taxes, as proposed by some, the monied part of the community might turn their cash into that channel, and not only escape the tax, but, in a great degree, relieve themselves from the losses and distresses I have mentiond. But then you will consider, that this remedy would be exceedingly partial; to say nothing of the total uncertainty of its continuance. It is not to be supposed that one tenth, nor perhaps a twentieth part of those who depend upon the interest of their money for their living, and who are well affected to the government, would, or indeed could, without great inconvenience, have recourse to it. And those that would be most likely to avail themselves of the privilege, are generally such as stand least in need of it. The more particular defects of the remedy however, it might perhaps, at this time, be improper to set forth. I shall therefore dismiss the subject for the present.

It is said by some, that a law for taxing bonds and bills would be popular. And perhaps it might. But then would not a law for dividing the wealth of the state equally among the inhabitants, be full as popular, or perhaps more so? Only set the thought on foot, and take a little pains to blow it about, and you will soon have legions of advocates for it. An estate of one hundred thousand pounds, would make a hundred beggars smack their lips. This would be levelling with a witness. But then however popular it might be, I dare say numbers of those who would fain support the former scheme on its popular ground, would instantly reprobate the argument, was it to be advanced in favour of the latter. The former is levelled at one part of the community—the latter would be levelled at another also; which, you know, might make great odds.

With regard to the real merit of the two schemes, it may perhaps be hard to determine which would excel. As levying a two-fold tax on one part of the property of the state, and not on the other, would have an appearance of great partiality; some perhaps, who value an equal administration, would think the former least entitled to merit; others, apprehending they should lose most by a division of estates, would probably judge the latter to be least meritorious. This, however, may be said in favour of the latter, that the former will not bear; it would, for a time, relieve the state from paupers.

But however absurd taxing money at interest (as it is termed) may appear when fully considered, there is something in it, that at first view seems very plausible. Hence some well-meaning men, who have considered the matter too superficially, are warm advocates for the measure. And the arguments commonly advanced in support of it, are well calculated to take with the populace—to mislead the unwary and inconsiderate part of the people; who are usually well pleased with a scheme or an argument, provided it has one fair side.

In the course of our debates upon this subject, I have heard it said to be unjust that any one man, who has three times the income of another, should pay less tax than that other pays. And did he who has that largest income, possess the property out of which it rises, the remark would be just; but when that property is in the hands of others, as farms leased, and money let, and there pays tax, the case is evidently otherwise. A man may have property in the hands of other people, to the amount of a million, and the possessor of that property may have it on such easy terms, that they can better afford to pay for it than the proprietor. In which case, although the proprietor should draw from those who possess his property, ten thousand pounds per annum, and pay no other than a common poll-tax, there would not be even the shadow of injustice in it. He having enabled the possessors of his property to pay tax for it in his stead, their paying the tax must be evidently just; and was he to be taxed for it also, or for its value, that would be as evidently unjust. It might, however, gratify those amongst us who behold their superiors in life with an envious eye, and right or wrong, would gladly drag them down to a level with themselves. But this levelling spirit should never be indulged. It is always dangerous in civil society—always destructive of order and government.

Were all men so generous as to let their money on the easy terms I have mentioned, there would be no need of laws for regulating of interest. Every lender of money would be so moderate in his demands, as to enable the borrower to pay tax for the property whilst it remained in his hands. But as mankind in general are more influenced by the love of gain, than by any feelings of generosity, or principles of justice, were they left to bargain for themselves, with regard for the interest they should receive, many would exceed that moderation which I have mentioned. Laws were therefore found to be necessary to check their demands, and keep them within the bounds of equity and justice. And if the laws of this state, as they now stand, allow the lenders of money too great a latitude, let them be altered. If an interest of seven per cent per annum is too high, let it, as I said before, be reduced. But let it never be said, that New-Jersey has a law for peeping into old womens drawers and caskets, to discover the frivolous amount of their bonds and bills.

Thus, in obedience to your command, I have sent you a few of my thoughts respecting our new scheme: and I wish I had had a little more leisure, that I might have done the subject more justice, and sent you them thoughts in a little better dress. Your good judgment, however, will enable you to take up the hints I have dropt, and, at your leisure, pursue the arguments to their fullest extent; and I am sure your good nature, will readily excuse any defect on my part.

I remain with the greatest esteem, &c.

P. S. If once in judgment sir yo've err'd:
 If others once yo've taught to stray;
 'Twill learn you how to feel for those Who judge at random ev'ry day.

But from that error now recede:
 'Tis great—'tis good to own a fault:
 Returning sinners grace obtain;
 And candour does the mind exalt.

'Tis grov'ling souls alone that spurn
 Conviction and resolve to stray;
 That sullen on in error press,
 When truth unfolds a better way.

The noble mind with doubts oppress'd,
 Exults and glories in relief;
 Joyous steps from wrong to right,
 And thanks you for the new belief.

But why those hints? your mind disdains
 A thought so guilty and so low,
 As not to catch truth on the wing,
 Whether she came from friend or foe.

Peace to all such. and wisdom too:
 And may my soul with theirs unite,
 Explore the ways from error free,
 And easy move from wrong to right.

ANY hint or improvement in agriculture, ought to be communicated to the publick, especially at the time of this unhappy struggle, when necessity will, if inclination don't, urge each individual to œconomy and industry—the grand article of the culture of flax at this juncture, deserves a particular attention——I last season made the following experiment, having often heard of a second crop of flax, that is, to sow the same ground over again with flax-seed as soon as the first crop is taken off.—I was of an opinion, that it would answer then, it was highly probable it would do three weeks or a month sooner.—I had about two acres of common pasture land, ploughed and intended for wheat; one half I had cross-ploughed and well harrowed, the other was only harrowed, on which I sowed the seed pretty thick the last week in June, and in ten weeks from the time of sowing, I had the flax pulled, spread and sufficiently rotted for dressing; the flax, according to the opinion of good judges, was well linted and very soft; and that there will be at least an hundred and forty weight of flax from the two bushels of seed, which I account as so much clear gain, having a tolerable good crop put in at the usual time, and a lucky shift for any farmer, whose early sown flax may be cut short by the frost or any other accident. Yours, &c.

¹ This experiment unquestionably grew out of the action taken by the Somerset County Committee of Correspondence, at their meeting in Hillsborough, February 14th, 1776. President John Witherspoon, of the College of New Jersey (now Princeton University), was chairman upon this occasion, when, for the purpose of benefiting the "inland Trade" of Somerset county, the following was declared to be the fundamental principle of action: "That whatever will make it easy for every Person, old or young, rich or poor, to do a little and immediately to turn that little to their own Advantage as well as throw it into the Public Service, must have the most immediate and powerful Influence."

In the establishment of such a plan it was designed that markets be held for wool, woolen yarn, cloth, fine and coarse wool cards, rough and dressed flax, linen yarn, green and whitened cloth, reeds and mounting for looms, wheels, and reels. These markets were to be established monthly at Princeton, at Pluckemin, at Bernardstown, at Bound Brook and at Somerset Court House. At Princeton, upon April 14th, 1778, the Legislature passed "An Act for granting a Bounty upon Wool, Flax and Hemp raised and sold within the State of New Jersey." This act provided that a bounty should be paid of one shilling per pound for good, merchantable sheep's wool; nine pence per pound for good, clean, well-dressed flax, and four pence per pound for like hemp, "so raised and sold by any Person residing within this State, to any Inhabitant of the same." This bounty was directed to be paid "to any Person who shall raise and sell any of the aforesaid Articles, over and above the Quantity sufficient for his or her Family's Use." The act was directed to continue in force during a period of two years after its publication and thence to the end of the next sitting of the General Assembly. BURLINGTON, Feb. 25.

Friends, Countrymen and Fellow Citizens!

AFTER three campaigns, during which the brave subjects of these States have contended, not unsuccessfully, with one of the most powerful kingdoms on earth, we now find ourselves at least upon a level with our opponents; and there is the best reason to believe that efforts adequate to the abilities of this country, would enable us speedily to conclude the war, and to secure the invaluable blessings of peace, liberty and safety. With this view, it is in contemplation, at the opening of the next campaign, to assemble a force sufficient not barely to cover the country from a repetition of those depredations, which it hath already suffered, but also to operate offensively, and to strike some decisive blow.

In the prosecution of this object, it is to be feared that so large an army may suffer for the want of provisions. — The distance between this and the eastern States, whence considerable supplies of flesh have been hitherto drawn, will necessarily render those supplies exceedingly precarious. And unless the virtuous yeomanry of the States of New-Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland and Virginia, will exert themselves to prepare cattle for the use of the army, during the months of May, June and July next, great difficulties may arise in the course of the campaign: It is, therefore, recommended to the inhabitants of those States, to put up and feed immediately, as many of their stock-cattle as they can spare, so as that they may be driven to this army within that period. A bountiful price will be given, and the proprietors may assure themselves that they will render a most essential service to the illustrious cause of their country, and contribute, in a great degree, to shorten this bloody contest. But should there be any so insensible to the common interest, as not to exert themselves upon these generous principles, the private interest of those whose situation makes them liable to become immediate subjects to the enemy's incursions, should prompt them at least to a measure which is calculated to save their property from plunder, their families from insult, and their own persons from abuse, hopeless confinement, or perhaps a violent death.

G. WASHINGTON.

Head-Quarters, Valley-Forge, February 18, 1778.

We hear that an exchange of prisoners is soon to take place between General Washington and General Howe, the latter having consented to give up the point so long in dispute about the prisoners sent out last winter on parole: Most of them were treated so hardly that they died soon after their arrival among us, or were rendered for-ever unfit for service; and consequently were not proper objects of an exchange.

Last Monday a handsome collection of cloathing and linen was sent to the hospital at Princeton, for the use of the sick and wounded, being the seasonable and charitable donation of the Rev. Mr. Green's congregation in Hanover, Morris county.

Several deserters have come to this city¹ since our last.

††† The PRINTING-OFFICE is now removing from this Place to Trenton, where Business will be carried on as usual.

TO BE SOLD,

A LARGE new DWELLING-HOUSE and forty-six acres of LAND, now in the possession of Henry Waddell at Freehold, in the county of Monmouth, New-Jersey. The house contains nine rooms, (seven of them with fire-places) two kitchens with bed-rooms for servants, a fine dry cellar, &c. The out-houses consist of a small building of three rooms, (two of them with fire-places) built for an office, a bathing-house, a milk-room, a smoak-house, large and convenient stables for horses, a barn, and house for cattle, &c. The land is in good fence, and has on it an apple orchard and a peach orchard, containing together about seven hundred trees, also about one hundred and eighty trees, (brought from Prince's famous nursery on Long-Island) being a collection of the best fruit of all kinds, such as apples, pears, peaches, plumbs, nectarines, apricots, cherries, &c. Any person desirous of purchasing the above house and land may know the terms of sale by applying to Henry Waddell, who has also to dispose of one hundred acres of pasture land, lying within three quarters of a mile of the above premises.

FORTY DOLLARS REWARD.

STOLEN from the subscriber the sixteenth of July last, a chestnut brown HORSE, about fifteen hands high, seven or eight years old, with a bald face, one of his hind feet white, had a small piece of skin sticking out about three quarters of an inch long, on the left side of his breast, occasioned by a rowel. Any person delivering said horse to the subscriber, living near Somerset court-house, in New-Jersey, shall be entitled to the above reward, or Twenty Dollars reward for any person that shall give information where said horse may be had, and all reasonable charges paid by REYNEER VEGHTE.

Second month, 23d, 1778.

RUN-AWAY from the subscriber, near Mount-Holly, about the 19th of last month, an apprentice lad named LEVI BISHOP, by trade a taylor, between 19 and 20 years of age, about 5 feet 7 or 8 inches high, has a down look and bushy hair; had on and took with him when he went away a light coloured homespun coattee with wooden buttons, a home made mixed under jacket, half worn leather breeches, homespun shirts, two pair of grey stockings, one pair ribbed, old neat's leather shoes that had been caped and soaled, with carved buckles, a half worn fur hat, but it is likely he will change his name and cloathes. He was drafted out in the Northampton Militia, with Capt. Weaver, but left him and I hear has gone to the salt works at Squan, where he has a brother that goes by the name of Joseph Bishop. Any person that will apprehend the said apprentice and confine him in Burlington gaol, so that his master shall get him again, shall have ONE SIXTH OF A DOLLAR reward, paid by me

JABEZ WOOLSTON.

350 Dollars Reward.

RAN-AWAY the 8th day of February, 1778, from the subscribers, three Negro men, viz. one named NEAN, about 25 years old, a middle sized fellow, has thick lips, and stutters very much in his speech when he speaks in a hurry; had on a brown coat, a blue jacket and buckskin breeches. One named JAMES, about 20 years old, a short chunky fellow, had on a good castor hat, two jackets, the upper one a light grey, and leather breeches, and likes much to play on the fife. --- The other named CUFF, about 30 years old, a well set fellow, about 5 feet 8 inches high; had on a beaver hat, a blue coat, red jacket, cloth breeches and new shoes, and is very fond of playing on the fiddle. As they were seen near Frankfort, it is supposed they are in or near Philadelphia. Whoever takes up and secures the said Negroes in Trenton gaol, so that their masters may have them again, shall have the above reward, or an equal reward for either of them.

WILSON HUNT,
JOHN HUNT,
JOSEPH BURROWES,

Hopewell, February 2, 1778.

Was taken out of a yard between Andrew Mershon's tavern and Pennington, in Hopewell, a black roan MARE, about five years old, English made, with a saddle and bridle; she trots, paces and gallops, her off hind foot white, the other has a little white about the hoof, a black head, mane and foretop, the two latter very bushy. She is about 14 hands high, with a blaze. The saddle has neither housin or saddle-cloth, and otherwise out of repair; a snaffle bridle with a running rein. The thief, as is supposed, is a short well set man, has dark brown bushy hair, had on a small hat, an old brown coat, leather breeches, a new pair of shoes, and calls himself William Williams. Whoever takes up the thief so that he may be brought to justice, and secures the mare, saddle and bridle so that the owner may have them again, shall receive Twenty Dollars reward and reasonable charges paid by NATHAN MOORE.

ALL persons indebted to the estate of the Widow Van Allen, late of the city of New-Brunswick, deceased, are hereby requested to pay their respective accounts to the subscriber at Trenton, or to Mr. William Harrison, in New Brunswick: And those that have any demands against the said estate, are desired to bring in their accounts properly attested to the above-named persons.

SAMUEL H. SULLIVAN, Administrat.

TO BE SOLD,

On the 12th day of March next, at the house of Mr. Geromus Vanderbelt, in the township of New-Shanneck, and county of Somerset;

SUNDRY HOUSEHOLD GOODS, viz. a good eight day clock, beds, chairs, tables and kitchen furniture. The vendue to begin at ten o'clock in the forenoon, where attendance will be given by me,

S. H. SULLIVAN.

To whom it may concern:

THE boat or vessel known by the name of LEWIS'S MILL BOAT, which was lately condemned by a court of admiralty in the State of New-Jersey, and sold by Publick Vendue in the city of Burlington, was in September last employed in the continental service for carrying cloathing from Philadelphia to Trenton, and from thence was ordered by the commissaries to return with publick stores to that city calling at Bristol for further directions; but by the villainy of the skipper the vessel was run into a dock in Philadelphia on the 26th September last (the day on which the enemy arrived there) from whence she was taken an hour or two afterwards by a party of Gloucester county militia, together with all the publick stores (having no other goods) on board, which stores were also condemned for the use of the captors.

The above is a true state of facts as they appeared on the trial.

BOWES REED, PRO. REG.

February 18, 1778.

Trenton, Feb. 9, 1778.

NOTICE is hereby given to all persons capable of driving a team, who are willing to enlist for carters in the continental army, to serve for three years; that they shall have twenty dollars bounty, six pounds per month from the time of their enlistment, a suit of new clothes every year, and a great coat (if possible) and shoes or boots, by their producing a certificate from their waggon-master of their good behaviour. All persons willing to enlist on the above terms, are desired to apply to me at my quarters in Trenton.

SAMUEL H. SULLIVAN, D. Q. M. G.

FORTY DOLLARS REWARD.

RAN AWAY from the subscriber, at Trenton, NICHOLAS PECK, an indented servant, about 18 years of age, dark complexion, marked with the small-pox, about five feet high: Had on, when he went away, a striped linsey coat and jacket, buckskin breeches, a pair of plated buckles and beaver hat. He was spoke with on the road to Philadelphia, said he was going there, and to Head-Quarters to enlist. As there are a number of officers belonging to the army acquainted with the aforesaid Nicholas Peck, it is hoped that none will enlist him, I have the honour to serve them as superintendent of cattle to the light-horse.

Since the detachment of the royal army crossed the Delaware, and went into Jersey, we hear large numbers of the inhabitants of that province have flocked to them. The intelligence of the particular operations there is so imperfect, that we must defer the account to another opportunity. Certain it is, the detachment of the rebel army there, under gen. Wayne are flying as usual, with all their might, burning, destroying, and laying waste all in their way. As soon as Mr. Wayne found it necessary to retreat he gave the most positive orders for burning all the forage, &c. they should come across, which orders have been strictly complied with wherever they passed, without distinction of friends or foes.—The Pennsylvania Evening Post, February 28, 1778.

New-York, March 2. At a Court lately held at Morris-Town, in New-Jersey, 35 Persons received, Sentence of Death, for their Loyalty to their King; two of which were executed, viz. William Iliff, and John Mee, for inlisting Men for his Majesty's Service. On the Day of their Execution, the Sheriff (Alexander Carmichael) exhorted them to make a Confession of their Crimes, and acknowledge the Justness of their Sentence, in order to satisfy the Public: They answered Mr. Carmichael, very coolly, and told him, they supposed they were to die for being good Subjects, that they knew no other Crime could be laid to their Charge, and that he might do his Duty as soon as possible. The poor Men were immediately executed, the Sheriff doing all that was necessary on the Occasion himself.

EXTRACTS from His Excellency's Message to the GENERAL ASSEMBLY.¹

Gentlemen,

Considering the multiplicity of business that will require your attention at this setting, and how much was left unfinished at the last, I am persuaded that your zeal for the publick interest will not suffer you to rise till you have dispatched every matter of moment that shall require your deliberation.

As the completing our battalions demands your speedy consideration, I herewith lay before you a state of the non-commissioned officers and soldiers of the four New-Jersey regiments according to the weekly return of the 5th of January last. By this you will be convinced of the necessity of the most expeditious and vigorous measures for increasing those regiments to the full complement of men of which, according to the establishment, they ought to consist. I am confident I need not use any arguments with you to shew the importance of our having a respectable army to open an early campaign before the enemy can be strengthened by reinforcements from Europe. Whatever expectations we may have of a rupture between Great-Britain and France, which is doubtless highly probable, it is surely not the part of wise men to depend upon uncertain contingencies. We ought under God to rely solely upon ourselves and our own resources; and act as though we had no expectations of foreign succours, because we may, for anything that can be known to the contrary, be disappointed, how rational and well-founded soever such expectations may at present appear. If, however, in addition to our own preparations, we should derive any advantage from a declaration of war against the enemy by the king of France, or any other potentate, such coadjutant power will facilitate the final establishment of our independence. But in a work so glorious, and thus far so happily achieved without foreign aid, it will neither be consistent with our honour or safety to be in a condition that will make such assistance necessary.

From the repeated blunders of our enemies in what they vainly imagined a sufficient force to reduce us to vassalage, and the insupportable disgrace of their arms in the attempt, it is to be presumed that they will be stimulated to prolong the war by indignation and disappointment. And as they may continue it another year without being totally ruined, nor will ever come to their senses till they are, and it is well known to be a profitable job to the principal agents employed in carrying it on, and to a numerous set of dependants, who cannot otherwise be provided for, they will doubtless strain every nerve both at home and abroad to raise and procure as early as possible all the troops they can collect for reducing us to absolute submission. To put ourselves in a proper posture of defence is therefore evidently both our duty and our interest.

I also lay before you a memorial of Col. Shreve¹ of the second, and Lieutenant-Colonel Brearly² of the fourth New-Jersey regiments. As this memorial is addressed to the Council and Assembly as well as to me, it will of course obtain your consideration. But as it is presented by authority and in behalf of the whole of the troops raised in this state, and I conceive the matters contained in it to be of great importance to the army, I cannot but recommend it as a matter worthy of your early attention to remedy the evils complained of.

I am now to request your attention to a very solemn act of Congress of the 8th of January, for suspending the embarkation of Lieutenant-General Burgoyne and the troops under his command, till a distinct and explicit ratification of the Convention of Saratoga shall be properly notified by the Court of Great-Britain to Congress. The reasons for adopting this measure are set forth at large in the act which I herewith lay before you. As the Congress, after long and mature consideration, judged the measure to be indispensably their duty, and equally justifiable and necessary, they are confident their resolutions will be confirmed by the approbation of all their constituents in these United States, who are most nearly concerned. They conceiving it an act of such solemnity, as to deserve the concurrence of all these States in the union, though they are doubtless competent to the business of ratifying or disapproving any capitulations made by their Generals, I doubt not it will meet with your confirmation.

I am further to acquaint you, Gentlemen, that Congress, conceiving it expedient to promote a speedy reformation in the army as well for the purpose of discipline as œconomy, and the number of officers being already out of all proportion to that of the privates, to avoid further embarrassments in this respect, they have recommended it to the governments of the several states by a resolution of the 31st of December, to suspend filling up any vacancies in their respective regiments until they shall hear farther from Congress on the subject.

You will also be pleased to turn your thoughts to a very important résolution of Congress of the 3d of December last, earnestly recommending it to the legislative authorities of the respective states, forthwith to enact laws requiring all persons within their respective states who may be possessed of any bills of credit struck under the sanction and authority of the King of Great-Britain on or before the 19th day of April 1775, forthwith to deliver in the same to a commissioner or commissioners for that purpose to be appointed in each county of the respective states, authorising such commissioner or commissioners to give in exchange for any sum so paid in continental money or bills of credit of their respective states, and to declare in the laws so enacted, that all bills of credit under the description above-mentioned, which shall not be so delivered in within such reasonable time as the respective states shall for such purpose limit, shall thenceforth become utterly irredeemable.—A law to this purpose must be so evidently conducive at once to abolish the infamous practice of making a difference between what is called the old and the new money, and to increase the value of the continental currency, (under both which views I recommend it to you before I was honoured with the last mentioned resolution of Congress) that I doubt not it will receive your ready approbation. And should such an act be accompanied by a tax at least of £.100,000, the effect it will have in supporting the credit of our money, and reducing the price of provisions, cannot but strike the most inconsiderate mind.

I also submit to your consideration a number of most momentous resolutions of Congress of the 20th of December, upon the immediate adoption of which, and the enacting them into a law, the safety of this state appears most intimately to depend, and which I therefore hope will meet with that dispatch, which their importance will appear to you to deserve.

Your attention, Gentlemen, is farther solicited by a resolution of Congress of the 15th of January last, accompanied with a letter from the Board of War of the 19th of the same month.—As good steel is an article so indispensably necessary not only for the purposes of war, but those of internal husbandry, and it is said that the Andover¹ iron is better suited to this business than any other in America, I doubt not you will readily comply with the expectations of the Congress in this respect.

I cannot upon this occasion help remarking that as no articles whatsoever can with less difficulty be dispensed with in military operations than iron and steel, you will find upon the slightest recollection, that none of our citizens are more generally disaffected than those who are interested or employed in the manufacturing of iron. A strong presumption that the enemy has been particularly industrious in corrupting these men, with a view to distress us in a most essential point. And as I suppose one of the first things that will engage your attention will be the confiscation of the estates of our internal enemies, recommended to you at the last sitting, this requisition may be carried into execution by the general bill of forfeitures.

From the difficulty of having recourse to the number of separate acts into which our military code is already branched, I would recommend to you a revision of all our military laws,² and to have them comprised in one. In forming this digest, I hope the procuring of substitutes, of which we have experienced the fatal consequences, and which must at last inevitably ruin our militia, will be repealed.

² This recommendation was the first of a long series, suggested from time to time by various governors. In such confusion were the statutes regulating the militia that as late as March 24th, 1778, the Legislature passed "A supplementary act to an act entitled 'An act to explain and amend an act entitled 'An act for the better regulating the militia and the supplemental act thereto.'"

In lieu of calling out the militia to be stately posted in such parts of the state as are more particularly exposed to the incursions of the enemy, I would recommend a plan both more effectual against hostile irruptions, and attended with much less expence to the public.

I would propose two state regiments properly officered, and by the best officers, to be raised for a year, and not liable to be called out of it, except by the authority appointed to call out the militia. As these corps would be better disciplined than the common militia, they would of consequence be better troops, and more formidable to the enemy.—The time that is at present lost by the militia's going from and returning home in their monthly tours, would be saved. The posts to be occupied by them would not be vacant, till there was reason for wholly quitting them, as it now frequently happens (in great measure) by the monthly reliefs. The bounty which is now paid monthly in addition to the continental pay, would in all probability raise the regiment for a year. Such men as could best be spared from home would be most likely to enter into the service, and the more industrious farmer remain at his husbandry, except in case of an actual invasion. The disorders and depredations so often committed by the militia on the property of their fellow citizens, which is principally to be imputed to the connivance of such worthless officers by whom they are sometimes commanded, as have not the spirit to maintain a proper subordination, would be prevented. The superiority of this plan to our present practice of harassing the husbandman in a state subsisting by agriculture, needs I think to be mentioned, in order to be approved.

I would moreover recommend to you, Gentlemen, the passing a law which I recommended to the former assembly in September last, to enable every obligor or debtor whose creditor is removed out of the state, or cannot be found in it, or who refuses to receive the debt when tendered, to pay the same into the treasury for his use, and to be thereupon discharged from the sum so paid, and all the interest thereafter accruing, or to be discharged from the principal and interest in such other manner, without paying the sum into the treasury as the legislature shall think most proper.

As there is great reason to apprehend that a considerable part of many of the personal estates which are forfeited in consequence of an act, entitled, "An Act of free and general pardon, and for other purposes therein mentioned," is secreted and concealed from the commissioners by the said act appointed, it appears highly necessary for the more effectually attaining the valuable ends thereby intended, to pass a law for authorising the commissioners to compel the appearance of persons suspected of concealing such effects, or of being indebted to the delinquent, and to examine them as well as other witnesses upon oath, with proper penalties for such concealment, and adequate rewards to induce a discovery. A law to this purpose will save the state many thousand pounds, which will otherwise be lost through the fraudulent practices of the friends and agents of the offenders, whose personal estates are by the said act declared forfeited.

The militia posted along such of our frontiers from which the disaffected among us carry on a commercial intercourse with the enemy, frequently seize the commodities so carried, or the merchandize brought back in exchange for them, and appropriate them to their own use. This being altogether illegal, cannot be countenanced by government, and the militia being thus judges in their own case, and immediately interested in condemning as prize the booty they take, are under strong temptations to plunder under that pretext persons near the enemy's lines who have no intention of conveying in to them the effects they are transporting. If on the other hand they are restrained from confiscating the provisions or other effects actually designed to be conveyed to the enemy, or the return cargo bartered for them, considering the additional service and hazard in making such seizures, they will not make them at all; and thus this pernicious traffic will be carried on without interruption. I would therefore recommend to your consideration a law authorizing the militia, or any other persons, to seize all effects suspected to be carrying to or coming from the enemy, and to have them properly inventoried and secured till the person from whom they are taken shall be legally tried; and if convicted of the offence, to be appropriated to the person who seized them as part of the punishment to be inflicted upon the delinquent, but if acquitted, to be restored to the owner.—This will be both an encouragement to make such seizures, and oblige the person making them to bring the criminal to justice, without whose conviction he cannot be entitled to the property, at the same time that it will prevent the lawless and indiscriminate violation of private property, under the specious pretence of an illicit correspondence.

Considering the sufferings of such of our militia as have been made prisoners by the enemy, I doubt not you will see the necessity of appointing a state commissary to supply them with provisions and such other necessaries as they may want.

Gentlemen,

We are now arrived at a very important crisis of the contest. The next campaign will probably terminate in something very decisive. Considering the natural strength of America, and the reason we have from the justice of our cause to depend upon the Divine Interposition in our behalf, it will be our own fault, if it does not terminate in our favour. Our constituents expect our most strenuous efforts—and I trust your patriotism will not suffer them to be disappointed.

FRIENDLY HINTS TO THOSE IN AUTHORITY.

As it is the honour, the highest honour, that can be conferred upon mortals, to be the legislative Representatives of a free people, so it is the happiness and unalienable privilege of every constituent, to suggest to their consideration such things as tend to promote the interest of his country. Hints from the unskilful have often been improved by those of more enlarged understandings for the subserviency of the most important purposes.—The desires of all in authority, whether legislative or executive, must be so perfectly interested in the public weal, that every suggestion to secure and advance the same, and to prevent or correct whatever may be detrimental hereto, will be received by them with the highest pleasure. My pen shall ever be guarded with propriety, decency and a proper respect to all in authority. But if any of my hints at any time seem unwise or unseasonable, let them be treated with that neglect which they deserve; if otherwise, I have the fullest confidence in the integrity, wisdom and zeal of those in authority, that they will apply and improve them for the public good.

As the highly respected Legislature of this State is now sitting, I shall address myself at present to you. And while honour is the guardian of my pen, general utility my chief end, and the love of my country my only motive, I may indulge myself with the assurance you will condescend to hear me, as I intend neither to occupy a large space in your news-paper, nor impose on your patience.

I. Let none of our honourable Legislators entertain the thought that they are assembled only to hurry up some acts, and in a few days return home. A Legislator is an august an important character, and cannot be supported with dignity by hurrying over his duties in a desultory manner.—Our government is but young, and therefore many new laws to enact, and old ones to amend; all which require time, and a patient and diligent application to business. The State is now suffering through want of some new laws and the amendment of others: Hence many of your constituents have expressed themselves with surprise, at your now sitting constantly this winter, so that having gone thro' the business of the State, you might have been at home in the spring. But if you choose to sit rather in the vernal season, it is well; and sure I am you cannot do your duty to your country, or faithfully discharge the obligations resulting from the acceptance of your delegation, if you do not. In the present conjuncture of affairs, the Assembly ought to sit a great part of their time. The absolutely necessary business of the State cannot be well done without it. Wherefore when you accept of the appointment of your countrymen to be Legislators, you should consider you are obliged to leave your families and private affairs for a considerable part of the year. And if you cannot do this, and patiently give the most of your time to the public business of your country, you ought in all good conscience not to have suffered yourselves to have been elected.—Further, be pleased to be careful you allow none of your members to be absent but upon reasons of the greatest importance. Yea, as you are delegated by the people, and their servants, tho' most honourable ones, if any of you absent yourselves from the business of your delegation, it should ever be for such reasons as you would not be ashamed your constituents should know them.—I will not harrow up the conscience, nor put propriety to the blush, by mentioning reasons accepted by the House, for granting leave of absence to their members, in hopes, it is said, of a reciprocal indulgence.

II. Be entreated not to spend your important time in disputing the distinct privileges, or determining with mathematical exactness, the peculiar rights of each house. Altho' one house is called the Council and the other the General Assembly, yet it is not as formerly, the one appointed by the crown and the other by the people. We are no longer under the British constitution, which is neither monarchy, aristocracy, nor democracy, but an absurd collection of contradictory and jarring qualities from all three. In it the crown is ever endeavouring to make inroads on the rights of the people, and the people choose once in seven years, six or seven hundred men to limit its power and keep the prerogative within some bounds. So that the British constitution is founded in an eternal struggle or war between the rights of humanity, and the proud ambitious claims of a creature called a king. Perhaps this influenced Mr. Hobbes, a shrewd philosopher, an admirer of this strange constitution, and a great friend to prerogative, to fancy that "moral obligation was founded in contest or war." And the English now act in conformity to his philosophy and their own constitution, fully demonstrating by their sanguinary measures, that right is only to be determined by might. Nothing ever maintained peace in the British empire but foreign wars. If they were at peace with their neighbouring nations, they were always sure to be embroiled in a civil war at home. I defy any person to point out from the English history, their enjoying a peace with other nations of any considerable continuance, that was not interrupted with domestic discord, and the shedding of blood among themselves. Why should the English be more incident to quarrels than any other nation? The matter is easily accounted for. It arises from the very constitution of their government. It is founded in contention, and contention, war and bloodshed, have always proceeded from it, as streams from a fountain, and always will proceed from it as long as it exists. Therefore I congratulate you, O happy Americans, on your deliverance from so irrational, so ridiculous and so bloody a form of government! Our Legislators I hope will ever remember, that both houses are creatures of the people, and cannot possibly, virtue and honour being preserved, have jarring or different interests; wherefore all disputes between you about privilege and prerogative are mere logomachies. And I have too high an opinion of your honesty and understanding to indulge the disagreeable idea that you will at all waste your time about matters absolutely nugatory.

AN ELECTOR.

TRENTON, March 4.

To the INHABITANTS of NEW-JERSEY.

Gentlemen,

CONSIDERING the noble ardor which this state has uniformly manifested in the common cause, I am confident that our virtuous Farmers will take a particular pleasure¹ in complying with his Excellency the General's request. They will disdain in the close of our struggle to sully the honour which New-Jersey has deservedly acquired by affording all possible aid during the whole contest. 'Tis hoped the next campaign will make the enemy repent their execrable purpose of enslaving a free people; and teach even British stupidity, wisdom. For liberty's sake, Gentlemen, let not our expectations of this campaign be disappointed for want of the supplies we can so easily furnish. I know you will exert yourselves, and want neither arguments to convince, nor exhortations to rouse you. Your country calls; and to the call of your country you were never deaf.

WIL. LIVINGSTON.

Trenton, 25 Feb. 1778.

We learn from a New-York paper of the 19th of February, that the Hessian Lieutenant-General Philip De Heister, died at Cassel, in Germany, on the 19th of November last, in the sixty-first year of his age. His death was occasioned by an inflammation in his lungs, which carried him off in four days.

On Wednesday last the enemy landed about 3000 men at Billingsfort, and marched down the road towards Salem, and on intelligence received that another body intended to land at Cooper's ferry,² in order to surprize General Wayne (who had lately landed in New-Jersey with 500 of the Continental Troops) and Col. Ellis, who commanded a detachment of the Jersey Militia at Haddonfield, our troops not being sufficient to make a stand, it was thought most adviseable to move towards Moores-Town, to prevent being surrounded, which was accordingly done a few hours before the enemy landed about 1500 men agreeable to the intelligence received, and marched to Haddonfield early in the morning of the 26th. Upon this our men marched to Mount-Holly to wait for reinforcements.—The Governor upon receiving the above intelligence, ordered out a proper number of the Militia to join those under Col. Ellis, who are now collecting with great alacrity, and unless the enemy retire before they are attacked by the united vigour of General Wayne's Troops and our Militia, we doubt not they will repent their rash visit to this State.—Last Friday Brigadier General Count Polaski, of the Cavalry, left this place¹ with a body of horse in excellent order, to join the Continental Troops under General Wayne, and who from the former exhibitions of his valour and alertness, will give a good account of the enemy's horse, if they do not deprive him of that pleasure by a precipitate flight.²

About ten days ago a report was spread in this town, that a party of the enemy had penetrated into Bucks County as far as Newtown. The intelligence reached this place in the afternoon, and in the evening a respectable number of Militia were assembled at the different ferries. The next morning a party was preparing to cross the river in quest of the enemy, when intelligence was received that they were returned to Philadelphia, having plundered many of the inhabitants, and carried off with them two coach loads of lumber from the house of Joseph Galloway, Esquire, Superintendent-General in Philadelphia.

His Excellency the Governor has thought proper to station strong guards of Militia at the several ferries on Delaware, and many others are in readiness at a moments warning to fly to the aid of their brethren in Bucks County, should another plundering party shew themselves in that quarter.

On the 15th ult. at night the house of Ashier Mott, on Boyle's¹ island near this place, by accident took fire, and was entirely consumed. The family providentially escaped, with saving only a small part of their wearing apparel.

To all whom it may concern.

—New-Jersey Gazette, No. 14, Mar. 4, 1778.

Copy of a letter from gen. sir William Howe, to lord George Germain, dated Philadelphia, October 25, 1777.

My lord,

The enemy having intrenched about eight hundred men at Red bank, upon the Jersey shore, some little distance above Fort island, col. Donop, with three battalions of Hessian grenadiers, the regiment of Mirbach, and the infantry chasseurs, crossed the Delaware on the twenty-first instant to Cooper's ferry, opposite to this town, with directions to proceed to the attack of that post. The detachment marched apart of the way on the same day, and on the twenty-second in the afternoon was before Red bank. Colonel Donop immediately made the best disposition, and led on the troops in the most gallant manner to the assault. They carried an extensive out-work, from whence the enemy were driven into an interior intrenchment, which could not be forced without ladders, being eight or nine feet high, with a parapet boarded and fraized. The detachment, in moving up, and returning from the attack, was much galled by the enemy's galleys and floating batteries.

Col. Donop, and lieutenant-col. Minningerode, being both wounded, the command devolved upon lieutenant-col. Linsing, who, after collecting all the wounded that could be brought off, marched that night about five miles towards Cooper's ferry, and on the following morning returned with the detachment to camp.

Col. Donop unfortunately had his thigh so much fractured by a musquet ball, that he could not be removed, but I since understand there are some hopes of his recovery. There were several brave officers lost upon this occasion, in which the utmost ardor and courage were displayed by both officers and soldiers.

On the twenty-third the Augusta, in coming up the river, with some other ships of war, to engage the enemy's galleys, near the fort, got aground, and by some accident taking fire in the action, was unavoidably consumed; but I do not hear there were any lives lost. The Merlin sloop also grounded, and the other ships being obliged to remove at a distance from the explosion of the Augusta, it became expedient to evacuate and burn her also.

These disappointments however will not prevent the most vigorous measures being pursued for the reduction of the fort, which will give us the passage of the river. I have the honor to be, &c. W. HOWE.¹

To the PRINTER of the NEW-JERSEY GAZETTE.

SIR,

HAVING been informed that a new bill is under consideration for a general limitation of prices, I would, with all due deference, suggest a few hints on the subject. That trade can best regulate it's own prices, is a maxim so universally subscribed to, that the wisest legislators have seldom ventured to interfere with or control it in this respect. Extraordinary conjunctures may, however, happen in which the interference of the legislature may be proper: But whenever such a conjuncture does happen, it is an infallible symptom that there is some radical disorder in the police of the State, or that it is violently acted upon by external circumstances. The disease, whether arising from one or the other, or a complication of both of these, may have nearly the same appearances and effects, but may require very different remedies. We should therefore, with great care and attention, enquire into the causes and seat of the disease, in order to know and apply the proper remedy. The limitation of prices by law, may be likened to an outward application in a fever; it is a temporary expedient that may give some check to the disorder, till the more slowly-operating internal applications can have their proper effect. At the same time it is an expedient fraught with so many dangers, that few situations will justify the use of it; and when it is used, it should be so tempered and modified that every order or class of men in the community may partake of the advantages and disadvantages arising from it as equally as possible. Whatever differences are made,—and it is impossible to avoid making some—, should be in favour of the production of such articles as are of absolute necessity, such as provisions, cloathing, iron, &c. and against those of mere conveniency and luxury, such as rum, sugar, tea, spices, &c. And in order to find out how to proportion the limitations duly, it may be necessary to have recourse to calculation.

By the law lately passed for regulating prices,¹ the legislature seem to have aimed at fixing most of the articles of internal produce at double the former prices. This may perhaps be a proper standard for some articles; but when the matter is fairly considered, it will be found that the same reasons which require the prices of some things to be doubled, will call for a smaller advance on some others, and on others again a much greater: Of the latter kind are such articles as derive their value chiefly from labour, and require the use of some commodity either imported from abroad, or which, from it's scarcity, cannot be obtained but at a very high price. To explain my meaning I shall subjoin a few calculations.

I. As to farmers. Let us suppose a farm, the annual produce of which for sale, exclusive of what was necessary for the consumption of such parts of the family as do not labour, would sell in former times for £. 300 00

It is said to be a large allowance, to admit that one half of this value is paid for labour, supposing the whole to be done on hire,..... 150 00

Annual profit remaining..... 150 00

Supposing the price of labour to be doubled, the labour on the same farm will be worth..... 300 00

The consumption of the family will be the same, and allow the same annual profit as formerly,..... 150 00

The extraordinary price of salt may be..... 15 00

Allow, moreover, the use of as much rum, tea, sugar, and other luxuries as will cost, extra,..... 35 00

500 00

The farmer ought therefore to have for his produce on an average now, 5s. for what he would formerly have sold for 3s. or 1s8 now for 1s. formerly.

II. As to labourers. Let us suppose a labourer, finding his own provisions and cloathing, formerly earned per annum, 45 00

That his provisions cost him..... 20 00

And his cloathing..... 10 00

Profit toward the maintenance of a family.... 15 00

Provisions at double price will be..... 40 00

Cloathing will cost at least three times the old price... 30 00

His profit for the use of his family ought to be at least doubled as they must purchase all they consume..... 30 00

£. 100 00

His wages therefore ought to be increased to 10s. for every 4s6 he would formerly have received; or 1s8 now for 9d. formerly.

The same proportion will be requisite for mechanicks, handicraftsmen, lawyers, clerks, &c. so far as their several productions derive their value from labour; making the proper addition or deduction for what the prices of their respective materials may exceed or fall short of that proportion.

It will be observed that I have stated the price of labour at double the former prices to the farmer, though I have shewn it must cost more to others; and that I have stated provisions at double to labourers, &c. though I have said the farmer ought to sell them at a lower rate. A little reflection will justify these diversities. As to the first, the farmer having the advantage of feeding; and, in a great measure, cloathing and paying his labourers from his own produce without purchase, (to say nothing of the advantage he may derive from the labour of his children and servants) can always procure labour at a much cheaper rate than a person of any other class. And as to the second.—Suppose the prices of the common articles of provisions should be fixed at the rate of 5s. now, for 3s. formerly, as above stated, if we make but a small allowance for the extraordinary prices of salt, sugar, tea, rum, &c.—and some of these they must and will use as well as their neighbours,—we shall find the average price of provisions to labourers, mechanicks, &c. will not be less than doubled. I have heard it remarked that a great majority of the members of the legislature being farmers, their limitations are calculated greatly in favour of that class of men. If there is any truth in the remark, I am persuaded it must arise from their want of proper information, as I cannot suppose they would designedly oppress others for their own emolument. As faithful representatives of the people, I should suppose they would be particularly watchful that no just ground should be given for a suspicion of this kind.

III. As to the importation of goods from Europe. Some of this business is yet necessary, and therefore good policy requires that we should encourage it. A person acquainted with trade has furnished me with the following estimate on that head.

Suppose goods purchased in Europe to the amount of, first cost,	100 00
Freight and shipping charges, say.....	10 00
Premium at 50 per cent, and insurance made so as to be made whole in case of loss, there must be 220£. insured, which will cost.....	110 00
	Sterling 220 00
Exchange 300 per cent.....	660 00
The goods delivered here will cost the importer.....	880 00
Allow as a profit to encourage trade 15 per cent.....	132 00

They must therefore be sold at the rate of more than 10s. here for 1s. sterling of the prime cost in Europe; and if the goods are coarse and bulky, the freight alone will be worth more than 10 per cent. on the first cost.

IV. As to iron and steel: I know so little of the expences and difficulties attending the production of these articles, that I am not possessed of sufficient data to make a proper estimate. But they are already become scarce, notwithstanding the high prices they have borne for some time past; and I conceive them to be so absolutely necessary, as well for the use of the army as for the purposes of husbandry and other domestick business, that I wish to see this branch of business so far encouraged as to ensure a competent supply. I would therefore, if I may be permitted without being charged with presumption, recommend it to the legislature, before they fix a limitation to the prices of these articles, to consult with some honest men skilled in the production of them,—and surely some such may be found notwithstanding the hint in a late publication,—and if they should think proper to fix any limitation at all, to make it such as will not defeat its own purpose.

RATIONALIS.

TRENTON, March 11.

A correspondent desires us to insert the following:

After Gen. Howe's pathetic complaint to the British ministry that Gen. Washington would not leave the mountain at Middlebrook to fight him in a manner most advantageous to his Majesty's service, it seems rather ungenerous in this English Commander (who ought certainly to do as he would be done by) that his troops in their late irruption into this State, not only refused to fight us as we thought most for our advantage, but what is infinitely worse refused to fight us at all, merely because they thought that any fighting would have been to our advantage. After a most pompous parade in landing in two several divisions to the great terror of the horned cattle, and the no small peril of some undefended stacks of hay, they marched into Haddonfield with above two thousand men, when they knew we had not above a quarter of that number in arms in that part of the country. Gen. Wayne the mean-while secured and sent to camp all the cattle and horses they came to steal, and to elude their search, artfully attracted their attention towards the river by setting fire to such part of the forage as lay on its borders. Though they knew our inferiority of number, our attacking them with a few light horse at Haddonfield, under the command of Brigadier-General Count Pulaski, made their fears get the better of their knowledge, as well as of their courage, and happiest was the Briton who had the longest legs and the nimblest heels. Leaving bag and baggage, they retreated precipitately to Cooper's Ferry. There Count Pulaski charged among the thickest, and when they found that he was surrounded by them, by his having rushed into the middle of them, they plucked up courage enough to pursue what they were certain of never overtaking; but our militia lying in their way, and giving them a few of their last winter, still remembered New-Jersey, blasts, they fled ten times as fast from the militia, as they pursued after the Count, who being determined the next morning to push them into the Delaware, behold they had re-crossed to Philadelphia, and left him the mortification to parade on the banks without the satisfaction of an enemy to fight. And thus endeth the first lesson of their expedition into this State, (since they were ignominiously driven out of it last summer) without the cattle or forage they wanted: and with several killed, and about one hundred wounded, which, I presume, they wanted not. And if the British horse take it in their heads to desert as fast for want of provender, as their men have lately done for want of fresh provisions, I suppose the Emperor of Persia, will be subsidized for cavalry, as the Prince of Hesse is for infantry. And yet I would lay two to one that this same contemptible manœuvre, properly dished up by the loyal and the royal typographical cooks in New-York, with a little of parson I——'s political theology by way of garnish, will make as luminous a figure in the London Gazette, as have done any of its ridiculous predecessors of nonsensical memory: it being the curse of heaven upon an abandoned nation that it shall be deluded till it is destroyed.¹

"The public has been already informed of the death of Elizabeth Shipley, of Wilmington, but a circumstance relating thereto is a secret (perhaps) except to a few. On her death bed, as well as during her better state of health, she was much affected with the calamity that this country now labours under, from the cruel oppression of the king and parliament of England; but a ray of that light by which the soul can look into the future events springing up in her, she was comforted, and with godly confidence declared, That this country should not be conquered by Great-Britain.—This she uttered with such solemnity that it commanded the particular notice of all who heard her, and is now made public for the encouragement of every well-wisher to the freedom and liberties of America. Every one who had an opportunity of knowing this great and good woman, whether they be Whig or Tory, will be inclined to give credit to her prophecy, and for the sake of all such as knew her not, they are now informed that she was a woman eminently endowed with knowledge both natural and divine."²

Admiralty-Office, January 8, 1778.

The following is an Extract of a Letter received last night by the Eagle-Packet, from the Vice Admiral Lord Viscount Howe, Commander in Chief of his Majesty's ships and vessels in North-America, to which Mr. Stephens, dated on board his Majesty's ship the Eagle, in the Delaware, the 23d of November, 1777.

Eagle, Delaware, Nov. 23, 1777.

SIR.

The General advising me of his intention to send a packet immediately to England, I avail myself of the opportunity to acquaint you, for the information of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, respecting the progress of the military services in which the ships of war have been concerned, since the date of my last letter of the 25th of October.

I mentioned in that letter the preparations making for the attack meditated on the works the rebels had constructed on either shore, for preventing an open communication by water, with the army at Philadelphia, on which it was obvious to them that the farther operations of the campaign would greatly depend.

The wind still continuing to prevent the Vigilant from passing to the rear of the enemy's works on Fort Island, by the only channel practicable for that purpose, the opportunity was taken by the King's forces, and by the enemy with equal assiduity, to strengthen the preparations judged expedient on either part for the proposed attack.

The officers and seamen of the ships of war and transports were employed in the meantime, with unremitting fatigue and perseverance, to convey provisions, artillery and stores to the Schuykill, between Fort Island and the Pennsylvania shore; six twenty four pounders from the Eagle, and four thirty two pounders from the Somerset, transported in the same manner, with the requisite proportions of ammunition, were mounted in the batteries erected by the General's appointment on Province-Island.

The wind becoming favourable the 15th instant, the first occasion was taken for ordering the ships upon the intended service.

The Somerset and Isis were appointed to proceed up the Eastern channel of the river, to act against the fort in front. The Roebuck, Pearl, and Liverpool, with the Cornwallis galley, and some smaller armed vessels, against a battery with heavy artillery which the rebels had lately opened on a point above, and near to Manto¹-Creek, in a situation to rake the ships anchored to fire upon the fort, and more advantageously chosen, as the shoalness of the water did not admit ships to approach within a desirable distance of the work.

The Vigilant, with a hulk mounting 3 eighteen pounders, commanded by Lieutenant Botham of the Eagle, proceeded at the same time through the channel round Hog-Island, and anchored on that side the fort, according to the intention pointed out for co-operating with the batteries on the Pennsylvania shore.

The Isis, being as well placed in the Eastern channel as the circumstances of the navigation would permit, rendered very essential service against the forts and gallies, much to the personal honour of Captain Cornwallis, and credit of the discipline in his ship. The Roebuck and other frigates stationed against the battery, were equally well conducted.

Greater caution being necessary in placing the Somerset, that ship could not be carried as far up the channel as the Isis was advanced.

The impression made by the batteries on Province Island (before very considerable) being united with the well directed efforts from the Vigilant and Hulk, soon silenced the artillery of the fort; and farther preparations being in progress for opening the estocade, and forcing the works next morning, the enemy set fire to and evacuated the fort during the night.

The number of the enemy killed and wounded appeared to have been very considerable. Those in the different ships, as stated in the annexed return, were much less than could be supposed, particularly of the Isis and Roebuck, which were struck many times from the gallies and works.

As a farther evidence to their Lordships of the meritorious conduct of the several officers therein named, I have added the General's concurring sentiments signified to me on the occasion. Capt Duncau remained several weeks with the army, to superintend the different nautic services and preparations before mentioned.

A detachment from the army under the command of Lord Cornwallis, having been lauded the 18th at Billingsport (where a post had been some time before established) for attacking the redoubt at Red-Bank, the enemy abandoned and blew up the work. They had passed several of their gallies unperceived above the town of Philadelphia, in the night of the 19th,¹ which proved very favourable for the purpose; and attempted to do the same with the rest of the gallies, and other waterforce, the following night: but being seasonably discovered, they were opposed with so much effect by Lieutenant Watt of the Roebuck (ordered by Captain Hammond, before my arrival, to take his station in the Delaware prize, near the town) that not more than three or four of the former appeared to have escaped: and being otherwise unable to prevent the capture of the rest of their arm'd craft (consisting of two zebecques, the two floating batteries, and several ships, besides fire vessels, amounting to about seventeen in number) they were quitted and burnt. Lieutenant Watt having testified great propriety and spirit on this occasion, I have continued him in the command of the Delaware, retained as an arm'd ship in the service, to remain near the town of Philadelphia, where such additional naval force is particularly requisite.

A more accurate inspection of the obstructions to the navigation of the river adjacent to Fort-Island, becoming practicable under the circumstances before mentioned, two channels were discovered thro' which the transports, containing the provisions, stores, and other necessaries for the army, might proceed to Philadelphia. They were ordered up the river accordingly, to be afterwards secured at the wharfs of the town, for the approaching winter months.

The unfortunate event of Lieutenant-General Burgoyne's operations with the northern army terminating, as I am advised by the Commander in Chief, with the surrender of those troops agreeable to the tenor of a convention executed the 16th of last October, has rendered a suitable provision necessary to be made for their conveyance to Europe. A proper number of transports has been appropriated for that occasion. But as it would be scarcely practicable this season of the year for light transports to gain the port of Boston, where the embarkation is conditioned to take place, the transports have been ordered under convoy of the Reasonable to Rhode-Island; that if the proposed alteration is adopted, and the troops can be embarked at that port, they may be sooner released.

The following are Copies of the Papers referred to in the aforementioned Extract.

Return of the number of men killed and wounded on board the different ships employed in the attack of the works of the enemy on Fort-Island, their armed craft, and other defences erected to obstruct the passage of the river Delaware, on the 15th day of November, 1777.

The following is copy and extract of two letters from the Hon. Gen. Sir William Howe, to Lord George Germain.

My Lord,

Philadelphia, Nov 28, 1777.

From a variety of difficulties attending the construction of additional batteries, in a morass, against the fort upon Mud-Island, and in the transportation of the guns and stores, they were not opened against the enemy's defences until the 10th instant. On the 15th, the wind proving fair, the Vigilant armed ship, carrying 16 twenty four pounders, and a hulk, with 3 twenty four pounders, got up to the fort through the channel between Province and Hog islands; these assisted by several ships of war in the eastern channel, as well as by the batteries on shore, did such execution upon the fort and collateral block-houses, that the enemy, dreading an impending assault, evacuated the island in the night between the 15th and 16th, and it was possessed on the 16th, at daybreak, by the grenadiers of the guards. Much commendation is due to Brigadier General Cleaveland, to the officers and men of the corps of artillery, and to the troops in general employed upon this service, attended with great fatigue.

The enemy's fire upon the ships of war, the Vigilant, and Hulk, from two floating batteries, seventeen gallies and armed vessels, and from a battery on the Jersey shore, was exceedingly heavy; but the gallantry displayed by the naval commanders, their officers and seamen, on this occasion, frustrated all their efforts, and contributed principally to the reduction of the enemy's works. Permit me, at the same time, to report to your Lordship, that the perseverance of the officers and seamen employed in bringing up stores from the fleet, under the conduct of Capt. Duncan of the Eagle, demand my highest acknowledgements: and that the services they rendered were most essential, and borne with the utmost cheerfulness.

I have the honor to enclose a return, No. 1, of the cannon and stores found in the fort. The enemy's loss during the siege is computed to have been 400 killed and wounded. The loss to the King's troops was only seven killed and five wounded.

On the 18th at night Lord Cornwallis marched with a corps from camp, and passed the Delaware on the 19th from Chester to Billingsport, where he was joined by Major General Sir Thomas Wilson, with a corps that arrived a few days before from New York under his command, having with him Brigadier Generals Leslie and Pattison.

As soon as the necessary preparations were made, his Lordship pursued his march to attack the enemy entrenched at Red Bank. Upon his approach, the rebels evacuated the post, and retired to Mount Holly, where they joined a corps of observation, detached from the main army of the rebels, encamped at White Marsh. His Lordship found in the enemy's works cannon, ammunition, and stores as per return, No. 2. The entrenchment being demolished, his corps returned by Gloucester on the 27th, and joined the army in this camp.

The enemy's shipping having no longer any protection, and not finding it advisable to attempt the passage of the river, the channel being commanded by the batteries of the town, and the Delaware frigate, they were quitted, without being dismantled, and burnt on the night between the 20th and 21st; but the gallies of a smaller draught of water, by keeping close along the Jersey shore, escaped from the great breadth of the river.

A forward movement against the enemy will immediately take place, and I hope will be attended with the success that is due to the spirit and activity of his Majesty's troops.¹

The passage of the river, by the reduction of the two places aforementioned has been sufficiently opened to bring up frigates and transports; but the removal of the cheveaux de frize is postponed to a more favourable season.

Major General Sir Thomas Spencer Wilson, having represented the very critical situation of his private concerns in England, has my leave to return, and has taken charge of my dispatches to your Lordship, by the Eagle packet.

With the most perfect respect,

I have the honour to be, &c.

W. Howe.

—New York Gazette and Weekly Mercury, March 16, 1778.

WILLIAM LIVINGSTON, Esq.

Governor, Captain-General and Commander in Chief in and over the State of New-Jersey, and the Territories thereunto belonging, Chancellor and Ordinary in the same;

A PROCLAMATION.

WHEREAS this State, ever ready to support the common cause of American Liberty, and to exert its most strenuous efforts against the unnatural enemies thereof, has made ample provision for furnishing the army of the United States, in a legal and reasonable manner, with all the necessaries it is able to spare, and for impressing carriages and horses for transporting the baggage, provisions and warlike stores of the troops: And whereas it has been represented to me that divers persons acting as deputies in the several departments of Quarter-Master and Commissary for the said army, have been guilty of manifold oppressions, and frequently seized by violence and in derogation of all government, what they might have peaceably procured either by the voluntary consent of the proprietors, or in the mode prescribed by law; and many of the inhabitants, labouring under the said oppressions are unacquainted with the extent of the authority under colour of which they are exercised as well as with the proper means for obtaining redress, and may by the continuation thereof abate their zeal for the glorious cause in which they have hitherto exhibited the most laudable ardor. And whereas it is the glory and felicity of this State to preserve its laws inviolate, to restrain all illicit exertions of power not warranted by inevitable necessity, and to protect the persons and property of its loyal citizens from all arbitrary insult and violence, under whatever pretence offered or attempted: And whereas the authority of all persons employed as aforesaid to impress carriages, horses, cattle and drivers, and to purchase provisions for the army in this State, is regulated and circumscribed by two certain acts of assembly, one of which is intitled "An Act to explain the law and constitution of the State of New-Jersey as to the quartering of, and furnishing of carriages for the army in the service of the United States of North America, and for making some further provision for the same," passed the eleventh day of October last; and the other intitled, "An Act for regulating and limiting the prices of sundry articles of produce, manufacture and trade, and to prevent forestalling, regrating and engrossing," passed the eleventh day of December last: By the former of which acts any constable, by order of a justice of the peace, upon the application of any commanding officer of any of the troops of the United States, may impress such carriages, draught horses, cattle and drivers as are needed for the transporting the baggage, provision or warlike stores of such troops, or any stores or provisions belonging to the continental army, provided such carriages, horses, cattle and drivers are not detained in the service longer than three days at any one time, unless with the consent of the owners: And by the latter of which acts the persons so employed as aforesaid are obliged, before they are authorized to seize the articles wanted, to obtain a warrant from a justice of the peace, which is not to be granted till the person refusing to sell them has been summoned to appear before him, and either refuses to appear, or, on appearing, it shall be evident to the justice that he is so possessed of a greater quantity of the articles wanted by the applicant than is necessary for his family's annual consumption. I HAVE THEREFORE THOUGHT FIT, by and with the advice of the privy council, to issue this proclamation in order to render it the more notorious, both to the good people of this State and to the deputies and agents aforesaid, that the impressing of carriages, draught-horses, cattle and drivers, and the seizure of any private property by any of the said deputies not authorized by either of the recited acts, is altogether lawless and arbitrary, and that all persons guilty thereof ought to be apprehended and proceeded against in a due course of law. And I do hereby strictly charge all justices of the peace and other officers whom it may concern to be diligent in the execution of the said acts, and to prevent as far as possible the violation thereof, as well by any disaffected inhabitants who shall withhold from the army what they ought, agreeably to the true intent and meaning thereof, to spare and furnish, as by any illegal exactions upon the citizens of this state by any of the said deputies and agents; and all persons aggrieved by such exactions, and not obtaining redress upon due application for that purpose to the magistrates, are hereby directed to transmit affidavits of the grievances suffered, and of the delay or refusal of justice, to me or to the president and council of safety, in order that the delinquents may be brought to speedy and condign punishment.

AND WHEREAS by a resolution of the honourable the Congress of the ninth day of February last, the Supreme Executive Powers of every State are authorised to suspend from pay and employment, for misbehaviour or neglect of duty within their respective States, any officer of the staff, or civil continental officer, not immediately appointed by Congress, and to make a temporary appointment in his place if necessary, I have further thought fit hereby to request all the citizens of this State, zealous for the weal of America, and abhorrent of all publick mismanagement, peculation, misbehaviour or neglect of duty in any civil continental officer, and able to prove such perpetration or neglect within the same, to transmit the proofs thereof to me, that the same may be duly considered, and the party offending dealt with as the case shall appear to require.

GIVEN under my hand and seal at arms at Trenton, the ninth day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and seventy-eight.

By his Excellency's command, } WIL. LIVINGSTON.
CHA. PETTIT, Sec.

Mr. COLLINS,

FROM the easy surrender of your correspondent T. W. No. 13. I should not fear retaking him, if I did not suspect he had in his drawers stronger troops than those Pigmies brought against him by his poetical friend. With your leave, however, I will venture to attack.

As his fears in the first objection arise wholly from his ignorance, they will be removed by informing him, that by the Confederation of the United States, Art. 8, the quota of each state is to be "in proportion to the value of all land within each state, granted to, or surveyed for, any person, as such land and the building and improvements thereon shall be estimated according to such mode as the United States in Congress assembled shall from time to time direct and appoint." Consequently the quota of this state will not be affected by a law which will drag to the light from the dark desks of usurers, a list of their wealth.

The second objection is, that the measure is impracticable. This is the only objection I ever heard on this subject, that deserves serious attention, or that can any way impede the legislature. Our objector ranks bonds among things invisible—and I really believe the good man is under the influence of these invisible things. But let us rub our eyes—True, they are not as big as a horse or a cow; but our Assembly will hardly appoint men to offices who are so blind that they cannot by the help of spectacles be able to see a bond. Aye, but they are locked up in drawers, and who would be a pimp, especially a legal pimp—and my horse is locked up in my stable; and I think the business as low and dirty to search a stable as a desk. Few assessors either count a man's stock, or measure his land; and why not take a man's word for his bonds? because, you say, the neighbours know how much land, &c. a man has. And I believe neighbours will generally guess as near the amount of a man's money upon interest, as the acres of his improved land, or number of his flock. Let money, not returned, be forfeited, and the assessor will have as honest a list of bonds as other articles. But the objector himself has proposed a plan for rendering practicable this impracticable business, and one too which he calls just and equitable—let the borrower pay the tax out of the interest due to the lender.

The usurer has gone so far in his reasonings upon this head, as to afford strong grounds to suspect he had something more in view than to save his bonds from being taxed. What can be his views in magnifying the experience and wisdom of Britain for legislation! Can Americans say amen to this? Why does he intimate his wish, that we should imitate, especially in taxation, that band of bought slaves! Why wish for bearing the burden upon the same shoulder! Alas! poor soul, the revolution and independency sticks in his weak stomach! Let him vomit or choak.

Under this head also we hear of the novelty of the proposed scheme for taxing bonds. Can a monied American be so unacquainted with the police of the several states? In this province he may call it new, because heretofore those monied gentry have had interest and integrity enough to cast the burden off themselves upon their poorer neighbours. But this was not the case in the other provinces. In South-Carolina the measure now talked of and wished for by the inhabitants of this state in general, was carried to its fullest extent; and I never heard even the monied men complain of it as impracticable or unjust, although I have talked with them very particularly on that head: they were more generous and just.

The honest usurer objects against the measure, in the third place, as unjust. A charge so heavy must call our attention. The maxim of all writers, favourable to liberty, is, that property must pay the taxes, because property is defended. The demand of government then must be upon the owners of property. And if common sense and common honesty does not require that each one pays in proportion to his property, we have lost the use of words and rules of proportion. The question now is, not how we shall come to the knowledge of mens property, and whether villains may not elude our scrutiny. We are enquiring what is just. For however strange it is, to this bar the miser hath appealed. And is not this equitable and just, to pay in proportion to property owned? And does the monied man own property? If he does, why not pay for its defence? Having his property in money, rather than land or any thing else, is his own choice. If he thought he should be a gainer by turning it into land, he would undoubtedly do it. His property in money is as much defended as another man's property in land; yet it is unjust to tax his property, because he can hide it in his desk, and will not be honest enough to tell of it—nay, will swear false to prevent the knowledge of it, and will call a man a pimp if he looks for it.

Suppose we should try the usurer's illustration, perhaps it may help us to see to which side the scale of justice inclines. B purchases a farm from A for 1000s. and gives his bond and a mortgage upon the land for the money. When B made the purchase, he was worth nothing. He gave as much for the land as it was worth. Has he by this bargain acquired any property? But B is taxed—the justice of this is not scrupled. By and by A, the real owner, for he has a bond and mortgage, by a suit at law dispossesses poor B, recovers the land, and strips his family into the bargain. Yet monied A all this time pays no tax for his property. Is this your idea of justice, Mr. Usurer? Kind heaven! deliver my country, now escaped the snare, from such legislators.

But our miser is turned penitent. The plea of justice failed him, and instead of merit he supplicates for mercy. He is poor. He who at one time seems vain enough of the epithet, a monied man, now begs publick alms. His money is depreciated, and will not bear a tax. Miser like, to save a penny, will tell you long stories about losses and hard times. Poor creature! if he would keep upon his knees, I would fling him a copper to be quit of him, but like the Pharisee, his heart betrays him, and he still seems disposed to make a plea of right. This is his intention, when, under the fourth head, he asserts that money is always taxed in the hands of the borrower. He should have said, when the borrower is pleased to lay the money out in articles that are taxed—for farther than this his assertion can not be true. One who was a stranger to the subject would suppose usurers had no securities for their property. But it was solely in the possession of the borrower, and not in the power, nor for the emolument of the lender. Let these humane men alone for that. Desolated families and long imprisonments have taught many otherwise.

It cannot be the duty of any state, especially these in America, which so greatly need the personal service of every member, to encourage usurers. The man who by industry and frugality acquires more than his annual consumption, and lends that upon interest, without relaxing in industry, is a useful member in the community; but the man who lives upon the interest of his money, what advantage is he to the state? When he dies what injury hath the state suffered? He is, if we listen to our author, to pay no taxes. He does no labour. Is the state then by his death either poorer or weaker? He cannot carry with him his bonds or cash. He was a meer consumer. Rats and mice will answer the same purpose, with this in their favour, that they do not take up the room, nor stand in the way of industrious inhabitants.

I believe, Mr. Collins, you need not lament I had not more time to have written more largely upon this subject. I wish I could have spared time to shorten your labour; but I was under the necessity of sending this by the return of the post who brought me your paper, and through the day so crowded and interrupted by other business, that I could not correct. Your inserting it as it is, will probably oblige other of your customers, besides your friend and humble servant,

EQUAL TAXER.

TRENTON, March 18.

From a New-York (British) Paper.

By Major-General James A. Robertson, Commandant of New-York, &c. &c.

WHEREAS I am informed, that a number of sailors on Friday evening attacked, and with knives wounded and defaced three Hessian soldiers, and that several acts had been perpetrated, tending to raise a spirit of discord between nations, who have always lived together, whether in camp or garrison, with remarkable cordiality and affection.

Observing with great satisfaction, that General Schmidt, and the principal officers of the Hessian army, are taking every step to prevent or punish any insult from the part of their troops.

In like manner, I do require all that come into this city, to treat the Hessian troops with the civility due to strangers, and the kindness we owe to faithful allies and friends, and declare, that every attempt to destroy the cordiality that happily subsists between the two nations, will be considered as most prejudicial to the King's service.

Any person who will discover to me the author of the cruel attack on the Hessian soldiers, shall receive twenty pounds.

Given under my hand, this ninth day of February, one thousand and seven hundred and seventy-eight, and in the eighteenth year of his Majesty's reign.

JAMES ROBERTSON, M. G.

And Commandant of New-York.

["When I consider," says our correspondent Hortentius, "the infinite art of this crafty Scotchman, I am not a little surprised to find General Robertson publishing to the whole world, that the British sailors and Hessians in New-York are ready to cut each others throats whenever they meet. We were indeed sufficiently apprized, that between the English Tars and German Boors there subsisted an irreconcilable animosity. 'Till, however, it was published by authority, their Printers remained at liberty to deny it with the same effrontery that they contradict every other the most notorious and indubitable truth—But after this explicit acknowledgment, I suppose they will not presume, notwithstanding their proneness to print the thing that is not, to give the lie to the Commandant of New-York—they will at least once in their lives be compelled to acquiesce in silence with the publication of truth; as Milton says of Satan, that he was on a particular occasion for one moment stupidly good."] was unarmed, and consequently incapable of making any resistance, yet these heroes inhumanly shot him in the shoulder, of which wound he soon after expired—leaving a widow and son to lament his loss.

Tuesday se'nnight Brigadier-General Maxwell arrived here from head-quarters—and the day following Brigadier-General Count Pulaski set out from this place to wait upon His Excellency General Washington.

Desertion we hear has taken deep root among the enemy. Scarce one day passes, but two or three of the British or Hessian soldiers come out.

On the 10th instant the commissioners from the American and British army were to meet at Germantown in order to settle the terms of an exchange of prisoners.

We learn that on the 12th instant a fleet of transports, under convoy of several vessels of war, arrived at Philadelphia from Rhode-Island. On their passage up the Delaware, two of the transports, viz. the Katy and Mermaid, with forage, one of which mounting six four pounders, being at some distance a-head, were attacked by eight of our armed boats under the command of Captain Barry, who, after a smart but short engagement, obliged both of the ships to strike. Soon after the armed schooner Alert, mounting eight four pounders and ten howitz, came up, when another action commenced, and the Alert, notwithstanding she bravely defended herself, was also obliged to submit. The other armed vessels, which were convoying the remaining part of the fleet, observing at a distance the fate of the ships and schooner, made haste to their assistance, but our people having taken out the passengers, &c. and stripped the ships, set fire to them, by which they were destroyed. Captain Barry intended to have run the schooner into Christiana Creek,¹ but finding himself too closely pursued by the enemy, he put her ashore near Hamburg a little below Newcastle, where he got out most of the valuable articles.—Col.

WHEREAS the Honorable the Congress have resolved that all accounts of money, provisions, and other necessaries, which have been supplied to prisoners that have been taken by the United States since the commencement of the war, until the first day of March instant, should be transmitted as speedily as possible to the Commissioners of Claims at the Board of Treasury: And that the respective States sustain the losses that may arise from detaining such accounts longer than the fifteenth day of April next. Therefore the Committee of the Council and Assembly of this State appointed to adjust and settle the said accounts, do hereby request all persons within this State who have any such demands or accounts (not heretofore transmitted to Congress) to produce the same properly authenticated to the said Committee at Trenton on or before the first day of April next; and that those who do not prefer their accounts by that time may expect to sustain the losses that arise from such delay.

JOS. JAY, Lieut.

For the NEW-JERSEY GAZETTE.

Mr. COLLINS,

OF all the ebullitions of disappointed malice, I never met with a more outrageous instance than General Tryon's answer to General Parson's letter. Could I possibly conceive myself accountable (says this self-justifying incendiary) to any revolted subjects of the King of Great-Britain, &c. Is there any insinuation in General Parson's letter to warrant such a piece of incivility? Is my giving a man who is reported to have directed the most horrid barbarities, an opportunity to disavow them, before I retaliate upon bare report, assuming a right of making him accountable? Had General Parsons made no such request, but proceed upon the report as true, and had it afterwards proved false, would not General Tryon have made it a matter of complaint that he built upon common fame, when it was in his power to have obtained a disavowal of the charge? But let me tell this waspish Gentleman, that for inhumanity every man is accountable to every man. Inhumanity is declaring war against all mankind, in which every individual of the species is concerned as man, abstracted from all other considerations. It cannot therefore be palliated by considering the man in this or that situation, because it is the violation of rights due to him as man, in any situation. But why this extreme indignation against revolted subjects? Doth this dependant on court-favour think every revolt, considered as such, a proper object of his wrath? Is he determined to kick the shins of every Portugese Gentleman he meets, because the Duke of Braganza revolted from Spain? Or is it a matter of indifference with him, whether a revolt be with or without foundation? Has he forgot that himself belongs to a nation which revolted from King James, before he had perpetrated a thousandth part of the cruelties and murders that have been committed by King George? And that upon the justice of that revolt is built all the right which King George has to the British throne?

I should, were I in more authority, burn every Committee-man's house within my reach. Well said, General ignipotent and primitial imp of Vesuvius! What pity it is that this little salamander is so unreasonably restricted in the exertions of his burning faculties! Surely had his master a due sense of his peculiar genius for reducing houses and barns to ashes, he would doubtless grant him an exclusive right to commit arson and constitute him (Vaughn's late merit notwithstanding) Conflagrator General of all America. Did ever any creature in human shape before this son of combustion publickly lament his want of power to consume houses by fire? But you are to know gentle reader, that this descendant of Vulcan, (not I presume by Venus the fair, but by Erinnys the fury) deems these agents the wicked instruments of the continued calamities of this country. But pray, Sir, who appointed, and who continues these Committee-men? Have they assumed their office; or were they elected by the people? or would the people continue them in office, unless they acted agreeable to their sentiments? Are these tremendous Committee-men stronger than the whole community, and able to exercise an usurped authority contrary to the inclinations of the publick; and that too with this terrific son of ignition at the head of the male-contents. In what numberless absurdities has the ridiculous rant of this angry man involved him? These same Committee-men, who at other times are an insignificant rabble, are now magnified into such a mountain of terror, that General Tryon is willing to give twenty silver dollars for every acting Committeeman who shall be delivered up to the King's troops. What an ambitious mortal this, to aspire after such a plurality of offices! Not content with being Conflagrator General, he now sets up for Universal Kidnapper, and is to save the nation from perdition by bribing a man's domesticks to deliver him up, whose place, when delivered up, would be instantly filled with another; the nation remaining exposed to the same perdition; and five dollars out of pocket by his nonsensical bargain. Doubtless this Gentleman had better bestow his silver dollars (and if he has any gold ones, they will not be mis-applied in the way I propose) to repair the damages sustained by the poor inhabitants of North-Carolina (when it was his duty to protect them) by the peculation of a set of villains of his appointment. But before the end of the next campaign (take courage noble General, and keep your purse in your pocket) these same Committee-men will be torn to pieces by their own countrymen, whom they have forcibly dragged into opposition against their lawful Sovereign, and compelled them to change their happy constitution for paper, rags, anarchy, and distress. Very lavish of your money indeed, good Master Tryon, to offer twenty dollars for a man who will so shortly be torn to pieces, without any expence of yours. I begin to suspect from such unnatural liberality, that this limb of Mount Ætna intends to score the whole reckoning to King George, which would rather be unconscionable, considering that he has already been dragged into so many idle bargains of this kind, that his troops in Philadelphia, instead of fingering any silver dollars, are ready to jump at the very sight of our paper and rags. And whatever we have changed the constitution to, (with which we are perfectly content, or we should not so vigorously defend)

I know full well, Major-General Firebrand, what we have changed it from, (and judge you whether that be preferable to paper and rags) it is, in plain English, from tyranny, corruption, villany and vassalage; to which, Sir, you are eternally welcome at one half of your premium for kidnapping a Committee-man. But by what kind of force did the Committee-men drag their countrymen into the opposition? It must certainly have been by the force of magic, and the Devil and Doctor Faustus must have helped them pull with all their might and main. For did you ever see, good Master Combustion, one man at one end of a rope, and one thousand at the other, and the first able to drag away the latter? Surely if these Committee-men are so incredibly strong, it will require a couple of regiments to hold a single prisoner; and then instead of twenty silver dollars, each of these giants may cost the nation twenty thousand. Nor can I see how General Tryon can save this expence, unless he grasp at another office, and turns burner of men as well as burner of houses. But in sober earnest, his charging the firing of New-York upon the inhabitants, whose interest it was to save it, is such a complication of cruelty and falsehood, as is rather to be detested in silence than capable of being expressed in words.

MR. COLLINS,

I HAD in contemplation to draw a petition to our assembly against taxing money at interest, to be presented if any motion should be made for it; but seeing the piece published in your last paper No. 13, against the measure, thinking perhaps it may answer a better purpose to put my objections in your Gazette, that the arguments and reasons may be seen as well by the represented as representatives. I have concluded to mention a few objections for your publication not noticed by that writer.

The measure for taxing money at interest has been long thought of by a large number of the inhabitants of New-Jersey, especially by the landed interest in whose favour this new tax was to be levied, as by so much as should be collected in that way, would be taken off or lessen their tax. Let us put the question, who is it that has made so many freeholders in New-Jersey for fifty years past, or ever since the settlement of it, has it not been the usurer? It is certain there is a great number of our able farmers who have made themselves so by hiring money, which if they could not have done, must have become or remained tenants perhaps their whole lives; and how much more useful freeholders are to the community than tenants, common observation teaches us. The proprietor of a plantation improves it, erects good buildings, and becomes a steady useful man to society. The tenant has no interest in erecting buildings or improving the lands, only to answer for the present crop, so that instead of a country being improved, in time it will be impoverished by tenants. And when the present gain of putting money to interest is stopped by being taxed or lowered, the usurer will immediately call in his money and lay it out in lands, so that in a few years we shall have treble the number of tenants we now have. This objection would have always stood good; but if we take a view of the present times, what advantage has the farmer or freeholder of the usurer? Have not the farmers estates doubled in value, and bonds sunk in proportion? Can a man's estate, being all in bonds of two thousand pounds, be now looked upon worth as much as one thousand pounds was to him three years ago? And in whose favour is this mighty charge? Is it not in the freeholders, the landed men who have heretofore hired money, made great profit by it, and grumbled because their bonds were not taxed in the hands of the possessor? I know a landed man who always hired comfortable sums of money, and by that means kept from selling any part of his estate, has very lately sold a plantation for upwards of one thousand pounds, which if he had advertised for sale for half the money from 1765 to 75 would not have met with a purchaser; and this is the way the farmers who are in debt in general through New-Jersey are selling and paying off their debts where they have not moveables to sell and answer their obligations. Won't every reasonable person plainly see and say that the estates which are increasing in value can and ought to pay the taxes? To tax persons for the money they have at interest is really adding to their ruin, and helping and easing those very persons who have made such great gain out of them as has been mentioned.

Philadelphia.

Sunday evening William Hamet, an intrepid young man, who had suffered much by the rebel plunderers, and desirous of serving his country by securing its enemies, hearing that there were two rebel officers at Benjamin Vanleer's in Jersey, passed over the Delaware with four others, with design to take them. On approaching the house, he judiciously placed one of his four companions as centries, at each corner of it, broke open the door, passed up to the room where the two officers lay, and with a fixed bayonet at their breasts, demanded their arms: Upon their denying they had any, he searched for them, and found under their bolster and on a table, two swords and three pistols, which he immediately secured, and conducted the gentlemen safe to the Provost in this city.

This is only one among many instances wherein the persecuted refugees now in this city, have shewn the like disinterested regard for their Country and attachment to their Sovereign—Indeed there is not a day but great numbers of them driven by the cruel hands of the most obdurate and merciless tyranny from all that is dear and valuable in life, are flocking to this city. And what will ever do them honor is, they are forming themselves into companies of volunteers, with a determined resolution to have satisfaction for the unprovoked injuries and cruelties they have sustained to aid their Sovereign in suppressing the most groundless and unnatural rebellion, and to restore peace to their unhappy Country.—The Pennsylvania Ledger, March 18, 1778.

By accounts from Salem County we learn, that a number of the British troops, supposed to be between fifteen hundred and two thousand, landed last Tuesday at the town of Salem, with whom our militia has had some skirmishes, but with no great loss on either side. Orders are issued for a large reinforcement of the militia to join Col. Ellis in Gloucester County; and Col. Shreve, with his battalion of Continental troops, has crossed the Delaware and is on his march to oppose the enemy.—It is reported that the militia of Cumberland have turned out with the most laudable spirit, and it is expected the British rovers will not be able to leave this State without great loss, unless they decamp with the hurry and confusion which distinguished their last visit—or rather visitation.

PHILADELPHIA

The King's troops have lost only one man killed since their going into the Jerseys: He was of the Queen's Rangers, and behaved gallantly in a skirmish with the militia, who have had twenty men killed on the spot, and ten prisoners taken, with a French Lieutenant on the recruiting service.

By a vessel which arrived here last Monday from Salem, we learn, that the King's troops, now in possession of that place, have collected a great quantity of forage, and that the transports which are now nearly loaded, will be ready to sail in a few days.—The Pennsylvania Ledger, March 25, 1778.

Philadelphia, March 11. On Friday Capt. Wigstaff, with part of his New-Jersey independent volunteers, went down to Penn's Neck, where they were attacked by two armed boats from Christeen, and having nothing but musquetry on board their sloop, were obliged to run her ashore, after exchanging several shot. After Capt. Wigstaff had quitted her, the rebels took out the provisions, and burnt the sloop. Capt. Wigstaff proceeded nine miles into the country, and came down to Raccoon Creek, where he and his men got on board a sloop, and returned to town with a quantity of provisions. During the excursion of this party of Captain Wigstaff's company, another small party of them went over to Billingsport, marched ten miles into the country, surrounded the house of Capt. Cousins,¹ of the militia, took him and his guard prisoners, and brought them to town.

New-York, March 30. A party of six of the rebel plunderers came down as near Powlis Hook, 'as Prior's mills, last Sunday week, and attempted to carry off a parcel of cattle from thence, but being seen were immediately pursued by a party of Col. Turnbull's² regiment, who soon obliged them to relinquish their plunder, and nothing but good heels prevented their being made prisoners. These gentry are commanded by one Johnston, whom they have chose for their captain, who all take what they can get, and have no commissions, nor orders for any of their proceedings.

On Friday a party of Col. Turnbull's New-York volunteers, under the command of Lieut. Haines, were dispatched towards the English Neighbourhood, in quest of some rebels that were said to be lurking thereabouts, when they seized in the house of one Degroote of that place four men armed, one of them was Lashier,³ who was concerned in the murder of Capt. John Richards, whose watch was found in his pocket, and another a serjeant belonging to Capt. Roorback, in Gen. De Lancey's⁴ first battalion.

TO HIS EXCELLENCY GENERAL WASHINGTON.

SAY—on what hallow'd altar shall I find,
A sacred spark that can again light up
The muse's ardour in my wane of life,
And warm my bosom with poetic flame
Extinguish'd long—and yet o WASHINGTON,
Thy worth unequall'd, thy heroic deeds,
Thy patriot virtues, and high-soaring fame,
Prompt irresistibly my feeble arm,
To grasp the long-forgotten lyre, and join
The universal chorus of thy praise.

When urg'd by thirst of arbitrary sway
And over-weaning pride, a ruthless king
Grim spurn'd us, suppliants, from his haughty throne,
And in the tyrant all the father lost;
When to our pray'rs, with humble duty urg'd,
He, PHARAOH-like, his heart obdurate steel'd,
Denouncing dreadful vengeance, unprovok'd,
And all the dire calamities of war—
No ray of mercy beaming from his brow,
No olive-branch extended in his hand;—
A sword unsheath'd, or ignominious yoke,
The only sad alternative propos'd—
Then with one voice thy country call'd thee forth, Thee, WASHINGTON, she call'd:—With modest blush,
But soul undaunted, thou the call obey'd,
To lead her armies to the martial field.—
Thee, WASHINGTON, she call'd to draw the sword,
And rather try the bloody chance of war
In virtue's cause, than suffer servile chains,
Intolerable bondage! to inclose
The limbs of those, whom God created free.

Lur'd by thy fame, and with thy virtues charm'd,
And by thy valour fir'd, around thee pour'd
AMERICA'S long-injur'd sons, resolv'd
To meet the veteran troops who oft had borne BRITANNIA'S name, in thunder, round the world.

With warrior-bands by Liberty impell'd,
 And all their country glowing at their heart;
 And prodigal of blood, when she requir'd,
 Tho' destitute of war's essential aids,
 (The well-stor'd armory, the nitrous grain,
 The roaring cannon, and death-bearing ball)
 Thou mad'st the solemn dread appeal to heav'n,—
 The solemn dread appeal th' Almighty heard,
 And smil'd success. Unfabled ASTREA weigh'd
 Our cause in her eternal scales, and found
 It just: While all-directing Providence,
 Invisible, yet seen, mysterious, crown'd,
 And more than crown'd our hopes; and strange to tell!
 Made British infidels, like Lucifer,
 Believe and tremble. Thou with troops new-rai'd,
 Undisciplin'd: nor to the tented field
 Inur'd, hast kept the hostile host aloof;
 And oft discomfited: While victory
 The laurel wreath around thy temples twin'd:
 And TRENTON, PRINCETON prove thy bold emprise;
 Names then unknown to song, illustrious now,
 Deriving immortality from thee.

Proceed, heaven-guided Chief, nor be dismay'd
 At foreign myriads, or domestic foes,
 (The best have foes, and foes evince their worth)
 Soon by one danger rous'd, one soul inspir'd,
 One cause defending, on one goal intent,
 From every quarter whence the winds can blow,
 Assembled hosts their Hero shall attend,
 Determin'd to be free—Them shalt thou lead,
 To conquest lead, and make the tyrant rue
 His execrable purpose to enslave;
 And teach e'en British folly to be wise.
 Far as the encircling sun his chariot drives,
 Thy fame shall spread; thy grateful country own
 Her millions sav'd by thy victorious arm;
 And rear eternal monuments of praise.

The arduous task absolv'd, the truncheon broke;
 Of future glory, liberty and peace
 The strong foundations laid, methinks I see
 The god-like Hero gracefully retire,
 And (blood-stained MARS for fair POMONA chang'd)
 His rural seat regain: His rural seat
 Fresh-blooming at his visitation, smiles;
 And in expressive silence speaks her joy.
 There, recollecting oft thy past exploits,
 (Feast of the soul ne'er cloying appetite)
 And still assiduous for the public weal;

(Incumbent duty ne'er effac'd) amidst Sequester'd haunts, and in the calm of life,
 Methinks I see thee, SOLON-like, design
 The future grandeur of confederate States
 High tow'ring; or for legislation met,
 Adjust in senate what thou sav'd in war.
 And when by thousands wept, thou shall resign
 Thy sky-infus'd, and sky-returning spark,
 May light supernal gild thy mortal hour,
But mortal to translate thee into life
 That knows not death; and then heavens all-ruling sire
 Shall introduce thee to thy glad compeers,
 The HAMPDENS, SIDNEYS, Freedom's genuine sons!
 And BRUTUS' venerable shade, high-rais'd
 On thrones erected in the taste of heav'n,
 Distinguish'd thrones for patriot demi-gods,
 (Who for their country's weal or toiled, or bled,)
 And one reserv'd for thee: There envy's shafts
 Nor tyrants e'er intrude, nor slavery clanks
 Her galling chain; but star-crown'd LIBERTY
 Resplendent goddess! everlasting reigns.

TRENTON, April 1.

Agreeable to a Resolution of Congress, His Excellency the Governor of this state, with the advice of the Privy Council, has appointed Wednesday the 22d instant, to be observed as a day of fasting, humiliation and prayer.

On Sunday night last a heavy northeast storm came on, and continued till Monday morning.

Last week a brig from Ireland, bound to New-York, with a large quantity of linen, butter, &c. &c. was taken off Egg-Harbour—and carried into a safe port. The sailors and several other persons, who were made prisoners in the brig, were brought to this town yesterday.

We hear from Somerset County that on Friday the 20 ult. Mr. JOHN GORDON, in the 83d year of his age, was married to Miss SUKEY LANE, a young lady of 18.

Trenton, March 27, 1778.

WHEREAS the Co-Partnership of SINGER and WITT is desolved, they request all persons anyways indebted to said Partnership to pay off their respective accounts.

Likewise all persons indebted to either of them are requested to discharge their several accounts. And all those who have any demands against either of them, are desired to call and receive payment.

ROBERT SINGER.

FRANCIS WITT.

March 28, 1778.

TEN DOLLARS REWARD.

RAN AWAY from the subscriber the 20th instant, a negro fellow named BEN, 22 years of age, remarkably stout and well made: Had on, when he went away, a homespun bearskin coat and jacket, leather breeches, and white stockings. He is supposed to be lurking about the neighbourhood of Trenton. Whoever takes up and secures said negro in any gaol so that his master may have him again, shall have the above reward, and all reasonable charges paid by

ELISHA LAWRENCE.

Freehold, March 21, 1778.

JOSEPH RUE,

INTENDS to open a Latin school the 13th day of the ensuing month (April) at the house of Mr. Henry Perine, in Freehold, county of Monmouth, New-Jersey: Where the scholars shall be accommodated in the best manner, and at the lowest expence. All parents willing to put their children under his tuition, are desired to apply to him before the above day.

Wanted for Employment in Camp,

A good clerk, well skilled in Accounts, and who can produce satisfactory testimonials of his abilities and integrity; to whom a suitable salary will be given. Apply to the Printer, or at the Quarter-Master-General's Office in Camp.

TO BE SOLD,

By BENJAMIN SMITH, in TRENTON,

GREEN TEA; loaf and muscovado sugar; chocolate; pepper; allspice; cinnamon; allum; needles; mohair; sleeve buttons; fine and coarse teeth combs; sweeping and scrubbing brushes; tobacco, &c. &c.

LOFTY,

AN imported HORSE from Great-Britain, is in full health and vigour, and stands at the stables of Mr. William Phillips in Maidenhead, in New-Jersey, and will cover Mares the ensuing season at the rate of EIGHT POUNDS each Mare. The proprietors of him have thought proper, the better to serve the public, to limit the number of Mares he shall cover to 40. Those that incline to send Mares for that purpose, will please to signify their intentions to the said William Phillips as early as possible, because the first applications, that extend to the above number, will have their mares covered by the season, and no others will be received after the list is complete. LOFTY's size, colour and pedigree having been heretofore published, supersede the necessity of repetition.

Also HECTOR an imported Horse, well known in this and the adjacent parts of the country, stands at the same place, and will likewise cover at TEN DOLLARS the season, and FIVE DOLLARS the single leap.

Good pasture for mares will be provided.

Maidenhead, March 21, 1778.

All persons indebted to the estate of Ennis Graham, late of the city of New-York, deceased, are requested to make immediate payment to Elizabeth Graham, at Bound-Brook, Executrix, or to Mr. Walter Buchanan, at Morris-Town, or to Mr. John Thomson, at Pluckimin, New-Jersey, Executors of said estate. And all persons having demands against the same, are desired to make them without delay to the said Elizabeth Graham.

Said Elizabeth Graham has for sale superfine broad-cloths of various colours, casamiers, rattinets, shalloons, durants, hairbinds, black and scarlet serge desoy for breeches, white crape, cut and uncut Genoa velvets, silk and hair shag velvets, collar velvets, plushes, silks for vests and breeches, silk breeches patterns, embroidered tambour vests, striped Damascus, nankeens, yellow canvas for stays, braid, gold and silver buttons, silk and hair buttons, metal ditto, scarf twist, sewing silks, silk stockings, knee garters, silk ferrits, silver buttons and loops for hats, mens gloves, sleeve buttons, mens thimbles, needles, tapes, livery lace, &c. &c.

TO BE SOLD,

A GOOD FARM, situate in New-Jersey, Somerset county, near New Shannock,¹ one mile from the church, and about 15 or 16 miles from New Brunswick, containing 235 acres, has on it a very good stone dwelling house well built, three rooms on a floor, and under it a very good cellar of one half the bigness of the whole house, on the other half a good kitchen, and the out-houses but indifferent; a good orchard; the land is good for wheat and pasture; there is no great deal of meadow, but plenty of woodland. Whoever inclines to purchase may apply to Peter Schenck at Millstone, or Abraham Demott, at said church near the premises, who will agree on reasonable terms. The purchaser may have immediate possession.

FINE SAFFRON, PIGTAIL, PLUG and SQUARE CUT TOBACCO, to be sold WHOLESALE and RETAIL, by ISAAC HEULINGS, At his TOBACCO MANUFACTORY in BURLINGTON.

STOLEN on the 25th of March 1778, from under the shed of Thomas Bullman, at Pennington, a dark grey MARE, with a saddle and bridle almost new, she is about fourteen hands high, trots and paces, has a blaze in her forehead, was shod before, and has a middling long switch tail. Whoever takes up the thief, so that he may be brought to justice, and secures the mare, shall have TWENTY DOLLARS reward, or TWELVE DOLLARS for the mare only, paid by JOSEPH VANKIRK, living near Pennington.

For the NEW-JERSEY GAZETTE.

Mr. PRINTER,

THE source of malice is inexhaustible; and to this the enemies of mankind have recourse, when all others fail them. A favourite object is to be obtained, however base and ungenerous the means necessary therefor. Hence it is that slander and defamation are so prevalent in the world. The sacred regard ever due to an unblemished reputation is of no farther estimation than as it coincides with the darling scheme: And if the station of any one should interfere, his character will suffer in proportion to the influence of the calumniator.

It has ever been matter of the highest pleasure to me, and, I dare say, to every American feeling himself nearly interested in the fate of his country, that the character of our great Commander has invariably been held in the most profound veneration. Nothing could give the common enemy more satisfaction than to diminish the esteem and applause he so justly receives. They have made some feeble efforts towards it: Their gazettes, the common vehicles of falsehood, have echoed a language their judgment never approved; and, no doubt, there are some among ourselves so lost to every principle of honour and integrity, as willingly to aid their diabolic attempts.

Men in high stations, however exalted their accomplishments, are always subject to the ill-natured censures of restless mortals, who expect to derive certain advantages from their own iniquity. There is a species of ambition, unawed by patriotism, uncurbed by reason, endued with the faculty of converting emulation into envy. People under the influence of this unruly passion, anxious of obtaining an exalted boon, and conscious of their unworthiness to possess it, direct their malevolence against those whose virtues they admire but cannot imitate. Detraction is substituted for proof of weakness, and false insinuations for wickedness of heart. This kind of artifice may impose upon the credulous and confirm the base, but will ever fill the un-biassed mind, actuated by noble sentiments, with indignation.

It is a fact universally admitted, that publick confidence is requisite to support publick characters. The man who has no fixed interest in the publick opinion cannot rise in competition with him who hath.

In the beginning of this controversy, it is well known that General Washington was the only man to whom every part of America looked as a leader capable of conducting them through the impending storm. His uncommon abilities, his patience, fortitude and humanity have furnished the most convincing proofs that Heaven directed their choice. The many seemingly insurmountable difficulties he has encountered, attended with trifling misfortunes, serve to display his illustrious greatness and demonstrate indisputably that conquest, upon equal terms, could never sufficiently brighten the path of glory he was destined to pursue. A single victory, gained by lucky circumstances and followed by happy events, may immortalize a man of common abilities moving in a subordinate sphere; but, should his pride and vanity carry his ambition beyond its proper bounds, a single misfortune will render his condition infinitely worse than if he had never been successful: For, instead of sinking into desirable obscurity, his name will live in universal abhorrence and contempt.

That man alone who conducts with equal prudence and fortitude in prosperity and adversity: who possesses resources within himself for all occasions; who despising the malicious censures of wicked and designing men, places a love of fame in real magnanimity; whose patriotic sentiments and conduct induce him to submit to the toils and hardships of the military life from an insatiable love to his country, is qualified to command the armies of America. That man is the virtuous Washington; and that man will be dear to millions yet unborn, when the page of history will record some for their insignificance only, who now dare speak disrespectfully of him.

Go on illustrious Chief! to lead thy chosen bands,
With increas'd numbers, to the field of Mars;
There, snatching victory from the British foe,
Give peace and plenty to a bleeding land.
Then—heaven approving thy exalted deeds,
While grateful millions hail thee father, friend—
Return with laurels to thy happy mount,
And taste a-new the sweets of private life.
Rekindled in thy breast, the pure, the tender flame,
Endear'd by wedlock's holy, sacred rites,
Enjoy, in social converse and connubial love,
The most enrapturing charms that e'er adorned the fair.

When all the earthly joys that mortals can possess,
 Or heaven bestow on patriotic minds,
 Shall cease to please; and thy great soul,
 Impatient of delay, shall burst the brittle shell
 Which holds it here,—expanded as the light of morn
 Oh! may'st thou then ascend on wings seraphic,
 To thy native skies: where smiling angels,
 Crouting to behold the conquering Hero,
 Shall lead thee, all immortal, all divine,
 Up to the throne of God; there, freed from all thy toils
 On earth, and crown'd with never fading glory, Eternity itself employ'd shall make thee happy!

A CITIZEN.¹

PHILADELPHIA

Nothing can be a stronger proof of the disaffection of the inhabitants of New-Jersey, to the interest of rebellion, than their behavior to the troops, who went from this city on the eleventh ult. under col. Mawhood. When they landed at Salem, none was found to oppose or impede them from collecting forage, excepting a few, who had been prevailed upon to abandon their houses, and, on the third day after the landing of the troops, to shew themselves in arms, but the number being insignificant, they were easily crushed, and the whole killed or taken prisoners. Some days after, information was received, that a party of the rebels were collecting at a place called Hancock's bridge, on which the Queen's rangers were²

² In spite of the flippant character of this description of the most famous of the various raids along the Delaware river, the entire affair was highly discreditable to the Anglo-Hessian arms. According to military records the descent upon Salem county was made by Anglo-Hessian troops from Philadelphia, assisted by detachments from New Jersey's loyalist regiments and unorganized bands of refugee robbers. A detached regiment from Philadelphia, under the command of Colonel Charles Mawhood, having come down the river and encamping at Sharptown, marched into Salem City. Failing to surprise Colonel Anthony Wayne and a small body of troops, the British, recruiting a party of Tory adherents, known by their uniform as "Greens," resolved to "chastise the insolent rebels," among whom were three hundred militia at Quinton's Bridge, three miles from Salem City. The Whig commander at this place was Colonel Benjamin Holmes. Resolving, with Spartan-like courage, to protect the people of the southern part of the county, Colonel Holmes made such preparations for his defense as the situation afforded. Early upon the morning of the 18th of March the British advanced undiscovered to within half a mile of Quinton's Bridge, secreting themselves in a swamp and in nearby timber, which lined the bank of Alloway's creek. A small party of light horsemen then advanced as if to challenge the Whigs. The ruse was successful, and from the opposite shore the militia, under the command of Captain William Smith, rushed without military order across the bridge and into the ambuscade. In spite of Captain Smith's effort to rally his men, the timely appearance of Colonel Hand with the Cumberland militia, and the personal heroism of Andrew Bacon, who cut the draw of the bridge and in the midst of a galling fire held the King's troops in check, the Whig militia was decimated.

Thus defeated by a body of raw troops, who were in a state of exultation over their success, Major Simcoe, appealing to Colonel Mawhood, was reinforced by all the troops that could, with safety, be sent from Salem City. The night had been devoted to strengthening the position of the Whig militia, which, under the direction of Colonels Holmes and Hand, controlled the front and both flanks of the advancing British regulars. So galling was the fire that the King's troops were thrown into confusion and retreated to Salem City.

Failing in his purpose of plundering, Colonel Mawhood adopted new tactics. Addressing a letter to Colonel Hand, he proposed that the militia at Quinton's Bridge lay down their arms, promising that after paying in sterling for all cattle, hay and corn, he would re-embark for Philadelphia. Otherwise Colonel Mawhood declared he would burn and destroy the homes of the Whigs, giving over their wives and children to the tender mercies of the refugees. To this was annexed a list of those in Salem county who would be first to "feed the vengeance of the British nation." To the letter Colonel Hand made a bold and spirited reply, characterizing the communication as the "cruel order of a barbarous Attila," refusing to lay down arms and promising retaliation if property was destroyed.

Unable to cope with the Whigs of Salem county, either by open attack or by threats, Colonel Mawhood determined upon a midnight assault against a body of four hundred militia who had been stationed at Hancock's Bridge. Conveyed thence by boats, followed by a short, forced march, with orders issued from headquarters: "Go! spare no one—put all to death—give no quarter!" Major Simcoe was detailed to put into execution a fiendish plot, in which the most notorious of the local Tories participated. Fortunately, however, the main body of the militia had departed, leaving only a small guard stationed to guard the bridge, the headquarters being the Hancock mansion. Forcing the house, the owner of the premises, Judge Hancock, a party of non-combatant Quakers and the guard of about twenty-five men, were massacred as they slept or bayoneted as they fought for freedom. A few escaped or were taken prisoners by the enemy. This ended the expedition, and within a few days the Anglo-Hessian troops returned to Philadelphia, their vessels laden with plunder. It will be noticed that no reference whatever is made to the affair at Quinton's Bridge.

sent off in boats, landed at the back of them, and after killing and wounding a part, made prisoners of the residue. The rebels never afterwards appeared in force, so that the troops collected the forage without any interruption, and the inhabitants from all quarters flocked to them, bringing what cattle, provision, &c. they could spare, for which they received a generous price; but lamented much that the army was to depart, and leave them again to the tyranny of the rebel faction. How far this may correspond, with the pompous description which will be given to the world, by the immaculate Mr. Livingston, is a matter of little moment as truth, will shine with superior lustre to misrepresentation. If it is said that the king's troops evacuated the place, before the militia could be called, it will stand the test; for it is an uncontrovertable fact, that in a circuit of upwards or sixty miles, three hundred men could not be mustered; the people being fully sensible of their error, and heartily tired of the petty tyrants, who have galled and broke their spirits. This needs no farther elucidation than that, in the place of fourteen hundred men who heretofore appeared and voted at the election of their assemblymen, no more than eight constituted the majority of the last electors, which is an evident demonstration that it is now a matter of indifference who now takes the lead, as tyranny and oppression is only to be expected from such as are willing to be of the number, who constitute that illegal assembly.—The Pennsylvania Evening Post, April 3, 1778.

On Tuesday last a party of the refugees, with a few marines, marched towards Woodbury, upon hearing the militia had collected about that place;—we have not heard that the event of this march farther than that a large number of cattle has been taken.—Royal Pennsylvania Gazette, April 3, 1778.

Yesterday upwards of thirty prisoners were brought in from the Jersies. One of them is a major Ellis, who has been a violent persecutor of the friends of government. It is said they were taken near Haddonfield, being stationed to prevent the country people coming to market.—The Pennsylvania Evening Post, April 6, 1778.

New York, April 6. Last Week four Rebels were taken near Bergen by a Party of Colonel Turnbull's New-York Volunteers.

We have a Report that there has been a Skirmish between a Party of the King's Troops and the Rebels, at or near Coryell's Ferry, in New-Jersey, in which the Latter were very severely handled.—New York Gazette and Weekly Mercury, April 6, 1778.

TRENTON, April 8.

On Saturday last the GENERAL ASSEMBLY of this State adjourned to Princeton, where they are now sitting, for the further dispatch of business.

April 1, 1778.*

“The late storm has destroyed many of the small salt-works on our shore, with all the salt in them.—The night tide was several feet higher than has ever been known before—a considerable number of horned cattle¹ were drowned on Long Beach and other places. The Long Beach is almost wholly levelled, and but little more of it than a sand bar left—The furniture has floated out of the lower rooms of some houses that stood low on the water-side. The inhabitants never saw so distressing a time.”

From a correspondent we have received the following Intelligence:

“On Saturday the 21st ult. about break of day our guard posted at Hancock’s bridge, on Alloways creek, in Salem county, consisting of about twenty men, were surprized by those the enemy call Jersey Volunteers: They, from their acquaintance with the country, had found means to cross the creek and come upon the guard from some unsuspected quarter; and being undoubtedly led by some person well acquainted with the disposition of centries, opened the guard-house door and came in, many of the guard being asleep, without giving the least alarm, nay, so far from it, that it is said some of them shook hands in a friendly manner with some of the guard with whom they were intimately acquainted, as indeed they were with most of them: and—O tempora, O mores!—immediately began bayoneting of them, without our people making the least show of resistance, not only reeking their fury on the guard but also on several of the peaceable inhabitants who were slumbering in their beds. One Bacon, of the people called Quakers, was inhumanly murdered in his own house and bed; old Mr. Hancock, beside his being of that society, was a cripple in both his arms, was stabbed in his bed, and is since dead of his wounds. Another of that society is also since dead of his wounds; and the life of a fourth person is despaired of.”

The enemy, after immortalizing the British arms in the way above-mentioned, and having collected a large quantity of forage, &c. embarked with their booty for Philadelphia.

We hear that on Saturday morning last, Colonel Shreve who commands the second Jersey regiment, sent a party of men under Major Howell¹ to join some of the Salem and Cumberland militia, in order to invest Billingsport, where about 150 tories had been intrenching and fortifying themselves; but the militia not arriving in time, and the tories getting information, the Major returned to Haddonfield, where Col. Shreve had taken post. The enemy in Philadelphia getting intelligence of what had passed, despatched 1400 men about nine o'clock at night, who landed at Gloucester Point, making a circuitous rout, with intent to surprize Col. Shreve; but the Colonel, though in the dead of night, received intelligence of the enemy's movement, and his troops, being greatly inferior in number, all retired to Mountholly about three o'clock on Sunday morning, except three who were bayoneted by the enemy on their arrival. One of our cavalry, who had been dispatched to give notice to the guard at Cooper's ferry, was also killed on his way, by which means the guard had no notice of the enemy's approach, and several of them were killed and taken prisoners, among the latter is Major Ellis of the Gloucester Militia, and Lieutenants Stout and Hutelin of Shreve's regiment of Continental troops.

The enemy frustrated in their designs of massacring our troops, and having gasconaded through the village, where they committed many acts of cruelty, besides burning two dwelling-houses, returned to Philadelphia in the evening of the same day.

From Princeton we learn that charitable donations from the congregations of Newark, Elizabeth-Town, Connecticut Farms, Turkey and South Hanover, Springfield Morris-Town, Scotch Plains and Bound-Brook, for the sick soldiers in the hospitals, &c. were lately sent to that place, consisting of the following articles, viz. 68 sheets; 9 pairs of new shoes; 46 blankets; 347 pairs of stockings; 243 shirts; 200 breeches and trowsers; 200 jackets; 76

TRAVELLOR,

Now rising eight years old, will cover the ensuing season at the plantation of AMOS SWAN on the Scotch Plains, a short half mile from the meeting-house on the road leading to Springfield. TRAVELLOR is of a full size, fifteen hands and a half high, well set to his height, his colour is a dark claret, and very beautiful. He sprung from the best blood in Great-Britain; his pedigree is the same as True Briton, they being brothers. His carriage, beauty, behaviour and spirit, make him equal if not superior to any horse within this State. He is to cover at TEN DOLLARS a mare and a Dollar to the groom, the money to be paid at the time of covering, or before taken if required. Good pasture will be provided for Mares at Half a Dollar per week.

AMOS SWAN.

¹ Dr. John Condit was born in Orange, July 8th, 1755, and in 1776 was commissioned a Surgeon in Heards' Brigade, but soon resigned, returning to his home to practice his profession. In political life he was a member of the New Jersey Legislature, represented the State in Congress and subsequently became Assistant Collector of the Port of New York in Jersey City. Clark says of him, "He kept many horses and was perpetually on the road." Dr. Condit's death occurred May 4th, 1834, his grave being in Orange, near the Academy of which he was a founder and trustee.

Mr. COLLINS,

IF the following account of an extraordinary News Paper promises any entertainment to your Customers, you may give it a place in the New-Jersey Gazette.

AMONGST those who left Philadelphia on the approach of the enemy to that city, a Gentleman, who had with him a portable printing-press, took refuge somewhere near Egg-Harbour. By means of a well-conducted correspondence with a friend in the city, he obtained constant and authentic intelligence of the most minute occurrences there. Thus provided, he, for the amusement of himself and a few friends, publishes a paper every fortnight, which he calls PASQUIN, or the MINUTE INTELLIGENCER. As these papers are not for sale, and but a few copies struck off, they do not circulate and are but little known. Being an old acquaintance, he constantly sends me one of his curious performances. As a specimen of the work; I have selected the following articles.

“It is said the English Ministry, having no hopes of subduing America by force of arms, whilst the inhabitants retain their native virtue, have instructed the officers in their army to try a more certain method of success; by debauching the morals of the men, and seducing the virtue of the women. For this purpose play-houses are opened, gaming-tables established, and balls promoted, in a city languishing under a scarcity of the necessities of life.”

“His Excellency General Howe, ever attentive to the health of his army, took the advantage of some fair weather in December last, and determined to give his troops an airing, of which they stood in great need. For this purpose he ordered the whole of his forces out, and heading them himself, took a walk into the country. His benevolent intention was to proceed as far as Reading and Lancaster, but finding the roads about Edge-Hill much infested with armed rebels he thought proper to return to the city; which he did with considerable precipitation, being apprehensive of an approaching storm. Some think he might have forced his way through the banditti, but he was too prudent a General to expend his Majesty’s powder and shot on such a ragged crew.”

“We have the pleasure of assuring the publick, that the disputes respecting the arrangement of the Royal African Regiment, are now at an end, his Excellency having determined that arrangement in the following manner:

QUACO, Colonel,
SAMBO, Lieutenant-Colonel,
CUFFEY, Major,
TONEY, } Captains.
CUDJOE, }

The contest for pre-eminence between Quaco and Sambo was long and obstinate. It is evident that Sambo has the thickest lips and the whitest teeth, but his Excellency’s partiality is in favour of Quaco, as he has honoured him with the command; and at the entertainment lately given by the officers of the Royal African Regiment, his Excellency opened the ball with Colonel Quaco's Lady, and danced very gracefully to the music of a full orchestra of banjos and hurdy-gurdies.—How far the superior beauty of Colonel Quaco's Lady may have contributed to his promotion is uncertain.”¹

“We hear that general orders have issued for having the Royal African Regiment shorn every three months; in order to supply the Ladies of the Court of Great-Britain with wool, sufficient for the present fashionable head-dress.”

“NOW in the press, and shortly will be published, neatly bound in calf, The Miscellaneous Works of his Excellency General Sir William Howe, in prose and verse; containing, amongst many other curious particulars, the following articles;

“1st. The history of the American war; or, the art of insuring infamy in this world and misery in the next. 2d. A dissertation on the cardinal virtues; in which it is proved, that justice and mercy ought to be excluded from holding any place among them. 3d. The game of picquet in a new way; by which it is shown how a person may win ten thousand guineas at a game, and yet the loser remain perfectly satisfied. By this method, cards become not only an amusement, but very useful in the settlement of accounts. N. B. In this learned work his Excellency acknowledges that he has been assisted by Mr. Ware the Commissary General.² 4th. The value of British gold; or, the art of paying off large accounts with small sums; illustrated by a variety of real cases, particularly one in which a just bill of 550 l. was discharged by 50 guineas, and a receipt in full obtained. 5th. Men immortalized and death defeated; or, the returns of the British army; wherein is shewn how the pay and rations of a thousand soldiers may be drawn, who have long since died of putrid fevers, or been slain in battle. 6th. The contented cuckold, an heroic poem. 7th. Songs and amorous odes, in the Eastern style; a hymn to Venus; Chloe, or the African beauty; an invitation to Bacchus, in the German taste; the progress of cruelty, in six cantos, &c.

“The work will be comprised in three volumes octavo; a fourth volume will contain congratulatory addresses to his Excellency, from the several provinces, wherein he has restored constitutional liberty. But these addresses have not yet come to hand.”

“NOW publishing in sheets, and to be sold at Philadelphia THE POLITICAL LIAR; or, The New Fairy Tales: Wherein is related how a shameful defeat may, with ease, be converted into a glorious victory—how large reinforcements may be obtained by art magic—how France is abandoning America, by sending her large supplies of warlike stores and other necessaries—how General Washington lost his senses, and left a portmanteau, containing all his original letters and secrets of State, with a sick negroe, whereby they fell into the hands of the British officers, and are now publishing at large in the political liar - - with many other entertaining aticles of the same kind.

A considerable number of the enemy are over at Salem, mostly Greens; but I believe their stay will be short, as the militia from Cumberland, aided by their Magistrates and old men (who are exempt by law) are marching with a determination to fight them wherever they can find them. If Pennsylvania and the whole of Jersey were like Cumberland, Morris, Somerset, and some other parts of the State, where no person, who is able to carry a musket, will be exempt when the enemy come near, these plunderers must have sucked their paws in the city, or quit the parts before now."—The Pennsylvania Packet, April 8th, 1778.

New-York, April 13. Last Tuesday arrived Captain Robertson, of the 35th Regiment, from an Excursion on the Monmouth Coast, with the pleasing Account as follows: That on the 4th Instant, Capt. Potterfield of the 71st Regiment, with a Detachment of 150 men, sailed from New-York in three small Vessels, under the Convoy of the armed Sloop George, and proceeded to Sandy-Hook, where they were joined by forty Marines and Provincials. On the 5th in the Morning they sailed from the Hook, under the Command of Capt. Collins of the Fowey; at eight o'Clock of the same Morning arrived off Squam, where the Troops landed and marched up to some very considerable Salt-Works, erected there by the Rebels, which they entirely demolished. There could not be less than One Hundred different Houses, in each of which were from six to ten Coppers and Kettles, for the Purpose of boiling Salt, one of the Houses (which belonged to Congress) cost 6000 l. building. Besides demolishing the above Works, they destroyed immense Quantities of Salt, Beef, salted and dried Hams, Sides of Bacon, Flour, Corn and Hay. They brought off a sloop belonging to Boston, partly loaded with Flour, and at three o'Clock in the Afternoon re-embarked without Opposition.

On the 6th they landed a Small reconnoitering Party at Shark, but the Wind coming to the Eastward, occasioned so high a Surf, that they were under the Necessity of re-embarking, which prevented them from demolishing the Salt-works that the Rebels had at that Place. They then weighed Anchor and arrived at their Cantonments on the 7th.—New-York Gazette and Weekly Mercury, April 13, 1778.

To Be SOLD or EXCHANGED.

For Houses or Lands, in or near this City, the following Lands and Premises, situated in the county of Cumberland, New-Jersey.

Two Lotts of Ground, near the Market-house in Road's Town, fronting each other on the main-street, containing about a quarter of an acre in each Lot, on which are erected a well finished two story brick House, with a cellar under the whole, and well paved with brick; a good Frame House, well finished and painted, adjoining the Brick House, with a Frame Kitchen back of the same, and part of a Pump of excellent water, near the front door; a good strong Frame Store House, a good Frame Barn, well covered with cedar, and stable room for six or eight horses, a Chair House, a Smoak House, and other out-buildings and garden well paled in with cedar. The whole of the buildings are good, having been built not many years since. It is an excellent place for a store or shop-keeper, as the subscriber has found by several years experience and would serve for any tradesman inn-keeper or private gentleman.

Twelve other Lotts of excellent Grass Land, in said town fronting the main street aforesaid, containing half an acre in each Lott, all under good fence, with a number of good bearing apple and peach trees on several of said Lotts; the whole is pleasantly situated in as good a part as any in said town for building thereon.

Nine Acres of Grass Land, adjoining on the back of the last mentioned Lotts, and under good fence.

Five Acres of good Wood Land, about half a mile from said town, joining a main road leading from the town of Greenwich to Salem, and a stream of water on one end of said Land.

A Plantation, containing 125 Acres of good Land, situate about a half a mile from Road's Town aforesaid, 80 Acres or upwards of which is cleared and under good fence, the remainder is good woodland: The whole is well watered, having springs of water in different fields, and a stream of water, being the line on one side of said Plantation which is thought sufficient for an oil or fulling mill, and is in a fine part of the country for such business.

There is on said Plantation a good Brick House, with a large cellar under the same, a large frame Kitchen, a good Well of Water near the door, a large frame Barn and other out-buildings, about one hundred bearing Apple Trees of good Fruit, a young Peach Orchard, of about the same number of Trees, as also Cherry and other Fruit Trees on the premises.

Five Acres of Salt Marsh, lying in the township of Greenwich; and is between three and four miles from the said Plantation.

Seventy-four Acres of Cedar Swamp, lying on the west side of Morris-River, which would be profitable at this time, either for making rails or boards, it being within 80 rods of a landing, where vessels of burden pass and repass to and from this city, and is joining to cedar swamp of Joshua Brick, Esq;¹ and others.

All the above mentioned Premises (except the Cedar Swamp and Marsh) are in a healthy part of the country, that abounds in corn, flax, &c. and are about five miles from Bridgetown, where the county courts are held and about four miles from the town of Greenwich, where there is navigation for sloops and is very near to sundry good grist mills, and very handy to places of worship such as the Friends, Presbyterians, First Day and Seventh Day Baptists.

They will be sold together, or separate as will best suit the purchaser, and may be viewed, by applying to Mr. ELIJAH OWEN and Mr. ELIJAH TOMBLESON, on and near the premises.

For terms apply to the subscriber, in Union Street, three doors below Second-street Philadelphia, where the deeds and draughts of each, and all the premises may be viewed, and an indisputable title given by DAVID BOWEN.

WILLIAM LIVINGSTON, Esq.

Governor, Captain-General and Commander in Chief in and over the State of New-Jersey, and the Territories thereunto belonging, Chancellor and Ordinary in the same:

PROCLAMATION.

WHEREAS the honorable the Congress did, on the 7th day of this present month of March, pass a resolution in the words following, to wit, 'Whereas Almighty God in the righteous dispensation of his providence, hath permitted the continuation of a cruel and desolating war in our land; and it being at all times the duty of a people to acknowledge God in all his ways, and more especially to humble themselves before him when evident tokens of his displeasure are manifested; to acknowledge his righteous government, confess and forsake their evil, ways, and implore his mercy.

'It is therefore recommended to the United States of America to set apart Wednesday the 22d day of April next, to be observed as a day of fasting, humiliation and prayer; that at one time and with one voice, the inhabitants may acknowledge the righteous dispensations of divine providence, and confess their iniquities and transgressions for which the land mourneth; that they may implore the mercy and forgiveness of God; and beseech him that vice, profaneness, and extortion and every evil may be done away, and that we may be a reformed and happy people: That they may unite in humble and earnest supplication, that it may please Almighty God to guard and defend us against our enemies; and give vigour and success to our military operations by sea and ‘land; that it may please him to bless the civil rulers

‘and people; strengthen and perpetuate our union, and ‘in his own good time establish us in the peaceable en‘joyment of our rights and liberties; that it may please ‘him to bless our schools and seminaries of learning, and ‘make them nurseries of true piety, virtue and useful ‘knowledge; that it may please him to cause the earth ‘to yield its increase, and to crown the year with his ‘goodness.

‘And it is further recommended to the inhabitants of ‘the United States, to abstain on that day from all labour ‘and recreations.’

I have therefore thought fit by and with the advice of the Privy Council, to appoint the said 22d day of April next, to be set apart and observed throughout this State as a day of publick fasting, humiliation and prayer for the purposes in the above-recited resolutions mentioned:
Whereof all the inhabitants of this State are required to take notice and govern themselves accordingly. And I do hereby recommend it to the ministers of the gospel of every denomination, in this State, to perform divine service, and to the people committed to their charge to attend on publick worship on that day; and to observe the same, with the devotion and humility, the gratitude and fear becoming sinful dependent creatures, towards the inexhaustible source of all their mercies; who, by his all-wise and superintending province, hath hitherto enabled us to resist a powerful enemy meditating the total extinction of our Liberty, and whose indignation would be justly exasperated for our spending, with levity, a day, peculiarly appropriated to his honour; and which, our manifold offences and unnatural ingratitude against him, render it our indispensable duty, to sanctify, with the most awful veneration for his transcendant majesty, the most unfeigned thanks for his unmerited favours, and the deepest contrition of soul for the innumerable transgressions, by which we have provoked his righteous displeasure --- And as no external forms of humiliation, or corporal austerities, or any momentary sorrow for sin, can propitiate an offended God; nor avert his vengeance from a guilty land; without genuine repentance, real amendment of life and reformation of manners; it is devoutly to be wished, that the appointed solemnity may be the happy means of bringing us to an utter dereliction of all our prevalent vices; our avarice and extortion; our want of bowels for houseless impoverished exiles; our criminal languor in the glorious cause of Liberty, our profaneness and infidelity; and our contempt of things sacred and serious: That it may by a thorough renovation of hearts, render us conspicuous for our generosity and beneficence; our patriotism and publick spirit; our virtue and purity of manners, and our habitual reverence for Almighty God, his holy revelation, and instituted ordinances --- In a word that, in the language of the prophet, it may appear to have been a fast, chosen of the Lord, by our subsequent practice, of dealing our bread to the hungry, and bringing the poor that are cast out into our houses; by covering the naked when we see him, and not hiding ourselves from our own flesh; by loosing the bands of wickedness, AND BREAKING EVERY YOKE.

GIVEN under my hand and seal at arms at Trenton, the 19th day of March in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and seventy-eight.

WIL. LIVINGSTON.

By His Excellency's command,

Wm. LIVINGSTON, jun. D. Sec.

GOD SAVE THE PEOPLE.

WILLIAM LIVINGSTON, Esq.

Governor, Captain-General and Commander in Chief in and over the State of New-Jersey, and Territories thereunto belonging, Chancellor and Ordinary in the same.

It is his Excellency's order, that Brigadier-General Heard's brigade consist of the militia of the counties of Middlesex, Hunterdon, Burlington, and Monmouth; and that the militia of the counties of Bergen, Morris, Essex, Somerset and Sussex, compose the brigade of General Winds: And that the said Brigadiers-General, and every Colonel or commanding officer of a regiment, and every Captain or commanding officer of a company of the militia of this State, not having already made a return of the number of men in his regiment or company, and of their accoutrements and ammunition, pursuant to his Excellency's order of the thirteenth of December last, is hereby directed to make such return on or before the first day of May next, on pain of being prosecuted for default thereof, agreeable to the direction of the Act of Assembly in that case made and provided. And the said officers are further directed particularly to specify the persons in their respective corps who have procured, or pretend to have procured substitutes in any of the four New-Jersey regiments in the continental service, with the names of such substitutes, and the time when, place where, and the officers by whom such substitutes are said to have been inlisted.

GIVEN under my hand at Princeton, the 6th day of April in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and seventy-eight.

WIL. LIVINGSTON.

By His Excellency's command,

WM. LIVINGSTON, jun. D. Sec.

Mr. COLLINS,

IF any thing but final despair of succeeding in their iniquitous and sanguinary purpose of enslaving a free people, induces the British troops to violate every rule of war, to extinguish every sentiment of humanity, and to perpetrate the most deliberate murders on people utterly defenceless and absolutely in their power, it will only aggravate their infamy and deepen the black dye of the black catalogue of their Gothic barbarities. It is surely a perfect novelty in the history of modern war, to treat people the worse for bravely defending themselves; and threatening a whole country with savage devastation, for not tamely submitting to the demands of an enemy, and bowing their necks to the yoke of bondage without any resistance. The proscribing of individuals and dooming them to destruction by the hands of their own countrymen, is another innovation in the laws of arms peculiar to those who boast of their national valour and humanity. I doubt not, however, but the intended victims are greatly obliged to Colonel Mawhood for this consummate attestation to their virtue and their patriotism, as I dare say every worthy citizen deems his character the more illustrious in proportion to the enemy's resentment against him; and would be almost tempted to suspect himself of some infidelity to America, if he did not excite the keenest vengeance of those who seem to have declared war against everything good and excellent; and whose favour is only to be conciliated by turning traitor to ones native country. As an instance of the most unsoldierly and cruel conduct of the British troops, and the laudable and spirited behaviour of our militia, I enclose you a copy of Colonel Mawhood's letter to Colonel Hand, and of Hand's answer to the insolent demand, both of which have accidentally fallen into my possession, and which I shall be obliged to you for inserting in your paper as soon as possible.

COLONEL Mawhood, commanding a detachment of the British army at Salem, induced by motives of humanity, proposes to the militia at Quintins Bridge and the neighbourhood, as well officers as private men, to lay down their arms and depart each man to his home: On that condition he solemnly promises to re-embark his troops without delay, doing no further damage to the country; and he will cause his commissaries to pay for the cattle, hay, and corn, that have been taken, in sterling money.

If, on the contrary, the militia should be so far deluded, and blind to their true interest and happiness, he will put the arms which he has brought with him into the hands of the inhabitants well-affected, called tories, and will attack all such of the militia as remain in arms, burn and destroy their houses and other property, and reduce them, their unfortunate wives and children to beggary and distress; and to convince them that these are not vain threats, he has subjoined a list of the names of such as will be the first objects to feel the vengeance of the British nation.

SIR,

I HAVE been favoured with what you say humanity has induced you to propose. It would have given me much pleasure to have found that humanity had been the line of conduct to your troops since you came to Salem. Not only denying quarters, but butchering our men who surrendered themselves prisoners in the skirmish at Quintin's Bridge last Thursday, and bayonetting yesterday morning at Hancock's Bridge, in the most cruel manner in cold blood, men who were taken by surprize, in a situation in which they neither could nor did attempt to make any resistance, and some of whom were not fighting men; are instances too shocking for me to relate, and I hope for you to hear.—The brave are ever generous and humane.—After expressing your sentiments of humanity, you proceed to make a request which I think you would despise us if we complied with. Your proposal, that we should lay down our arms, we absolutely reject. We have taken them up to maintain rights which are dearer to us than our lives, and will not lay them down, 'till either success has crowned our cause with victory, or like many ancient worthies contending for liberty, we meet with an honourable death. You mention that if we reject your proposal, you will put arms into the hands of the tories against us; we have no objection to the measure, for it would be a very good one to fill our arsenals with arms.—Your threats to wantonly burn and destroy our houses and other property, and reduce our wives and children to beggary and distress, is a sentiment which my humanity almost forbids me only to recite, and induces me to imagine I am reading the cruel order of a barbarous Atila, and not of a Gentleman, brave, generous, and polished with a genteel European education—To wantonly destroy, will injure your cause more than ours—it will encrease your enemies and our army.—To destine to destruction the property of our most distinguished men, as you have done in your proposals, is, in my opinion, unworthy a generous foe; and more like a rancorous feud between two contending Barons, than a war carried on by one of the greatest powers on earth, against a people nobly struggling for Liberty—a line of honour would mark out that these men should share the fate of their country—If your arms should be crowned with victory, which God forbid, they and their property will be entirely at the disposal of your Sovereign. The loss of their property, while their persons are out of your power, will only make them desperate; and, as I said before, encrease your foes and our army; and retaliation upon tories and their property is not entirely out of our power. Be assured that these are the sentiments and determined resolution, not of myself only, but of all the officers and privates under me.

My prayer is, Sir, that this answer may reach you in health and great happiness.

of some people there, who I fear, wish'd to serve them—then crossed the river and burnt all excepting Dirrick Longstreet's: after this mischief they embarked. The next day they landed at Shark river and set fire to two small works, when they observed fifteen horsemen heave in sight, which occasioned them to retreat with great precipitation, indeed they jumped in their flat-bottomed boats in such confusion that they sunk one or two of them. One of their pilots was the noted Thomas Oakeson. The enemy consisted chiefly of Greens, the rest Highlanders."

On Saturday the 11th instant died at Burlington, in the 29th year of her age, Mrs. RACHEL HELME, wife of BENJAMIN HELME, esquire.—Her agreeable manners rendered her very amiable to those who had the pleasure of her acquaintance: and her patience and fortitude, during a long and painful illness, fully evinced her entire resignation to the Will of Heaven, Her remains were decently interred on Monday following in Friends burying-ground in Burlington, attended by most of the inhabitants.

We hear that Mr. John Gordon, of Somerset county, who lately married Miss Sukey Lane, (mentioned in Number 18 of this paper) was, a few days ago, thrown from his horse, by which he was hurt so much that he died in a short time after; in consequence of which, it is said, a considerable estate falls to his widow.

Trenton, April 10, 1778.

On Saturday, the 11th inst. died at Burlington, in the 29th year of her age, Mrs. RACHEL HELME, wife of BENJAMIN HELME, Esq; late of the city of New-York.

They who had the pleasure of her acquaintance will long regret her loss and respect her memory. In every relation of life she was truly amiable, and her deportment, during a long and painful illness was every way exemplary. Her patient and chearful resignation was worthy of the Christian, whose faith can bid defiance to the King of Terrors. Her remains were decently interred on the Monday following in the Friends burying ground in that place, attended by the principal part of the inhabitants.—The Pennsylvania Ledger, April 18, 1778.

WAS taken out of the house of Captain Thomas Brown, of Pamrepough, on Saturday night the 11th instant, the following pieces of plate, viz, a silver tea pot, maker's name Banker; 6 silver table spoons, marked A 7 tea spoons, 4 of them marked M. the T B. T B. other three marked E and the date of the year, a sause M T. cup with a mermaid engraved thereon; a bowl marked E. T. and half a dozen silver handled knives and forks.

Should any of the above articles be offered for sale, 'tis requested the owner may be made acquainted therewith.—New-York Gazette and Weekly Mercury, April 20, 1778.

TRENTON, April 23.

Saturday last the General Assembly of this State adjourned to the 27th of May next, then to meet at Princeton. During their sitting, they passed sixteen acts.

Monday last the house of Mr. Evan Reynolds, near this town, took fire by accident, while the family were from home, and was entirely consumed.

The next Supreme Court for this State is appointed, by ordinance, to be held at Crosswicks on the second Tuesday in May next.

No more Subscriptions can be received at present for this GAZETTE for Want of Paper. As this is an article greatly wanted for many other uses, it is ardently to be wished that every Family in this State would be careful to save their Rags, and send them, as Opportunity offers, either to the Paper-Mill at Spotswood, to the Printing-Office at Trenton, or to Anthony Armbruster's in Burlington—where THREE PENCE per Pound is given for those that are delivered clean whether coarse or fine, or whether Cotton or Linen. It is expected that Storekeepers, who wish well to their Country, will lend their Assistance in taking them in, and to whom a Compensation will be made.

HIS Excellency the Governor desires the gentlemen employed by this state to purchase horses for the service,¹ to send them as soon as purchased to such of the following places as may be most convenient, with reference to those parts of the state in which they are bought, taking receipts for the same, with the proper descriptions; to wit, to Capt.

Resolved, That it be earnestly recommended to the young Gentlemen of property and spirit in the States of New-Hampshire, Massachusetts-Bay, Rhode-Island, Connecticut, New-York, New-Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and North-Carolina, forthwith to constitute within their respective States, a troop or troops of light cavalry to serve at their own expence (except in the articles of provisions for themselves, and forage for their horses) until the 31st of December next :

That each troop so to be raised consist of not less than twenty nor more than sixty rank and file ; that they have a right to chuse their own officers, who shall receive continental commissions, and that they rendezvous at the main army on the first day of May next, or at an earlier period, if possible :

That, in order to excite a proper spirit of emulation in these troops, and to give them an opportunity of appropriating that fame, which their respective merits may entitle them to, during the campaign, each troop shall bear the name of the State in which it is raised :

That these troops, when raised, shall not serve as expresses, except in time of action, nor as escorts to the person of any General, except that of the Commander of the army with whom they serve, unless with their own choice :

That every horse, which shall be killed, and every horse and all arms and accoutrements, which shall be taken, by the enemy in action, shall be paid for by the United States ; the value to be ascertained under the direction of the Commander in Chief ; and all booty taken from the enemy shall belong to the troop, by whom it shall be taken.

Resolved, That it be recommended to the government of the respective States, to countenance and encourage this design ; and that the Board of War transmit to them forthwith copies of the foregoing resolutions, together with a descriptive list of the accoutrements necessary for man and horse.

Extract from the minutes,

CHARLES THOMPSON, Secretary.

List of Necessaries and Accoutrements for each Horseman.

1. A well tempered sword, the blade straight, and three feet long, with the back sharpened up six inches from the point ; an open guard about the hilt ; that will be light and yet defend the hand ; with a scabbard of substantial leather without wood.
2. A carbine, fusee, or short blunderbuss ; the barrel of the blunderbuss not to exceed two feet in length.
3. A pair of pistols and holsters.
4. A sword-belt—a belt for the carbine, with a running swivel that will slip to any part of the belt.
5. A cartridge-box to buckle round the waist, with twelve tin pipes for the cartridges.
6. A helmet of jacked leather, and effectually guarded by several rows of small chain, iron or steel hoops ; or a hat with a steel or iron scull-piece inside the crown.
7. A saddle, saddle-cloth, breast-plate, crupper, saddle-straps and pad.
8. Saddle-bags connected by two broad straps, in the common fashion, and not a portmanteau.
9. A double reined bridle, with a curb and snaffle bit, and a halter.
10. A cloak sufficient to cover all the arms and accoutrements, and which is to serve also in the place of a blanket.
11. Boots and spurs.

Harrison, at Pennington; to Col. Sheldon, at Chatham; to Major Clough, at Trenton; or to Lieut. Col. White, at Brunswick, or the commanding officers at those places.

TO BE LET

On REASONABLE TERMS, with or without the Stock on hand,

A Large commodious TAN-YARD, containing 64 fats,¹ 5 limes, two water pools, through which a never failing stream of water runs, a large bark house, which will contain about 300 cords of bark, a good currying shop, skin-dressers shop, and every conveniency necessary for carrying on (as has been done for some years past) the tanning, currying, skin-dressing and breeches-making business very extensively: Also a large two-story building, lately occupied for file-making, brass-foundery, and sundry branches of cutlery, with a convenient black-smith's shop; all of which may be entered on immediately. The subscriber proposing to decline business, the few remaining goods on hand are to be sold together at prime cost, for ready money. All persons indebted to him by bond, bill, or otherways, are desired to make payment immediately, in order to enable him to discharge the demands against him.

A PLANTATION, with pretty good buildings, containing about 150 or 200 acres of good land, including not less than 20 or 30 acres of well improved meadow, and a sufficient quantity of woodland. Enquire of the Printer.

Extract of a letter from Baltimore, dated March 24, 1778.

“The enemy,” says a correspondent, “after the flogging of Burgoyne, have resumed their old trick of sham-treaty. General Tryon (by what authority he best knows) has introduced into New-Jersey a ridiculous publication under the title of “Draught of a bill for declaring the intentions “of the parliament of Great Britain concerning the exercise of the right of imposing taxes within his majesty’s “colonies, provinces and plantations in North America,” which just amounts to the old nauseous dish (which no honest American could ever swallow) with a little amendment in the cookery and sauces, together with the “Draught “of a bill to enable his majesty to appoint commissioners “with sufficient powers to treat, consult and agree upon “the means of quieting the disorders now subsisting in “certain of the colonies, plantations and provinces of “North America.” What renders this nonsensical manœuvre still more ominous is, that General Tryon (and by the name of Governor too) certifies them to be true copies. Surely the ministry might have found a more proper person for that purpose than the most obnoxious of all obnoxious animals by his professed declarations in the pleasure he takes in burning, kidnapping, and every species of desolation—And offering Pardon too—consummate impudence!—Who wants and will stoop to accept of a pardon for defending his country against the most villanous tyranny that was ever devised by the art of man:—Divide and rule. But America has too much sense to be so gulled.”

The enemy have been very busy some days past in distributing and posting up the above-mentioned draughts of bills in Philadelphia, and a number of them were also sent out with the party that made an excursion to Bristol, which were dropped in many places on the way. They are since published in one of the Philadelphia papers, accompanied with a speech of Lord North's, spoken previous to his bringing them into parliament—which, for the satisfaction of our Readers, will be in our next.

We hear it is currently reported in Philadelphia that a declaration of war between France and England has taken place—that Mr. Pitt is actually at the head of affairs—that the King of Prussia has marched 9000 men into the Prince of Hesse's dominions, in order to oblige him to recall his troops from America—that Europe is in a tumult—and that there has been a mob in London, which carried through the streets the effigy of General Washington, whom they declared the supporter of liberty; and their zeal transported them to such a height, that they broke the windows and roughly handled the persons of those who would not illuminate.

Princeton, April 20, 1778.

THE Publick is hereby informed, that the GRAMMAR SCHOOL in this place was opened on Monday, the 13th instant, agreeable to the former notice. Those who intend sending their children, are requested not to delay it, as it greatly adds to the trouble when they begin at different periods.

The under graduates of the college are also informed, that the vacation is up on the 10th of May, when college orders will again begin, and due attendance be given to the instruction, by the proper officers.

Woodbridge, April 8, 1778.

THIS day the subscriber LOST a PARCHMENT POCKET-BOOK, with a liteish ferret string, supposed to be lost between Taylor Webster's mill, Scotch Plains and Rahway: It contained two old six pound Jersey bills, one ditto of three pounds, one ditto of one pound ten, one of six shillings, with several other small bills of old money; likewise about fifty dollars in Continental money. Any person finding the same, and giving information to James Fitz-Randolph, inn-keeper near the Short Hills, or to Edward Fitz-Randolph in Woodbridge, or to William Young, inn-keeper near Succasunny Plain, Morris county, so that the owner can have it again, shall be entitled to Twenty Dollars reward by me.

ROBERT MILLER.

Pompton, April 9, 1778.

Was taken up, near the house of the subscriber, at Pompton, in Bergen county, New-Jersey, a BLACK MARE, 14 hands and an half high, 5 years old this grass, trots and paces. She was taken up in the winter of 1777, and was very poor at that time. The owner is desired to apply, pay charges, and take her away.

JOHN V. HOUTEN.

N. B. The mare has no brand or mark.

CONGRESS having resolved to raise a CORPS consisting of INFANTRY and CAVALRY, to be commanded by General Count PULASKI. All those who desire to distinguish themselves in the service of their country, are invited to enlist in that corps, which is established on the same principles as the Roman Legions were. The frequent opportunities which the nature of the service of that corps will offer to the enterprising, brave and vigilant soldiers who shall serve in it, are motives which ought to influence those who are qualified for Admission into it, to prefer it to other corps not so immediately destined to harass the enemy; and the many captures which will infallibly be made, must indemnify the legionary soldiers for the hardships they must sustain, and the inconsiderable sum given for bounty, the term for their service being no longer than one year from the time that the corps shall be completed. Their dress is calculated to give a martial appearance, and to secure the soldier against the inclemency of the weather and season. The time for action approaching, those who desire to have an opportunity of distinguishing themselves in that corps, are requested to apply to Col. Kowatch, at Easton, to Major Julius, Count of Mont-Fort, at headquarters, or at Major Betkin's quarters at Trenton.

In CONGRESS, April 6, 1778.

Resolved,

That if any of the states in which Brigadier General Pulaski shall recruit for his Legion, shall give to persons enlisting in the same for three years or during the war, the bounty allowed by the state, in addition to the Continental bounty, the men so furnished, not being inhabitants of any other of the United States, shall be credited to the quota of the state in which they shall be enlisted.

JOHN LONGSTREET, Execut.

TO BE SOLD,

AT publick VENDUE, for ready money only, on Monday the 18th day of May, at the house of Robert Norris on Whatnung Plains: Several tracts of land, lying and being in Morris-town and Hanover on Whatnung Plains: A plantation whereon Thomas Coe now lives, about 131 acres of good land, 10 acres of meadow land and more may easily be made; there is a good frame house and barn on said tract, with a good orchard: A lot of land about 8 acres, with a young orchard of near 50 apple-trees on it: A lot of wood-land, lying on Whatnung mountain; likewise a very good forge-fire with all the privileges thereto belonging. The above-said lands and premises were formerly the property of William Demayne, absconded, and to be sold by us the subscribers, by virtue of an attachment levied on said land by suit of Thomas Coe, plaintiff, against William Demayne, defendant. The vendue to begin at ten o'clock on morning of said day, where due attendance will be given by us

JOSEPH WOOD,	} Auditors.
JOSHUA LAMBERT,
RICHARD JOHNSON,

N. B. All persons indebted to the estate of William Demayne, absconded, either by bond, bill, or book debt, are requested to make speedy payment to the auditors by the above-mentioned time, or else they may expect to be dealt with as the law directs.

For the NEW-JERSEY GAZETTE.

THOUGH I never had any apprehensions that Great-Britain could reduce us to her iniquitous terms of unconditional submission by the force of her arms; I was not without my suspicions, that as soon as she discovered the impracticability of her purpose, she would attempt, by the stratagem of negociation, what she found unattainable by the strength of her military prowess. Accordingly in the desperation of Lord North to subdue us by war, he is now determined (and I suspect from his incessant blunders, with the help of a better head than his own) to divide us by insidious proposals, to gain time for reinforcing the British troops, while he expects to divert us by a ridiculous accommodation, from augmenting our own.

To prevail upon the nation to lay aside all thoughts of conquest with which he has constantly flattered it, he is obliged to acknowledge such mortifying truths as no other consideration would have extorted from him. "Our army," says he, "is great; our navy is great; but the resistance of America is greater; and the war has lasted longer than was at first apprehended. To strengthen our force, and continue the war upon the present plan, is attended with too great an expence of men and money: an expence which conquest itself would not balance." It is therefore evident that he quits his pursuit of conquest only from the want of men and money necessary to effect it. But incapable of executing his original sanguinary design, what does he substitute in its room? Only to trick us into that same taxation under a more specious form by dint of artifice, into which he could not beat us by the length of his sword. For what is the right of taxing the merchandize of a trading people which Britain now proposes, but the right of drawing from them what sums she pleases? Would not the farmer, would not the artificer, would not every citizen of America who consumes any of the commodities, upon which a duty was imposed, pay the tax of the price advanced in proportion to the duty? And in the extensive manner in which the draught of the bill is worded, of not imposing any duty, &c. except only such as may be expedient to impose for the regulation of commerce, will not their Parliament (which is intended to be the sole judge of this expediency) impose just what duties it shall think proper? Will it not think it expedient to debar us from trading with any nation except their own, and with themselves at their own prices? And thus from the most glorious prospect of being the happiest and most flourishing people upon the face of the earth, by appointing our own rulers and trading with the whole world, we are voluntarily to resign ourselves to the most ignominious bondage, and to sacrifice our commercial interest to a nation that, while we were connected with them, abused the exercise of their regulating power to such an oppressive degree, as constituted one of the principal causes of our revolt. And what can be more provoking than for Great-Britain, after acknowledging the superiority of our arms, to propound such a controul over our commerce as we remonstrated against before the commencement of the war; and which would infallibly render us and our remotest posterity the slaves and tributaries of a nation venal, corrupt, abandoned, and rushing headlong into inextricable perdition? But to palliate this ruinous measure, it is sugar'd over with "that the net-proceeds of such duties shall be always paid and applied to and for the use of the colony, &c. in which the same shall be respectively levied;" that is, in plain English, to maintain legions of hungry ministerial dependents, who are to be sent amongst us to accumulate fortunes, and then to recross the Atlantic to dissipate in luxury what they amassed by iniquity, and thus make room for another set equally penurious and rapacious. For my own part I would rather pay the tax immediately into the English exchequer, as I think it infinitely more eligible to support a number of rogues in London than in America. No wonder therefore, that this subtle Minister is willing in appearance to yield to our independence, if we would but yield to him the right of regulating our trade, as by that very cession we should make the fullest recognition of our dependence.

Nor is the draught of the bill to enable the king of Great-Britain to appoint Commissioners, &c. less insidious than the other, there being no security that Parliament will confirm their negotiations, and the whole evidently designed to induce us to a cessation of hostilities, to give them an opportunity to increase their troops, and spread dis-sension amongst us: But the disguise is too thin to delude the sagacity of an American. Nor does it even revive the drooping spirits of a single tory. Britain has out-lived her day of grace respecting us. And how Lord North could flatter himself that any man of common sense would put the least confidence in him, while he makes the most shameless sacrifice of truth whenever it serves his purpose, is as unaccountable as Tryon's imagining that we should give the more credit to a paper for the sake of his certificate. To support my charge against his Lordship, I shall enumerate several passages in his speech as destitute of truth as the Parliament itself is of publick virtue.

1. I have great reason to believe from the declarations of the colonies, that they are willing to contribute their share to the publick support. Then Governor Hutchinson must be your informer.

2. I thought it necessary to shew them (the colonies) that we were not fighting for taxation, for I never thought that such taxation would be very beneficial to us. The greater your guilt for endeavouring to enforce it by war.

3. In many of the Assemblies there was an inclination to have accepted it (his conciliatory proposition) before the war. Multiply New-York by nought and the product is one.

4. My intention was from the beginning at the moment of victory to have proposed the same proposition in terms obviating all the misrepresentations and misunderstandings concerning it.—Unconditional submission!

5. I never thought taxation a sufficient object for the contest. Pray what else has the contest been about?

6. But I sought for the dependence of America.—And did America ever dream of independence, till the oppressions of Britain compelled her to declare it?

7. The Congress claimed independency. I suppose by openly and solemnly disavowing it.

8. The colony of the Massachusetts claimed it. When, where, and how, my Lord? Why a great outrage was committed on our merchants—The affair of the tea, I presume. And if so, did not New-York and every other colony that destroyed the tea or the stamps, claim it as much?

9. The contest was for supremacy. I dare be bound no man will ever contest with Lord North his supremacy in the art of falsification.

10. Our customs are not diminished. To be proved, I suppose, by the Virginia entries.

11. I never proposed any tax. For witnesses to this fact, call Lord North's speeches of last year.

12. The Commissioners were men trusted by America. As a traveller trusts a robber with his purse.

13. The farmers of America are ruined—as sure as that wheat at twelve shillings the bushel is less than at five.

Here is what is called a baker's dozen of such palpable deviations from the truth, as no private gentleman, who had the least regard for his character, would chuse to stoop to: and which, before the total extinction of all virtue, a British Nobleman would have deemed peculiarly disgraceful. But the artifice is too visible to deceive any man of common discernment. It is plainly intended to lull us into security. Britain apprehends a war with France, and wants all her forces for her own domestic defence. Her present offers are no argument for her relenting at the bloody measures she has hitherto pursued. Her disposition to treat at all, arises from her inability to prosecute the war. She would listen to no accommodation while she thought herself able to subdue us. She rejected our prayers with disdain. She called us rebels, because we armed in defence of our liberty. And why treat with us continuing in arms, and consequently equally rebels? But how can we treat with her while she claims the exercising of the right of taxing us, since rather than acknowledge this right we have revolted from her? And shall we negotiate with her still claiming it, and that after finding that she despairs of enforcing it by the sword? God forbid.

Hortentius.

TRENTON, May 6.

Mr. COLLINS,

I DO not remember whether your Gazette has hitherto given us the production of any woman correspondent—Indeed nothing but the most pressing call of my country could have induced me to appear in Print. But rather than suffer your sex to be caught by the bait of that arch-foe to American Liberty Lord North, I think ours ought, to a woman, to draw their pens, and enter our solemn protest against it. Nay, the fair ones in our neighborhood have already entered into a resolve for every mother to disown her son, and refuse the caresses of her husband, and for every maiden to reject the addresses of her gallant, where such husband, son or gallant, shews the least symptoms of being imposed upon by this flimsy subterfuge, which I call the dying speech, and last groans of Great Britain, pronounced and grunted out by her great oracle, and little politician, who now appears ready to hang himself, for having brought the nation to the brink of that ruin from which he cannot deliver her.—You will be kind enough to correct my spelling, a part of my education in which I have been much neglected.

I am your sincere friend,

BELINDA.¹

FIVE HUNDRED ACRES of LAND to be sold, situated on the banks of the pleasant river Raritan, county of Somerset, and State of New-Jersey, about thirteen miles above New-Brunswick, in the midst of a well settled country, and agreeable neighborhood; about one hundred acres are cleared, and subject to one year's parole lease, on which there is a frame house, barn and young orchard, and the whole in good fence, the residue is in timber of the largest and best kinds, from which great quantities of staves may be made, and readily sold to the millers in the vicinity, of which there are several from two to six miles distant, who are all purchasers of wheat and other country produce. The soil exceeds most of the lands in these parts in quality, near a quarter part thereof being very rich deep black swamp, which, when cleared from the timber, may with very small ditches be turned into the best of meadow or wheat land. Besides these advantages shad and other salt water fish are taken in the river in the spring, and fresh water fish all the year round. Produce may in the spring of the year be transported by water in flat-bottomed boats to New Brunswick: All which are advantages to be met with in few farms. He was bred by Col. Gant, and got by Samuel Galloway, Esqr's. well known running horse Selim, that started on the Philadelphia course in the year 1762, with True Briton, for the large sum of 1000l; and tho' Briton then was, and still is, allowed to be one of the best running horses on this Continent, Selim beat him with ease. His grandsire, Col. Tasker's Othello, came out of Col. Gant's Milley, who was the dam of True Briton, Britannia, Liberty, and the Earl of Dunmore's fine horse Regulus, allowed by the best judges to be the most beautiful creature in Virginia, and a full brother to Wilkes, got by Old Spark,

GENERAL ORDERS

Whereas a number of fields near this city and Gloucester Point have been lately inclosed by the several departments of the army, and by many of the inhabitants, with an intention to preserve a sufficiency of grass for the use of government and its friends, and it having been complained of, that many of the fence rails, inclosing said fields, have wantonly been broke down and carried off, and that several trespasses are committed by horses, and other cattle belonging to the army and inhabitants being put in during the night, to graze in said fields.

This is therefore to inform the public, that any person or persons, who shall, after the date of this proclamation, be detected, either in pulling down or carrying away any part of the rails, posts, or gates, now inclosing the above mentioned fields, under any pretence whatsoever, will be punished with the utmost severity, and in the most exemplary manner; and that such horses or other cattle as shall hereafter be found trespassing in any of the said fields, will be seized for the use of the public.

Extract from GENERAL ORDERS.

It having pleased the Almighty Ruler of the Universe propitiously to defend the cause of the United American States, and finally by raising us up a powerful friend among the Princes of the Earth,¹ to establish our liberty and independence upon a lasting foundation: It becomes us to set apart a day for gratefully acknowledging the Divine Goodness, and celebrating the important event which we owe to His benign interposition.

The several brigades are to be assembled for this purpose at nine o'clock to-morrow morning, when their Chaplain will communicate the intelligence contained in the Postscript of the Pennsylvania Gazette² of the second instant, and offer up a Thanksgiving, and deliver a discourse suitable to the occasion.

At half past ten o'clock a cannon will be fired, which is to be a signal for the men to be under arms. The Brigade Inspectors will then inspect their dress and arms, form the battalions according to the instructions given them, and announce to the commanding officers of brigades that the battalions are formed. The Brigadiers and Commandants will then appoint the field-officers to command the battalions; after which each battalion will be ordered to load and ground their arms. — At half past eleven another cannon will be fired as a signal for the march; upon which the several brigades will begin their march by wheeling to the right by platoons, and proceed by the nearest way to the left of their ground in the new position that will be pointed out by the Brigade Inspectors— A third signal will be given, upon which there will be a discharge of thirteen cannon: When the thirteenth has fired, a running fire of the infantry will begin on the right of Woodford's, and continue throughout the whole front line; it will be then taken up on the left of the second line, and continue to the right. Upon a signal given, the whole army will huzza—

Long live the King of France!

The artillery then begins again, and fires thirteen rounds. This will be succeeded by a second general discharge of the musketry in a running fire—Huzza! long live the friendly European Powers! Then the last discharge of thirteen pieces of artillery will be given, followed by a general running fire—Huzza for the American States!

Agreeably to the above orders, His Excellency General Washington, his amiable Lady and suite, Lord Stirling,¹ the Countess of Stirling, with other General Officers and Ladies, attended at nine o'clock at the Jersey brigade, when the Postscript mentioned above was read, and after Prayer a suitable Discourse delivered to Lord Stirling's division by the Rev. Mr. Hunter.

Upon the signal at half past eleven, the whole army repaired to their alarm posts; upon which General Washington and the General Officers reviewed the whole army at their respective posts; and after the firing of the cannon and musketry, and the huzza's were given agreeably to the orders, the army returned to their respective brigade parades and were dismissed.

All the officers of the army then assembled, and partook of a collation provided by the General, at which several patriotic toasts were given, accompanied with three cheers. His Excellency took leave of the officers at five o'clock, upon which there was universal huzzaing—Long live General Washington! and clapping of hands until the General rode some distance. The non-commissioned officers and privates followed the example of their officers as the General passed their brigades. Approbation indeed was conspicuous in every countenance, and universal joy reigned throughout the camp. —

The enemy having received intelligence that the Row-Galleys were dismantled, on Friday last formed an expedition up the Delaware (consisting of the following force, two Row-Galleys, and three other armed vessels, with twenty-four, flat-bottomed boats, carrying between six and eight hundred British troops) in order to destroy the continental frigates, and a number of vessels that had been lodged in the different creeks; and to achieve such other exploits as have characterized the British arms, since the commencement of this cruel and unnatural war. Having set fire to the frigates and other vessels, they landed at Bordentown, burnt the dwelling-house and stores belonging to Joseph Borden, Esq.¹ and inhumanly butchered three of the militia, who unfortunately fell into their hands.—The wind and tide being favourable, the country was not alarmed until the frigates were on fire.—The next day they proceeded as far up the river as Biles's island, with an intention of visiting this place,² but their boats meeting with an unexpected opposition from our artillery, which General Dickinson³ ordered down for that purpose, and the militia turning out with their usual spirit, upon receiving his orders, vast numbers were quickly assembled; after exchanging a few shot, the enemy thought appearances too unfavourable to proceed any farther.—On their return, they landed at Col. Kirkbride's farm, and destroyed all his buildings of every kind.—General Dickinson having sent a detachment of militia down the river, to protect the inhabitants from small parties, they made prize of a sloop the enemy had loaded with plunder, with six men on board.

Thus do these people seek Peace; and thus would they conciliate the affections of the Americans!—At the very time that terms are pretended to be offered, and proposals of accommodation, as they say, on the point of being made, fire and sword are carried to our habitations, and these Instruments of violence are committing every species of rapine, plunder and cruelty! This is the application of Lord North's Sermon on the 19th of February last!

PHILADELPHIA.

Last Thursday night four gallies, an armed brig and a schooner, with a detachment of light infantry in boats, went up the river. On Friday the troops were landed near White Hill, where a show of resistance was made by about fifty light-horse and the like number of militia, who were instantly dispersed with the loss of several men and four pieces of cannon, which were demolished. In pursuing the fugitives into Bordentown, one Ivins was accidentally killed in crossing the street. A quantity of naval stores and some thousands of tent-poles, pegs &c. with the store-houses were burnt, by which means the dwelling-house of Mr. Borden also shared the same fate. In the mean-time, the people of the navy set fire to the Washington and Effingham frigates, two very fine ships, and to a number of vessels in Crosswicks creek.

The troops were then reimbarbed, passed over the river and landed. The next morning two gallies and some boats proceeded up to Biles's Island, where several vessels were set on fire, while the boats went up to Watson's creek, where the rebel gallies were found with their masts only above water. Here the boats were saluted with a number of cannon-shot, which did no damage. The two gallies were by this time a-ground, and exchanged some shot with the rebels from the lower point of the island. It was some hours before the gallies floated, during which time the exasperated seamen from the boats and vessels below set fire to the house of Mr. Kirkbride and to the ferry-house. As soon as the gallies returned from above, the troops marched across the country and halted at Bristol, till the vessels came down, when they were reimbarbed and proceeded down the river. Two ships were burnt at Bristol, and several below Burlington. The number destroyed, besides the two frigates, are two privateers, one of fourteen the other of ten guns, one large ship pierced for twenty-four guns, nine other ships, besides fourteen or fifteen smaller vessels. The troops and vessels employed on this excursion returned on Sunday to this town without the loss of a man. We are since informed that the rebels lost seventeen men killed at Bordentown.

The latter end of last week thirteen men, who had gone down from this city to Salem, learning there was a violent rebel Colonel in the neighbourhood of that place, agreed to go and make him their prisoner. Accordingly they went on shore, without any arms, and took him: But before they could bring him off, a party of armed rebels, who had been immediately informed of the affair by some of the neighbours, came upon them, rescued the Colonel, and making them prisoners, sent them off under a guard of seven men with fixed bayonets to Head-quarters. On their way, about ten miles from Billingsport, they agreed to seize upon their guard, and having disarmed them, made five of them prisoners, and conducted them to Billingsport, from whence they have been brought up, and are safely lodged in the provost of this city.—The Pennsylvania Ledger, May 13, 1778.

New-York. A small Party of the Rebels were on the Night of last Sunday Week as far down as Prior's Mills, and carried away two Negro Men that were coming to market with a few Eggs and a small Quantity of Butter.

They were also down at the same Place, last Friday and Saturday, and carried off some more Negroes, but were pursued by a Party from Powlis Hook, when they took to their Heels.

Several Indians on the Frontiers of Pennsylvania have informed many of the Inhabitants of that Province, that as soon as they have got their Corn planted, they intend to take up the Hatchet in Order to aid the Great King over the Water, in Consequence of which, several Families had removed from Wyoming and Shamokin into many Parts of New Jersey.

The Inhabitants of Bergen County, in New Jersey, have just received Orders to deliver for the Continental Army the 18th Man in their County, and all the Remainder is to be divided into 8 classes to hold themselves in Readiness to march at the first Beat of Drum where ever they may be ordered.

A Rebel Privateer Schooner made her appearance off Sandy Hook last Saturday, and had nigh taken one of our Pilot Boots the same Day.

We hear Sir William Howe sailed from Philadelphia for Great-Britain a few Days ago, and that there has been a Skirmish in New-Jersey, near Trenton, between a Part of the Royal Army under the Command of Sir William Erskin, and the Rebels under the Command of Mr. Maxwell, the Event of which we impatiently wait to hear.—New-York Gazette and Weekly Mercury, May 18, 1778.

Mr COLLINS,

You are requested, as you esteem and value your own interest and the publick's regard, to insert the following CARD in your next Paper.

THE Military present their compliments to Gen. Howe, or the next in command, and inform him, that as he has, through the malice and influence of some of the Tories, and Enemies of the United States, burnt two dwelling-houses and ten out-houses and stores, belonging to Joseph Borden, Esq. of Borden-Town; and two dwelling-houses and six valuable out-houses, for Col. Kirkbride of Bellevue, in Bucks County, besides robbing them of goods, &c. to a large amount—They, the military, purpose burning the same value belonging to the Tories in their own neighbourhood, who have not spirit enough openly to avow the cause they meanly and clandestinely endeavour to support, by which they would forfeit to the states—but to have special care, that not one farthing more shall be wasted than will fully retaliate—And that it is the determined resolution of the Military to go on in future upon this principle.

To Gen. Howe, &c.

TRENTON, May 20.

Extract of a letter from Camp,¹ dated May 13, 1778.

“We have accounts by various persons, that the enemy have dismounted many of their cannon, and put them on board—that their transports are taking forage aboard—and that ’tis suspected they are preparing for a retreat:—I am of the opinion however that they will not leave Philadelphia till they cannot possibly hold it longer—and perhaps the forage being put on board is only to accomodate the horses of Gen. Howe’s family and the refugees who go with him;—for I am informed by a gentleman, who has been down with a flag, that Gen. Howe will sail in a few days for England.”

Friday evening last this town² was handsomely illuminated, in consequence of the important intelligence brought from France by Mr. Deane.³ Princeton has also been illuminated on the same occasion.

Two deserters from our Row-galleys, who went to the enemy some time ago, were lately taken by a scouting party of our troops, in Gloucester county, and were brought to this town⁴ on Monday last. One of them is named John Gilfroy, who was tried yesterday by a Court-Martial, and condemned to be hanged: But his execution is deferred ’till the sentence is confirmed by his Excellency the President of the State of Pennsylvania. The other, we hear, is shortly to take his trial at Lancaster.

Mr. COLLINS,

Should America continue the Land of Liberty, it will probably be the happiest country the sun ever saw. The contemplation of this must animate every generous mind in the cause of Freedom.—I have thrown together a few lines on this subject, and if they are worth publication, you may insert them in your next Gazette.

¹ Bernardus Budd, a distant relative of Dr. Stacy Budd, was a man of marked ability. He was one of the founders of the New Jersey Medical Society, but having become involved in a scheme to counterfeit colonial bills of credit, was sentenced to be executed. Owing to his high social position and that of his associates, all were reprieved on the morning set for their execution. Subsequently, in 1777, he was appointed surgeon of General Wind's brigade, dying of putrid fever three months after his appointment. No stone marks his burial place at Columbia Bridge.

THE FUTURE GLORY OF AMERICA.

SOON as the lark observes the morning's grey,
 The first faint glimmerings of the opening day,
 Upward he springs, to meet the rising light,
 Hangs in mid-air, and carols at the sight :
 So towers the mind, to see the day at hand,
 And night's dull train withdrawing from our land ;
 She towers on high and hails the orient ray,
 The dawn of glory brightening into day :
 Rapt with the view, forsees the mid-day blaze—
 Sees distant times, and future scenes surveys.

She sees the time when this New World shall show
 The giant-strength she bears, and crush the foe ;
 When tyrant Kings shall vex her realms no more,
 But haughty Britain trembles at her power ;
 When mad Bellona shall forget to rage,
 And smiling Peace recalls the Golden Age ;
 When angel Freedom hastens to our shore,
 She calls it hers—nor be an exile more.

In this joint reign of Freedom and of Peace,
 I see the sons of this New World increase ;
 Num'rous as ocean sands I see them rise,
 Num'rous as stars which gild the winter skies,
 And westward far their fearless steps they press,
 And make a Garden of the Wilderness.

See! in those wilds where now the Savage roams,
 Or wigwams stand, fair Agriculture comes!
 At her approach the forest prostrate lies,
 And lo! the dwellings of our children rise:
 At her command, the golden harvest grows,
 The desert smiles and blossoms like the rose,
 And shepherds teach their fleecy flocks to stray
 Where the fierce panther us'd to prowl for prey.
 See! peaceful hamlets deck the rural scene,
 And towns arise by many a distant stream.
 I see them rise beside Ontario's flood,
 Where once huge oaks and ancient poplars stood:
 I see them glittering in the Ohio's tide,
 I see them deck the Mississippi's side.
 I see the time when Industry explores
 The desert thro', and meets the ocean's shores—
 Along those shores she bids fair cities smile,
 And heavy fields reward the peasant's toil,
 Invites a thousand navies to her strand,
 Laden with wealth from many a distant land:
 From Persia's realm's, the boast of former times,
 From China's coast or India's burning climes.

What millions swarm (call'd forth by Freedom's ray)
 From Georgia's groves to Baffin's frozen bay,
 From where the huge Pacific laves her shore,
 To where the wild Atlantic's surges roar.
 To bless these millions, Art exhausts her powers,
 And lavish Nature empties all her stores;
 While Commerce lays her treasures at their feet,
 And rifles different lands to make them great.

Then shall fair Science feast th' enraptur'd mind
 With Knowledge yet unpluckt, and Truth refin'd;
 No more recluse she spreads her hundred doors,
 And opens all her intellectual stores.—
 She calls the Muses from their ancient seats,
 And bids them hasten to her green retreats,—
 They hasten hither—and they love the glades,
 Stray thro' the meads and frolic in the shades;
 Smit with these virgin scenes, their praise rehearse,
 And bid them flourish in immortal verse;
 To paint their beauties, wake the poet's tongue,
 And not a grove shall bloom, or river flow unsung.

Some future bard, whom all the Muses love,
 Shall sing the charms of fair Virginia's grove,
 Or tune his vocal reed by Schuylkill's side,
 Struck with the beauties of his silver tide
 And Susquehanna, as she rolls along,
 Shall hear her name immortaliz'd in song.

Here Governments their last perfection take.
 Erected only for the People's sake:
 Founded no more on Conquest or in blood.
 But on the basis of the Public Good.
 No contests then shall mad ambition raise.
 No chieftains quarrel for a sprig of praise,
 No thrones shall rise, provoking lawless sway.
 And not a King to cloud the blissful day;
 But FREEDOM, universal FREEDOM reigns,
 Nor sees a slave in all her happy plains.

'Twas for these embryo blessings Warren bled,
 And lov'd Montgomery's daring spirit fled.
 In their defence brave Nash resign'd his breath,
 And gallant Mercer nobly frown'd on death.
 Oh! may their fame which blossoms in the tomb,
 And this dim view of ages yet to come,
 Nerve the young warriors arm in Freedom's cause,
 And edge the sword the noble patriot draws;
 Teach him in Freedom's cause, 'tis truly great,

To bare his bosom to the shafts of fate ;
 To brave the horrors of the deathful plain,
 And freely fall, if Heav'n shall so ordain.
 Then shall his spirit, free'd from mortal cares,
 Mount to the skies and mingle with the stars :
 Heroes shall kindle at his growing fame,
 And distant ages venerate his name.

ADOLPHUS.

TRENTON, May 27.

The MILITIA of this State are desired to be particularly attentive to signals—as a movement of the enemy is soon expected.

To-day the Legislature of this State are to meet at Princeton, agreeable to adjournment.

Friday last a prize vessel, laden with Irish beef and pork, bound to New-York, was taken by Capt. Anderson and 16 men, in an armed boat, and brought into Tom's River. Several other prizes have also been lately sent into Little Egg-Harbour. Their cargoes are taken proper care of—one of which consisted of a considerable quantity of salt.

Deserters from the British army are daily coming out of Philadelphia—and it remains to be confidently asserted that the enemy are making every preparation to evacuate that city in a short time.

We are informed that a gentleman arrived at Elizabethtown on Saturday last, from New-York, who brought an account that war had been declared there that day in form, against France—and that a French frigate of 28 guns had been captured and brought into New-York harbour the same day.

We have many corroborating accounts, that the enemy in New-York and Philadelphia have lately been impressing refugees, and young men inhabitants of those places, and putting them handcuffed on board their ships.

It is currently reported that the New Levies or Green Coats,¹ and Tories who have fled to the enemy for protection, are all to be sent immediately to the English West-Indies, to defend those islands against the French.

Yesterday twenty-one prisoners were brought to this town under guard, among whom are thirteen sailors, who were taken on board the prize vessels above-mentioned.

By the latest intelligence received from Philadelphia, we learn the enemy intend to retreat thro' this State to New-York.—We are informed the necessary preparations are making for their reception—That the whole militia of this State will be in motion within a few days; and that a large detachment of continental troops are now on their march to join General Dickinson.

HIS Excellency the Governor hereby directs the gentlemen appointed in this State to purchase horses for the cavalry, to apply for payment to Moore Furman, Esq. Deputy Quarter-Master General for this State, at Pitts-Town, who is furnished with cash and certificates for that purpose, producing to him receipts for the said horses from the officers to whom they have been delivered, and proper vouchers for the prices at which the same were respectively purchased.

15th of June, a complete suit of sails and running rigging for a brig of 200 tons burthen.¹ For particulars apply to Stephen Joseph Roget, at Easton, or to Capt. Maroquiér, at Trenton.

By virtue of sundry writs of fieri facias to me directed, against the lands and tenements of John Cook, administrator to the estate of Asa Cook, deceased, I have levied and seized on a tract of land in the township of Roxbury, containing about 15 acres, whereon is a house and a quarter part of a grist-mill, standing on Black-River about two miles below Thomas Fearelces mills. Likewise the plantation in Mendham where said Asa Cook, deceased, formerly lived, containing about 50 acres of good land, whereon is a good young orchard, a house and barn with a black-smith's shop, which will be exposed to sail at publick vendue on the premises last mentioned, on Wednesday the 8th day of June next, between the hours of 12 and 5 in the afternoon, for ready cash, by Extracts from his Excellency Governor LIVINGSTON'S Message to the General Assembly of the State of New-Jersey.

GENTLEMEN,

I HEARTILY congratulate you upon the agreeable news we have received from France, since I had the pleasure of meeting you last in this place. The treaties of alliance, and of amity and commerce, between his Most Christian Majesty and the United States of America, by which our freedom, sovereignty and independence, are fully recognized, ratified and guaranteed, and our trade left free and unembarrassed, are so advantageous on our part, and display such generosity and magnanimity on that of our illustrious ally, as cannot but excite in our breasts the most cordial respect for that powerful Monarch, and the devoutest acknowledgment of that propitious Providence which hath influenced the heart of a foreign Prince to interpose his assistance for delivering us from the bloody prosecution of one so lately our own. As we were at first compelled into a declaration of independence, it was the highest wisdom to solicit a suitable alliance for its security and support. To both these measures we may appeal to the whole world, that we were driven by a tyrannical King, a venal Parliament, and a flagitious Ministry. Indeed the conduct of our oppressors has thro' the whole course of the war, been so infatuate and remorseless, as if Heaven had deprived them of common sense, as well as Hell inspired them with all its malice. But their day of national correction is swiftly approaching. Their unparalleled cruelties both in the eastern and western world, have at last enkindled the Divine vengeance; and the judgments of God are now overtaking a nation which has filled up the measure of its iniquity: and long been the most impious and irreligious of any in Christendom. To chastise her insolence, the force of France and America is now united in an indissoluble league. How must haughty Britain be confounded at the dreadful news: and curse the fatal consequences of her moon-struck policy? Methinks I see her power and grandeur crumbling into ruin, and all her towering honours levelled with the dust. That decisive influence which she has long maintained in the scale of Europe, is now rapidly verging to sullen impotence; and the mistress of the ocean become the contempt of those very potentates, who lately revered her councils and trembled at her arms. But how speedily soever she may be doomed to final perdition, it is our duty to guard against the vindictive effects of her expiring struggles. When all the horrors of desperation seize her: and utterly hopeless of conquest, she determines to rise even above herself, by some signal stupenduous act of barbarity, having, like the Devil in the apocalypse, great wrath because she knoweth that she hath but short time; she may attempt to desolate what she finds it impossible to subdue. Against such ravage and destruction, to which, we know by experience, it is not beneath her dignity to condescend, it is our interest to oppose the most strenuous exertions. We want only one spirited and general effort to expel her remnant of banditti from the Continent, and forever to emancipate ourselves into compleat and uninterrupted liberty. One campaign morè will, in all probability, decide the important contest: And in whose favour it is likely to terminate, is written by the hand of Providence in characters too legible to be misunderstood.

The alacrity of our men to enter into the service, and the great dispatch with which our battalions are completing, must also affect every lover of his country with singular pleasure.

The resolution of Congress of the 19th of March, respecting the raising the quotas of men, and the providing their accoutrements, is herewith laid before you, together with that of the 17th of April, pursuant to which this State is only to compleat three regiments of infantry in the manner recommended by the resolution of the 26th day of February last.

Gentlemen,

As you rose at the last sitting of the Assembly without ratifying the Articles of Confederation and perpetual Union between the States, I hope they will engage your early attention at the present.

The Congress, by their resolution of the 10th of March, having earnestly requested the Governors and Presidents of the respective States to transmit to them as soon as possible, attested copies of the acts passed by their respective legislatures, in pursuance of recommendations of Congress, which they may have received since the first day of November last, and of all acts which they may hereafter pass in consequence of future recommendations. You will be pleased to furnish me, for that purpose, with attested copies of the acts first described, with all convenient speed.

I embrace this opportunity farther to communicate to you a resolution of Congress, of the 1st instant, recommending it to the several States to empower the executive authority of such States, from time to time, to grant exemptions from duty in the militia to such persons as may, from time to time, be employed in manufacturing military stores and other articles, for the use of the United States.¹

The present condition of our publick accounts renders it indispensibly necessary to appoint some person in the character of Auditor, with a sufficient salary to induce a gentleman of adequate skill and abilities to accept of the appointment.

I hope, Gentlemen, it will engage your reasonable consideration what measures ought to be adopted respecting those amphibious inmates,² (ever-willing citizens to all the purposes of deriving from the State every legal benefit and protection, but to none of returning reciprocal duty and allegiance) who seem resolved, to the very end of the quarrel, to maintain a kind of shameful and most disingenuous neutrality; hoping, by not avowedly espousing either side, but occasionally and indirectly abetting both, to secure to themselves a favourable reception with the prevailing party, let that party eventually prove to be the oppressive or oppressed. Such political hypocrites ought, by a general test, to be dragged from their lurking holes, ferretted out of their duplicity and refuge of lies, and be taught by an act for the purpose, that however willing the legislature may be to imitate the example of the generous householder, who made no difference in his payments between those who went to labour in his vineyard at the first or eleventh hour; they are determined not to set the first example in the world, of allowing wages to those who never would enter the vineyard at all, 'till the grapes were fully ripe, by the cultivation of others; and came then only with the view of sneakingly sponging upon, and regaling themselves with, the wine of other people's expressing.

There are in this State many valuable and conscientious citizens,³ who are scrupulous of taking an oath in the present form, and with the English ceremony of kissing the book; which they consider as superstitious, and a remnant of popery. Amidst that liberality of sentiment, and utter abhorrence of infringing upon the rights of conscience, which seems to mark the present æra with peculiar lustre; can it be consistent with sound policy, or the generous spirit of our constitution, to debar an honest man for a religious scruple from the privileges of society, which the most profligate and abandoned are permitted to enjoy in the fullest latitude? I therefore flatter myself that our legislature will be so indulgent to this scrupulosity, which is at least innocent, as to authorize the magistrate in the administration of an oath, to dispense with such part of it as may embarrass the conscience, and is beyond question altogether formal, and in no respect essential to its nature or solemnity.

I have farther to lay before you, Gentlemen, a resolution of Congress, of the 23d of April, recommending it to the legislatures of the several States to pass laws, or to the executive authority of each State, if invested with sufficient power, to issue proclamations offering pardon, with such exceptions and under such limitations and restrictions as they shall think expedient, to such of their inhabitants or subjects as have levied war against any of the States, or adhered to, aided or abetted the enemy, and shall surrender themselves to any civil or military officer of any of these States, and shall return to the State to which they may belong, before the tenth day of June next, and recommending it to the good and faithful citizens of those States to receive such returning penitents with compassion and mercy, and to forgive and bury in oblivion their past failings and transgressions.

Tho' I think it my duty to submit this resolution to your serious consideration, because it is recommended by Congress, I do not think it my duty to recommend it to your approbation, because it appears to me both unequal and impolitic. It may, consistently with the profoundest veneration for that august Assembly, be presumed that they are less acquainted with the particular circumstances and internal police of some of the States than those who have had more favourable opportunities for that purpose. There seems, it is true, something so noble and magnanimous in proclaiming an unmerited amnesty to a number of disappointed criminals submitting themselves to the mercy of their country: and there is in reality something so divine and christian in the forgiveness of injuries, that it may appear rather invidious to offer any thing in obstruction of the intended clemency. But as to the benevolent religion to which we are under the highest obligations to conform our conduct, though it forbids at all times, and in all cases, the indulgence of personal hatred and malevolence, it prohibits not any treatment of national enemies or municipal offenders, necessary to self-preservation, and the general weal of society. And as to humanity, I could never persuade myself that it consisted in such lenity towards our adversaries, either British or domestic, as was evidently productive of tenfold barbarity on their part; when such barbarity would probably have been prevented by our retaliating upon them the first perpetration; and consequently our apparent inhumanity, in particular instances, have certainly been humane in the final result. Alas! how many lives had been saved, and what a scene of inexpressible misery prevented, had we, from the beginning, treated our bosom-traitors with proper severity, and inflicted the law of retaliation upon an enemy too savage to be humanized by any other argument! As both political pardon and punishment ought to be regulated by political considerations, and must derive their expedience or impropriety from their salutary or pernicious influence upon the community. I cannot conceive what advantages are proposed by inviting to the embraces of their country a set of beings, from which any country, I should imagine, would esteem it a capital part of its felicity to remain for ever at the remotest distance. It is not probable that those who deserted us to aid the most matchless connoisseurs in the refinements of cruelty, (who have exhausted human ingenuity in their engines of torture) in introducing arbitrary power and all the horrors of slavery, and will only return from disappointment not from remorse, will ever make good subjects to a state founded in liberty, and inflexibly determined against every inroad of lawless dominion. The thirty-one criminals lately convicted of the most flagrant treason, and who, by the gracious interposition of government, were, upon very hopeful signs of penitence, generously pardoned, and then, with hypocritical cheerfulness, inlisted in our service, have all, to a man, deserted to the enemy, and are again in arms against their native country, with the accumulated guilt of its being now not only the country that first gave them life, but which hath, after they had most notoriously forfeited it, mercifully rescued them from death. Whence it is probable that a real Tory is by any human means absolutely inconvertible, having so entirely extinguished all the primitive virtue and patriotism natural to man, as not to leave a single spark to rekindle the original flame.—It is indeed against all probability that men, arrived at the highest possible pitch of degeneracy, the preferring of tyranny to a free government, should, except by a miracle of Omnipotence, be ever capable of one single virtuous impression. They have, by a kind of gigantic effort of villany, astonished the whole world, even that of transcending, in the enormities of desolation and blood-shed, a race of murderers before unequalled, and without competitor. Were it not for these miscreants, we should have thought that for cool, deliberate cruelty, and unavailing, undecisive havoc, the sons of Britain were without parallel. But considering the education of the latter, which has familiarized them to the shedding of innocent blood, from the meer thirst of lucre, they have been excelled in their own peculiar and distinguishing excellence, by this monstrous birth and off-scouring of America, who, in defiance of nature and of nurture, have not only by a reverst ambition chosen bondage before freedom, but waged an infernal war against their dearest connections, for not making the like abhorred and abominable election. By them have numbers of our most useful and meritorious citizens been ambushed, hunted down, pillaged, unhoused, stolen or butchered. By them has the present contest on the part of Britain, been encouraged, aided and protracted. They are, therefore, responsible for all the additional blood that has been split by the addition of their weight in the scale of the enemy. Multitudes of them have superadded perjury to treason. At the commencement of our opposition they appeared more sanguine than others, and, like the crackling of thorns under a pot, exceeded in blaze and noise, the calm and durable flame of the steady and persevering. They have associated, subscribed and sworn to assist in repelling the hostile attempts of our boweless oppressors. They have with awful solemnity plighted their faith and honour to stand, with their lives and fortunes, by the Congress and the General, in support of that very liberty which, upon the first opportunity, they perfidiously arm'd to oppose, and have since sacrilegiously sworn utterly to exterminate. This worthy citizen has lost a worthy father; that one a beloved brother; and a third, a darling son, either immediately by their hands, or by their betraying him to the enemy, who, from a momentary unintentional relapse into humanity were sometimes inclined to spare, when these pitiless wretches insisted upon slaughter, or threatened to complain of a relenting officer, merely because he was not diabolically cruel.—Nor will such an act of grace prove eventual of restoring to their injured country the most proper objects of pardon. The more ignorant and deluded (if such ignorance and delusion there can be) will not be able to obtain leave from their vigilant task-masters to return to their duty. The most dangerous and influential will be indulged with this privilege, and that only to save their estates, without the least compunction of conscience, alteration of sentiment, or melioration of heart. These having already been sworn and forsworn, will, without ceremony, repeat their perjury whenever it appears conducive to the introduction of tyranny.—To screen such characters from popular resentment and personal insult, I presume no prudent man would chuse to become surety. Those of our citizens who have from the very beginning of the illustrious conflict, hazarded their persons and property, will think it iniquitable to receive such malignants into a full participation of all the blessings resulting from that independence, which, with the smiles of Providence, has by their co-operation been so gloriously contested, and at so great expence and peril, battled out of the very jaws of tyranny. There is, in some of our counties in particular, who have more eminently suffered by their wanton ravages, so rooted an aversion against this kind of gentry, that the more conspicuous Whigs (generally the greatest sufferers) would think it extremely hard to proffer them all the immunities of that happy constitution, which they at infinite risque have been instrumental in establishing, while those non-naturals were meditating our destruction, spilling our blood, and ardently wishing for our final enthrallment. And can they ever expect to regain the confidence of their late fellow-subjects, whose very looks methinks must confound and abash them? Surely their mean spiritedness in brooking to return to their country, circumstanced as they are, is only to be equalled by their guilt in deserting it. Should we not be much happier, together with the abolition of regal mis-rule, to purge the continent also of this political pollution, which must necessarily tarnish the lustre, and may gradually infect some of the still incorrupted sons of America? Will it not be better policy to insist upon a perpetual separation from those whose intercourse with us must constantly revive the most painful ideas, and whose very presence among the genuine sons of freedom, would seem as unnatural as that of Satan among the sons of God? The disgrace they have brought upon their native country can never be expunged except by expunging them. Let them, therefore, rather go into voluntary banishment, and settle some uninhabited island, rocky, if they please, as their hearts, and scared as their consciences, where, not having one honest man among them, but being all involved in the same atrocious and insuperable crime of parricide, no one traitor can upbraid a brother traitor with his treason; nor any individual of the whole culprit-fraternity point at a greater scelerat than himself—There let them establish a system of vassalage most suitable to their own slavish dispositions; and erect an infamous monument in putrid memorial of those apostates from reason and converts to despotism, who fled from Justice, for an attempted assassination of Liberty.—Or let them take sanctuary in a certain allready-settled island, (probably their favourite spot, because contaminated with every species of infamy) where it is no bar to the royal favour to have embrued one's hands in a brother's blood; where the massacre and famishing of thousands has been rewarded with a peerage; and where no man need to despair of promotion for being a rascal.

PRINCETON,

WIL. LIVINGSTON.

TRENTON, JUNE 3

We are informed that on Wednesday morning last, a party of about seventy of the Greens from Sandy-Hook, landed near Major Kearney's, headed the mill-creek, Middletown-Point, and marched to Mr. John Burrow's, made him prisoner, burnt his mills and both his store-houses, all valuable buildings, beside a great deal of his furniture—Also took Lient. Col. John Smock, Capt. Christopher Little, Mr. Joseph Wall, Capt. Jacob Covenhoven, and several other persons; killed — Pearce and — Van Brockle, and wounded another man mortally. Having completed these and several other barbarities, they precipitately returned the same morning to give an account of their abominable deeds to their bloody employers. A number of those gentry, we learn, were formerly inhabitants of that neighbourhood.

On Monday morning, the 18th of May, to the unspeakable regret of her friends and relations, died at Shrewsbury, in her 55th year, Mrs. Jane Arthur, widow, after a long and tedious decay of nature, which she suffered with exemplary patience and christian resignation.—A liberal hospitality, and universal benevolence, were some of her principal characteristicks; but her life was distinguished by many other amiable virtues, which at once adorn'd her christian profession, and endeared her to all her connections.—In the earliest stage of her disorder she frequently expressed a full apprehension of her approaching dissolution; and, accordingly, bidding adieu to all sublunary scenes, she prepared herself without the least apparent dismay to meet the king of terrors; resting all her hopes of eternal felicity on the merey of God, in and through the merits of the great Redeemer of mankind.

On Thursday last General MAXWELL, with a second detachment of continental troops, and a train of artillery, arrived here from Head-Quarters; a third detachment is now upon their march for this place, to join a number of militia under the command of General DICKINSON.

FRIENDLY HINTS TO SUBJECTS, OR THOSE UNDER AUTHORITY.

GOVERNMENT is undoubtedly instituted for the good of the people. And among the vast variety of forms which take place in the world, that government is best by which the greatest happiness of the people, in consistency with the greatest liberty, is promoted. The greatest happiness of a people is protection in their persons and property, and the free enjoyment of the greatest number of privileges consistent with the comfortable existence of society. This latter is real liberty, viz. The free enjoyment of the most privileges possible, consistent with a state of society.

Man is a sociable creature; and better be under the worst kind of government, better be in the most absolute slavery, than in a state of entire solitude; but better not to have existed at all, than to live in either of those circumstances.—Anchorites and Hermits may say what they will, but mankind cannot continue to exist without society, or without government: Yea these enemies of human felicity ever found some social connection necessary to their own wretched existence.

As I think proper, through the channel of this useful Gazette to give, with all deference and respect, some hints to those in authority, so I shall with freedom make some observations for the use of my fellow-citizens that are under it.

I. As liberty, liberty! has been the great cry for some years, I wish all to understand wherein it really consists. Liberty is indeed the greatest possible earthly blessing men can enjoy. It implies in it every temporal good. Too much cannot be said in its praises. The climax of eulogium cannot transcend the truth. The boldest pencil cannot equal, nor the finest flatter, the original. Yet remember liberty is as really different from licentiousness as it is from slavery; and licentiousness is ever endeavouring to worm out the former, that it may introduce the latter. It is like hypocrisy; this is the semblance of religion, and that of liberty; and however specious both are in their first appearances and high pretences, they will not bear the touchstone of examination, and are equally pernicious and destructive where-ever they are indulged and prevail. A true religion, when it has favoured any part of mankind, is first corrupted by hypocrisy, and then entirely subverted by flagitious iniquity: So liberty is generally first corrupted by licentiousness, and then totally exterminated by slavery. As we abhor the latter, let us carefully watch against its delusive, enchanting and diabolical forerunner—And for this purpose, let us consider wherein real liberty consists, and faithfully adhere to it, and pro aris et focis contend for it. What some whimsical philosophers have termed natural liberty or absolute freedom, is a mere chimera. There is no such thing, nor possibly can be. For by natural or absolute freedom every man has a right to every thing; but common property is a solccism, and destroys the very idea of property. And to suppose that absolute liberty gives every man a right to enjoy whatever he can acquire by power, is leaving neither right nor liberty in the world only to the Sampson, who happens to be the strongest. Wherefore what involves such glaring absurdities is never worth supposing, much less wasting time to reason about it.—But “true civil liberty consists in a people’s making their own laws, and creating their own magistrates, by representatives freely and frequently chosen from among and by themselves, and living in due obedience, homage and respect to this their own authority.” I defy the universe to produce a more perfect idea of liberty than this.—This is the purest, this is the highest liberty that can take place in any nation or community. Here the people chuse a body of rep-representatives freely, without compulsion or undue influence; and frequently, that is a wise and rational frequency, such as may not be burdensome to the electors, nor allow time to intoxicate with power the elected. And the most perfect period yet devised for elections is once every year. These representatives being the creatures of the people, ever accountable to, and may be displaced and disgraced by them, cannot but intend and aim at the highest interest of the community in all the laws they make: Therefore the laws must be the most disinterested and best. It is true these representatives, however wise and good, are liable to mistake; and hence may sometimes enact laws, which upon trial, are not for the happiness of the society: but as soon as experience and decent remonstrances and petitions discover the fact, they will immediately rescind or alter the same. If they do not, the people are to reject such legislators as traitors, and elect more faithful and honest in their places. These representatives are also to create magistrates or executors of the laws, and these, allowing for human imperfection, will always be the wisest and best men in the community. Now, can there be greater liberty than in living in such a state, than living in obedience to such laws, and conducting with all respect to such majesty and authority? This is your felicity, my fellow-citizen—You live in the freest government possible—You enjoy the purest, the highest liberty. Wherefore do nothing thro' ignorance, caprice, perverseness or injustice that may stain the beauty, or diminish the glory of this fabric. Let it be your constant endeavour to comfort and support your honorable representatives in their laborious business, and strengthen the hands of your magistrates, and all in executive authority. Consider the laws are made by yourselves, the executors of the laws are chosen by and from among yourselves. Both the laws and administration are strictly and intimately your own. Therefore, to be carping at, and abusing with gross epithets such rulers, to be slandering and traducing the magistrates, to be finding fault with and striving to evade the laws, argue understandings too weak, and hearts too wicked for the enjoyment of liberty. Such wretches are like the devils who despised the liberty of heaven, and preferred the chains of eternal darkness: So these chuse the clanking chains of slavery, and prefer the galling yoke of bondage to the fair inheritance of precious freedom. Allow me to entreat you, my fellow-citizens, to beware that none of you be so lost to reason and humanity, as to be found among such a black, such a slavish herd. Recollect an ancient book, which I wish was more read by my countrymen, that paints in the most odious colours, "those presumptuous, self-willed and filthy dreaming creatures who despise government, and speak evil of dignities."

II. Indulge me, my countrymen, while I beseech you not to begrudge your rulers some small posts of profit, whereby they may do something, in common with others, for the advantage of their families. Remember your representatives and justices serve their country for very inadequate wages, to the no small detriment of their private affairs; and when there are any places a little lucrative, on whom can they be conferred with equal propriety as on them. And yet I have heard some murmuring and grumbling, "that the representatives shared places of profit among themselves, and if there was any lucrative post it was sure to be bestowed upon some officer of the state."— But let subjects be fair and just, while they cry out for justice and impartiality in their rulers. It is not true, by any means, that our representatives monopolize all the profitable posts: and do, for the sake of propriety, allow them who serve the publick for almost nothing, an equal share of those places. One thing I have remarked, that persons who do the least for the publick service, are generally finding the most fault in the chimney-corner with their representatives, their magistrates, the laws and administration. They are begrudging the faithful and generous patriot every place of profit and honour, and waste their time in slandering, reproaching and doing mischief, because that they, mean souls, who never did a noble and disinterested action in their lives, do not receive all preferment and emolument.— Consider, my countrymen, that as our rulers receive by no means a sufficient reward for their service, that as they spend their time and money and serve their country for what is next to nothing, it is but reasonable, proper and fit that they should share more profitable places among them than they do. They are the wisest and best men in the community: This we must acknowledge, or suppose ourselves fools for chusing them. And if they were not our representatives, we would look upon them the proper persons for those honourable posts. Shall we then, because their patriotic zeal disposes them to serve their country to their own private damage, be found begrudging them a few of those places? Yea, let us rather encourage them, by assuring them it is their duty, and it will give pleasure to their constituents, that they should take a larger share of them.

Perhaps some may think the writer of this is a ruler or connected with those in authority. But be assured he is not. I never had any post of honour myself, nor do I ever expect any. I never had any relative or friend in office, either in the old government or the new. I am an old obscure exempt, to whom propriety has left no other way of fanning the precious patriotic fire, but by friendly advice to rulers and ruled, with this feeble though well-intended pen.

III. There are three sorts of people among us, my fellow citizens, that should be observed with a watchful eye, and with great caution elected to, or honoured with, any places of trust or profit. The first is the torics, who have always been inimical, and evidently with the English plunderers in heart and affection, not only those who have fled their country and openly joined the enemy; but also the baser sort, (if possible) who have stayed at home, and have no other attachment to their country but the slender obligation of a state-oath, which they took against the grain, merely to save their property.—The second sort are those who took, what was called, protection, when the enemy invaded our State; especially those who were not in the enemy's hands, but went from a distance to surrender, like unprincipled villains, their plighted faith their honour, their amor patriæ, or the love of their country, and to crave protection and sell themselves and posterity for slaves. These are a company of such weak, timid, covetous, selfish, cowardly, unprincipled and every way mean spirited wretches, that they are absolutely unfit to be trusted with any place in government. They will surely sell their country and their honour in the day of trial, when they judge it will subserve their interest.—The third sort are those who have refused commissions under the state. They apprehended, if they accepted commissions, they would hereby render themselves obnoxious to the enemy; therefore, come of justice and their country what would, they determined to act in the line of personal safety.

Many of all these classes I know will be ambitious of and thirsting after commissions, when peace is established; yet not a man of them ever ought to have it in his power to refuse or embrace the honours of his county again. They have evidenced themselves too much of the poltroon species to be trusted.

IV. Ever remember the brave, the faithful and active friends of the country; those who dared openly to espouse its cause in the worst of times; who nobly abandoned their houses, forsook their families and their all, and rushed into the field of danger, and gloriously repelled the foe. These are men that have been tried: they have proved themselves friends to their country;—in them we may safely and fully confide. Wherefore, let us ever aim to reward those men with respect and honour. As they have done great honour to their country, let their country ever honour them with legislative and executive power.

AN ELECTOR.

TRENTON, JUNE 10.

His Excellency the Governor has appointed the Supreme Court of this State to be held for the future at Hillsborough (commonly called Millstoue) in Somerset county, of the usual Terms.

His Excellency has been pleased to appoint the Hon. JOHN IMLAY, Esq. Judge of the Court of Admiralty for this State.

Extract of a letter from camp at the Valley Forge, dated June 5, 1778.

“The last accounts from Philadelphia are, that the transports with the baggage have fallen down the river—that they have begun to destroy some of their out-works—that they have broken off the trunnions of the heavy cannon which are not put on board—and that the whole army is ordered to be in readiness to march at a minute’s warning.”

“I have just returned from the enemy’s lines, where I learnt that they were actually destroying their works—that all the ships, except the Vigilant and four transport ships, and as many smaller vessels, were fell down—that the eight remaining were ordered to drop down as last night—that a number of boats mounted on carriages, and a body of sailors to attend them, were at Cooper’s ferry, which boats were to transport the enemy across the creeks in Jersey, in case the bridges should be taken up or destroyed.—The prisoners in Philadelphia will be exchanged in a few days, when the enemy will probably move off immediately.—They have knock’d the trunnions off the iron cannon in the city, and drove the broken pieces in the muzzles.”

From good authority we learn that the enemy have, during a fortnight past, impressed a great number of waggons and horses, belonging to the farmers near their lines in Pennsylvania, for the purpose of conveying part of their baggage through this state to New-York, to which place a movement is daily expected.

Extract of a letter from Elizabeth-Town, June 6.

“Last night Capt. Nathaniel Fitz Randolph of Woodbridge, with a party of 15 volunteers, landed on Staten-Island, surprized and made prisoners 13 of the militia of the island who were on guard; also Col. Christopher Billop Farmer, Lieut. Daniel Winants, and one more not on duty; without firing a musket, or any accident happening to him or his party. It ought to be mentioned in commendation of this worthy officer and his brave followers, that altho' the law of retaliation would have justified their marking their route with devastation and ruin, they were careful not to do the least injury to any peaceable Inhabitant—But O ye destructive, butchering, British monsters, beware!---we are not obliged to delay retaliation any longer!---therefore, as you value the safety of your friends on the island, do not set such another example as that at Middletown, for the consequences may be fatal to the Tories on the island, in spite of all your efforts to protect them!"

WAS taken up, the 19th of May, at New-Brunswick, a black GELDING with a star in his forehead, one white hind foot and one white fore foot, branded on his left thigh H S, about 14 hands high, three years old, and trots altogether. —New-Jersey Gazette. Vol. 1, No. 28, June 10, 1778.

New-York, June 15. The Rebels were down at East-Chester last Week, and carried off Prisoner from thence, Mr. Isaac Butler, they also made an Attempt on the Picquet Guard on Staten-Island last Tuesday Night, but were beat off, the Particulars of which are as follow, viz.

About One o'clock the Rebels began a heavy Cannonade from their Works at Elizabeth-Town Point, and soon after attempted to land, in a Number of Flat Boats, upon Staten-Island, between the Blazing-Star and Burnt-Island, but finding the Provincial Troops stationed at that Place, were alarmed, and prepared to give them, a proper Reception, they returned to the Jersey Shore, and remained quiet till about four o'clock the same morning, when they again made their Appearance in ten Boats, each supposed to contain 100 Men, and attempted to land at the same Place, under Cover of the Fire from their Batteries, and a continued Discharge of Small Arms from the Boats; but they were so vigorously opposed by Gen. Skinner's Brigade, that they were obliged to make a final and disgraceful Retreat. In the Interim the Corps of Royal Artillery, posted at the Redoubts betwixt Ryerson and Cole's Ferry, were in Motion, and proceeding to the Part of the Island alarmed, by the Road to Decker's-Ferry, with two Six Pounders: The Troops at the different Posts on the Island, were also under Arms, and much disappointed, when Orders from Gen. Campbell, to return to their Cantonments, were brought by the Light Horse.

There are now at Cranberry Inlet, in New-Jersey, three Gallies from New-London, of 4 Guns each, that have taken several Vessels, among them a Schooner from Cork with Provisions, and a Vessel from the West-Indies, with Rum and Sugar.

About 11 o'Clock last Saturday Evening a Party of about 20 Rebels, supposed to have come from Amboy, carried off from Flatbush, on Long-Island, Major MONCRIEF, and Mr. THEOPHYLACTE BACHE, of this Place.

The same Party attempted to break into the House of DAVID MATTHEWS, Esq. our Mayor, in order to carry him off likewise; but as they did not get in as fast as they expected, and an old Negro firing a Gun, they thought proper to decamp, taking with them two or three Rebel Officers.—New-York Gazette and Weekly Mercury, June 15, 1778.

Mr. COLLINS,

I have seen a piece somewhat resembling a mendicant brief, in your last, signed an Elector, who, I cannot help thinking, is either already a Representative or expects to become one at the next election, or at least hopes for the honour and profit of being made a Justice of the Peace.—The hungry zeal the author displays for promotion to places of profit, has caused him to neglect the constitution and even common sense, in the course of his ratiocination.—He says “indulge me, my countrymen, while I beseech you not to begrudge your rulers some small posts of profit whereby they may do something in common with others, for the advantage of their families. Remember your representatives and justices serve their country for very inadequate wages; and when there are any places a little lucrative, on whom can they be conferred with equal propriety as on them”—He should have said, on themselves.

Poor ignorant! Methinks I hear one of those mendicants asking charity through the iron grates of a prison—but what surprizes me is, that the man should dare, in publick, to propose so base and so dangerous a thing as that the representatives should monopolize the offices of profit, and so usurp the power of the executive, and by this means throw the legislative and executive into the same hands, which ought ever to be kept distinct—These must be kept separate, or else there is no liberty here.

The gentle reader too is treated with a bit of Latin, which the writer has slipped upon us very cleverly—He says, “let us consider wherein real liberty consists, and faithfully adhere to it, and pro aris et focis contend for it.”

Pro aris et focis!

What sad nonsense is this—

The real meaning is,

Altars and fire-places.

But to inform the author in prose the literal translation of “pro aris et focis” is for our altars and fire-places, which is a metaphorical expression, signifying our religious and civil liberties. But from the manner I cannot help thinking the gentleman, by pro aris et focis, meant sword, gun, and blunderbuss: which are, to be sure, very good weapons, and I hope will be effectually used by my brave fellow-citizens and countrymen in this best of causes.

A WHIG.

TRENTON, June 17.

William Marriner, a volunteer, with eleven men, and Lieut. John Schanek, of our militia, went last Saturday evening from Middletown Point to Long-Island, in order to take a few prisoners from Flatbush; and returned with Major Montrieffe and Mr. Theophilus Bache, (the worshipful Mayor and Tormentor General, David Matthews, Esq. who has inflicted on our prisoners the most unheard-of cruelties, and who was the principal object of the expedition, being unfortunately in the city) with four slaves, and brought them to Princeton, to be delivered to his Excellency the Governor.—Mr. Marriner with his party left Middletown Point on Saturday evening, and returned at six o'clock next morning, having travelled by land and water above fifty miles, and behaved with the greatest bravery and prudence.

We have undoubted intelligence that on Saturday last the enemy in Philadelphia burnt all the vessels on the stocks—and that the greater part of the British army are now at Cooper's ferry, under marching orders, from whence a movement thro' this State to Amboy, is expected to take place in the course of a few hours. The whole militia of this state are in readiness to march at a moment's warning.

We are informed that several deserters from the enemy on Staten-Island have lately come from thence to Woodbridge and Elizabeth-Town.—The new levies have changed their green coats for red ones, and Mr. Skinners poor deluded followers begin now to see that this is but a prelude to their being drafted to fill up the British regiments.

Last Friday morning, says a correspondent, Brigadier-General Winds, with about 40 militia stationed at Elizabeth-Town, went to Amboy, and there so roughly saluted an armed brig belonging to his most pacific majesty, which lay between the church in Amboy and Col. Billop's house on Staten-Island, and had for three or four days been a terror to the well-affected inhabitants about Woodbridge and Amboy, as to make her slip her cables and make off in which she was greatly favoured by a fair breeze of wind, or she must probably either struck or ran on shore. Our shot made great havoc among her rigging, and did considerable damage to her hull, and there is great reason to believe, did some execution among her men.

BY HIS EXCELLENCY

WILLIAM LIVINGSTON, Esq.

Governor, Captain-General, and Commander in Chief in and over the State of New-Jersey, and the territories thereunto belonging, Chancellor and Ordinary in the same:

WHEREAS, by an Act of the Legislature of this State, intituled, An Act for the regulating, training and arraying the militia, passed at Princeton the fourteenth day of April last, it is among other things enacted, that the militia of this State shall be divided into two brigades, as follows, to wit, The militia of the counties of Middlesex, Somerset, Essex, Bergen, Morris and Sussex shall form one brigade; and the militia of the counties of Hunterdon, Burlington, Monmouth, Gloucester, Salem, Cumberland and Cape-May, shall form the other brigade. And whereas it is become necessary, in pursuance of the said act, to make a new arrangment in the present brigades of this State: It is his Excellency's order that General Wind's brigade consist of the said six counties first enumerated, to wit, Middlesex, Somerset, Essex, Bergen, Morris and Sussex; and that the militia of the counties of Hunterdon, Burlington, Monmouth, Gloucester, Salem, Cumberland and Cape-May, compose the brigade of General Heard; of which all the officers and privates of the militia of this State are directed to take notice, and to govern themselves accordingly. And the said Brigadiers General are, with all convenient speed, to make a return of their respective brigades to the Commander in Chief of this State, and of their arms, accoutrements and ammunition; And in such returns particularly to specify the persons in their respective brigades, who have procured, or pretend to have procured substitutes in any of the New-Jersey regiments in the continental service, with the names of such substitutes, and the time when, place where, and the officers by whom such substitutes are said to have been inlisted.

Given under my hand at Princeton, the 12th day of June, in the year of our Lord, one thousand seven hundred and seventy-eight.

By his Excellency's command,
William Livingston, jun. D. Sec. }

TO BE SOLD

Several tracts of valuable LAND, one lying situate at the head of Musconetung river, in New Jersey, about thirty-five miles from Elizabeth Town and four from Suckasunney Plains, containing about three thousand acres, having on it a large forge with four fires and two hammers, a grist mill and saw mill on one of the best streams in America, with eighty acres of choice meadow and many valuable buildings on the same, all in good order, which is now under lease for eight and a half tons of bar iron per annum; it will be sold together or separate. Also another tract lying situate on the said river, known by the name of Squire's Point, about fifteen miles from Easton on the river Delaware, containing about one thousand eight hundred acres, having on it an old forge and very good grist mill, a dwelling-house and barn, all in good order. Also another tract lying situate about fifty miles from Esopus, containing about nine thousand acres. Also another tract lying situate on Otter Creek, choice good land, containing about four thousand acres. Also a large parcel of cattle, sheep, and hogs, and a large quantity of farming utensils too tedious to mention. Also a phaeton and pair of neat horses, chair and sulkey, a fine English stallion and several breeding mares. All those that have demands to bring in their accounts, and they will be adjusted; and those that are indebted to me either by bond, note, or book accounts, are requested to discharge the same immediately, as I intend to remove to West Florida, chief of my family being now there. Any person or persons by applying to the subscriber for any of the above articles of land, may purchase as they can agree for Continental money or credit, with giving bonds and good security, by

The British army early last Thursday morning, completed their evacuation of Philadelphia, having before transported their stores and most of their artillery into the Jerseys, where they had thrown up some works, and several of their regiments were encamped. They manned the lines the preceding night, and retreating over the commons, crossed at Gloucester point. It is supposed they will endeavor to go to New York. A party of the American lighthorse pursued them very close, and took a great number of prisoners, some of whom were Refugees. —The Pennsylvania Evening Post, June 20, 1778.

New-York, June 22. The Militia of the Province of New-Jersey are divided into two Brigades as follows, viz., Sussex, Morris, Bergen, Essex, Somerset and Middlesex, to be commanded by General Wind; and Salem, Cumberland, Cape May, Gloucester, Monmouth, Hunterdon, and Burlington, under the Command of General Heard.

The Party that carried away Mr. Bache and Major Moncrieff, from Flatbush on Long-Island, as mentioned in our last, came from Middletown Point, in New-Jersey, in two Whale Boats, consisting of 11 Men, commanded by William Marriner, well known in this Place. They set out in the Evening and got home again by 6 o'clock next Morning.

LEFT at Hoebuck-Ferry, some time since, a TRUNK, supposed to contain cloathing. Whoever has lost the same, may have it again, proving their property, and paying charges, by applying to HENRY DAWSON, living between the Fly-Market and Burling's-slip.—New-York Gazette and Weekly Mercury, June 22, 1778.

The last advices from the Jersies inform, that the American army was at Princetown, the British at Allentown, and that the former had harrassed the latter greatly by detached parties.

There never was an instance of so much desertion in a British army, as what now prevails in the Jersies; near five hundred have already come into Philadelphia since they left it, besides great numbers who go up the country. By accounts from them we learn that they have been much impeded and harrassed in their march, and have lost numbers of their grenadiers and light infantry.

Ran away from the subscriber, living in Newtown township, East Jersey, an apprentice lad named BERNARD ROBERTS, about fourteen years of age, middle sized. He had on when he went away, an oznabrug shirt and trousers, and coarse hat about half worn. Whoever secures said lad, so that his master gets him again, shall have TWENTY SHILLINGS reward, by applying to William Heppard at the above place. June 22.—The Pennsylvania Evening Post, June 25, 1778.

New-York, June 29. The Royal Army under the Command of Sir HENRY CLINTON, left Philadelphia the 18th Inst. and the 26th a Division of them was at a Place called the Cross-Roads in Monmouth County, about 22 Miles S. E. from South Amboy, the Center was at Crosswicks, and the Rear at Allan's-Town, the two last mentioned Places 5 Miles apart, and half way between Amboy and Philadelphia, a very plentiful Country.

Three fourths of the Militia of New-Jersey are going to oppose the Royal Army, by breaking up the Roads, &c.

The Prize Schooner which arrived here last Monday, was chased off Egg Harbour the preceding Evening by a Rebel Privateer.

Last Wednesday Night Capt. Randle, from Elizabeth-Town, came over to Staten-Island with a Party of about 14 Men, and fired upon some of the Militia that were on Guard, wounded Mr. Richard Connor in the Arm, and one Ashar Tappen in the Leg, but neither dangerously. The Militia pursued the Party, but they got into their Boat in a great Hurry, and made for the Jersey Shore with all Expedition.

We hear that a certain George Zabriskie was a few Days since shot on the Road near Paramus, in New-Jersey, by a Person unknown. The Day before he had been busy in pressing Waggons to carry the Grain from the Farmers in that Neighbourhood, agreeable to an Order of Congress. — New-York Gazette and Weekly Mercury, June 29, 1778.

Extract of a letter from his excellency gen. Washington to the hon. gen. Arnold, in this city, dated Fields near Monmouth courthouse, June 29, 1778.

“I have the honor to inform you that about seven o’clock yesterday morning, both armies advanced on each other. About twelve they met on the grounds near Monmouth court-house, when an action commenced. We forced the enemy from the field, and encamped on the ground. They took a strong post in our front, secured on both flanks by morasses and thick woods, where they remained until about twelve at night, and then retreated. I cannot at this time go into a detail of matters. When opportunity permits, I shall take the liberty of transmitting congress a more particular account of the proceedings of the day.” — The Pennsylvania Evening Post, June 30, 1778.

TRENTON, July 1.¹

His Excellency General Washington, having early intelligence of the intended movement of the enemy from Philadelphia, detached a considerable body of troops under the command of Major-General Lee, in order to support Gen. Maxwell's Brigade of Continental troops already in this state, and the militia under Generals Dickinson and Heard. These troops were intended to harass the enemy on their march through this state to Amboy, and to retard them till General Washington, with the main body, could get up. In the mean time several small skirmishes happened between the enemy and Gen. Maxwell's troops, joined by the militia, but without any considerable execution on either side.

The march of the enemy being by this means impeded, and the main army having crossed the Delaware at Coryell's ferry on the 20th and 21st ult. proceeded by the way of Hopewell, Rocky-Hill, Kingston and Cranberry, and on the 27th overtook the enemy at Monmouth Courthouse, whither they retired from Allentown on the approach of our troops, leaving their intended rout to Amboy.

It having been previously determined to attack the enemy on their march, a suitable disposition was made the same evening. General Lee, with a detachment of pick'd men consisting of about 1500, and reinforced by a strong body of Jersey militia, advanced to English-Town, (about 6 miles from Monmouth Courthouse) the militia then proceeded to the Meetinghouse; the main army under General Washington being about four miles in the rear of English-Town. In this position the whole halted until advice could be received of the enemy's motion.—At three o'clock on Sunday morning their first division, under General Kniphausen,¹ began their march, of which we had intelligence in about two hours, when General Lee received orders to advance and begin the attack, the main army at the same time advancing to support him. About half a mile beyond the Courthouse General Lee began his attack, and drove the enemy for some time; when they being reinforced, he was obliged to retreat in turn, till met by General Washington with the main army, which formed on the first advantageous ground—In the mean time two field-pieces, covered by two regiments of the detachment and commanded by Colonels Livingston and Stewart, were advanced to check the enemy's approach, which they performed with great spirit and with considerable loss on both sides. This service being performed, they retired with the pieces to the front line, then completely formed, when the severest cannonade began it is thought ever happened in America. In the mean time strong detachments marched and attacked the enemy with small arms, with various success.—The enemy were finally obliged to give way, and we took possession of the field, covered with dead and wounded. The intense heat of the weather, and the preceding fatigue of the troops, made it necessary to halt them to rest for some time. The enemy in the mean time presenting a front about one mile advanced beyond the seat of action.—As soon as the troops had recovered breath, General Washington ordered two brigades to advance upon each of their flanks, intending to move on in front at a proper time to support them, but before they could reach their destination night came on, and made any farther movements impracticable.

with several other officers and a great number of privates, which cannot yet be ascertained with precision.—About 12 o'clock on Sunday night they moved off with great precipitation towards Middletown, leaving at the Courthouse five wounded officers and above forty privates.—They began the attack with their veteran grenadiers and light infantry, which renders their loss still more important.—On our side Lieut. Col. Bonner of Pennsylvania, and Major Dickinson of Virginia are slain—Col. Barber of this state is wounded by a musket-ball, which passed thro' the right of his body, but it is hoped will not prove mortal. Our troops behaved with the greatest bravery, and opposed the flower of the British army—Our artillery was well served, and did amazing execution. Before, during, and after the action, deserters came over in great numbers, and still continue so to do. Of the enemy's dead many have been found without any wound, but being heavily cloathed, they sunk under the heat and fatigue. We are well assured that the Hessians absolutely refused to engage, declaring it was too hot. Their line of march from the Courthouse was strew'd with dead, with arms, knapsacks and accoutrements, which they dropt on their retreat.—They had the day before taken about fifteen prisoners, whom in their haste they left behind. Had we been possessed of a powerful body of cavalry in the field, there is no doubt the success would have been more compleat, but they had been so much employed in harassing the enemy during the march, and were so detached, as to give the enemy a great superiority in number, much to their advantage. Our success, under Heaven, is to be wholly ascribed to the good disposition made by his Excellency, supported by the firmness and bravery of both officers and men, who were emulous to distinguish themselves on this occasion. The great advance of the enemy on their way, their possession of the strong grounds at Middletown, added to the exhausted state of our troops, made an immediate pursuit ineligible; and our army now remains about one mile advanced from the field of battle, having been since employed in collecting the dead and wounded, and burying the former.

Thus (says a correspondent) the enemy have had two campaigns to march from New-York to Philadelphia, and back again, with the diminution of at least half their army. --- How much cheaper might his Britannic Majesty buy sheep and oxen in England, in the usual manner, than he now gets them, by employing an army to steal them in America!

The enemy, on their way through Burlington county, wantonly destroyed a very valuable merchant-mill near Bordentown, the iron-works at Mount-Holly, and the dwelling-houses, out-houses, &c. of Peter Tallman, Esq. and Col. Shreve.

Previous to the evacuation of Philadelphia, the enemy plundered the inhabitants of most of the waggons and horses in and near the city, and totally destroyed some and greatly injured many very valuable buildings, especially such as were situated about the suburbs of the town and near the lines. A number of the active tory inhabitants, being conscious of their guilt, and dreading the vengeance of their countrymen, went off with the enemy.

Monday last twenty-seven British prisoners, chiefly grenadiers, who were taken by surprize Saturday last near Monmouth Courthouse, were brought to this town.¹ The same day thirty-six more arrived at Princeton, part of those taken in the late engagement, and many more are on their way.

By the best accounts we have received, upwards of 500 of the British army, chiefly Hessians, have deserted and returned to Philadelphia since the enemy left that city; and a considerable number have come in to other places.

We hear that several British transports have been lately taken on their passage from Philadelphia to New-York, one of which had five refugee families, with their furniture, &c. on board.

Extract of a letter from Elizabeth-Town, dated June 15, 1778.

“Last Wednesday morning at two o’clock, three boats, carrying about 150 rebels, attempting to land on Staten-Island between the Blazing-star and Burnt-island, and to surprize a post of the Royal Provincials, were discovered, fired upon, and beat off. The troops on the island immediately got under arms, which effectually defeated their purpose.”

“The truth is, that at the above-mentioned time three boats, carrying about 50 brave volunteers, did actually land on a point of meadow near two miles northeastward of the Burnt-island, and consequently three or four miles from the place he says, from whence they marched up undiscovered to the Bridge Creek, (near half a mile) when they were challenged by a centinel on the other side of the creek; finding that they were discovered, and that nothing was to be done by surprize, they answered by a well-directed fire on the guard-house, which threw the poor Royal Provincials into such a panic, that without returning a shot, they determined to save themselves by flight; on finding which, and apprehending a general alarm on the island, our little party retired to their boats very slow and in good order, and reembarked; by which time some of the heroic Royal Provincials, finding our fire to cease, and probably concluding there could not then be much danger, ventured back to their old post and began a very warm fire at a phantom. It is presumed they had not yet recovered from their panic when the above narrative was sent to the King’s Printer, which sufficiently accounts for their egregious errors.”

On Monday the 22d of June the General Assembly of this State adjourned, to meet the second Wednesday in September next at Princeton.

* * * The near approach of the enemy prevented the publication of this paper last week.

ALL officers and men belonging to the Pennsylvania State Navy Fleet, are hereby ordered to repair to their respective vessels immediately.

Wounded. One captain. one serjeant, one corporal, one gunner, ten matrosses.

Missing. One matross.

Six horses killed and two wounded.—The Pennsylvania Evening Post, July 6. 1778.

New-York, July 6. On Sunday Morning the 28th Instant, the Rear of the Royal Army under the Command of General Sir HENRY CLINTON, was attacked by the Rebel Army commanded by Generals Washington, Lee, Gates, Wayne and Fayette, about one Mile and a half West of Freehold Court House, in Monmouth County, New-Jersey; when the Grenadiers, Light Infantry, and Queen's Rangers, distinguished themselves in a particular Manner, having opposed the whole of Washington's Army, and pursued them several Miles; their Loss we know not, but 'tis said to be great.

Lieut. Col. Moncton, Capt. John Gove, of the 5th.

The wounded are, Lieut. Col. Trelawney, of the Guards, Lieut. Col. Abercrombie, 37th; Major William Gardiner, 10th; Capt. Andrew Cathcart, 15th; Capt. William Brereton, 17th; Capt. Harry Ditmass, 15th; Capt. Baldwin Leighton, 46th; Lieut. Mungo Paumier, do. Lieut. Desborough, of the Marines; Capt. John Powell, 52d. Capt. Thomas Wills, 23d. Lieut. Patrick Belley, Guards; Capt. Stephenson, Queen's Rangers (before the action) Lieut. Col. Simcoe, Queen's Rangers; Capt. Lloyd, 46th; Lieut. Kennedy, 44th.

We are informed that the following, is an exact return of the loss of the Royal Army.

Killed	110
Wounded	172
Missing	56
Total	338

It is certain the rebels have not suffered so heavy a loss as on this occasion, in any engagement since their defeat on Long Island.

About 70 Prisoners was brought up to Town last Friday, that were taken in the above Engagement.

We hear General Washington with the greatest Part of his Army are gone towards New-Brunswick.—New-York Gazette and Weekly Mercury, July 6, 1778.

June 28, 1778, half after 11 A. M.

I WAS duly honoured with your favour of the 20th instant, with the report to which it referred, and trust my situation will apologize for my not answering it before.

I am now here with the main body of the army, and pressing hard to come up with the enemy. They encamped yesterday at Monmouth Court-house, having almost the whole of their front, particularly their left wing, secured by a marsh and thick wood, and their rear by a very difficult defile, from whence they moved very early this morning. Our advance, from the rainy weather, and the intense heat when it was fair, (tho' these may have been equally disadvantageous to them) has been greatly delayed. Several of our men have fallen sick from these causes, and a few unfortunately have fainted and died in a little time after. We have a select and strong detachment more forward under the general command of Major-General Lee, with orders to attack their rear if possible. Whether the detachment will be able to come up with it is a matter of question, especially before they get into strong grounds. Besides this, Morgan with his corps and some bodies of militia are on their flanks. I cannot determine yet at what place they intend to embark; some think they will push for Sandy Hook, whilst others think they mean to go to Shoal Harbour. The latter opinion seems to be founded in the greater probability, as, from intelligence, several vessels and craft are lying off that place. We have made a few prisoners and they have lost a good many men by desertion, I cannot ascertain their numbers as they came into our advanced parties and pushed immediately into the country; I think five or six hundred is the least number that have come in in the whole; they are chiefly foreigners.

I have the honour to be, with great respect,
 Sir, your most obedient servant,
 G. WASHINGTON.

Brunswick, July 3d, 1778.

SIR

NOT satisfied with robbing me and the brave men under my command of the credit due to us with respect to the affair of the 28th, such an atrocious attack has been made on my conduct, and so gross are the injuries I have received, that I have demanded a court-martial; which is to be held to-morrow. The reason that I address this note to you, is, that a most incidious, dishonest, and false relation has appeared in your paper of July 1st—I must therefore entreat, as you are an honest man, that you will desire your readers to consider the aforesaid relation as a fiction. Before long they shall have a minute, just, and faithful account—In the mean time I beg you will print this note—and am, Sir,

Mr. ISAAC COLLINS

July 3d, 1778.

SIR,

I Desire you will consider this as a postscript to the note I have already addressed to you, and that you will request whatever printer is your correspondent at Philadelphia, to insert the note and postscript in his paper.—To call the affair a complete victory would be a dishonourable gasconade—It was indeed a very handsome check, which did the Americans honour. No affair can be more convincing of what they are equal to; in a retrograde manœuvre of near four miles, no confusion was observable but what arose, and ever will arise from a monstrous abuse, which, if tolerated, will be one day fatal—I mean the liberty which individuals, without authority, take to direct and give their opinions. The behaviour of the whole, both men and officers, was so equally good that it would be unjust to make distinctions; tho' I confess it is difficult to restrain from paying compliments to the artillery, from General Knox¹ and Colonel Oswald down to the very driver. It is difficult to say which was the decisive point—it was a battle in pieces, and by dint of fighting in a variety of places—in the plain and in the woods—by advancing and retreating, the enemy were at last fairly worn down.

I am, Sir, yours,

CHARLES LEE.

TRENTON, July 8.

“Head-Quarters, Freehold, June 29, 1778.

“THE Commander in Chief congratulates the army on the victory obtained over the arms of his Britannic Majesty yesterday, and thanks most sincerely the gallant officers and men who distinguished themselves upon the occasion, and such others as, by their good order and coolness, gave the happiest presage of what might have been expected had they come to action.

“General Dickinson, and the Militia of this State, are also thanked for their nobleness in opposing the enemy in their march from Philadelphia, and for the aid which they have given in harrassing and impeding their motions, so as to allow the continental troops to come up with them.

¹ General Henry Knox was a bookseller in Boston before the war, but entered the service at the beginning of the struggle. He became the Chief of Artillery to the Continental army. He was ever the trusted friend of Washington and performed efficient work during the Revolution. In 1785 he was made Secretary of War.—Manuscript of the late William S. Stryker.

“It is with peculiar pleasure the Commander in Chief, in addition to the above, can inform General Knox, and the officers of artillery, that the enemy have done them the justice to acknowledge that no artillery could be better served than ours.”

Extract of a letter from a gentleman at Camp, dated English-Town, June 29th, 1778.

“I have for two weeks past been with the militia of this State, under the command of Major-General Dickinson. It truly affords me the most heartfelt pleasure to see in what numbers and how suddenly my brave countrymen poured in from every quarter, to the defence of our glorious cause.—During the whole time they underwent the greatest fatigues, severe and long marches, without a murmur.—In every skirmish they behaved with the greatest spirit, and appearing always confident of the courage and prudence of their General, they obeyed his orders of every kind with the utmost cheerfulness and alacrity. At the drawbridge near Bordentown, when General Dickinson with great propriety had ordered some lines to be thrown, up they appeared anxiously to desire the arrival of the enemy. The continental troops and great part of the militia had however been withdrawn, except those of Colonels Phillips¹ and Shreve, who were previously detached to guard a ford one mile further up the creek, and only the three regiments of Colonels Frelinghuysen,² Van Dike³ and Webster⁴ remained, when a party of the enemy appeared, and with great zeal began to repair the bridge, which had been cut down—Upon the very news of their approach, the troops rushed down with the greatest impetuosity, and a small party from one of the regiments which happened to be considerably advanced, caused them to retire, after having killed four and wounded several others. In the morning the lines were again manned, but the enemy thought proper to change their rout. This conduct of the militia saved, in my opinion, Trenton and the country adjacent from rapine and desolation. In short, their conduct during the whole time, gave me the most pleasing ideas of the strong love of liberty which is natural to the human soul. Surely whilst the farmers of the country are induced by the mere fondness for freedom to leave all their domestic concerns at this season of the year, and undergo the hardships of a soldier's life; to suffer the several fatigues and with pleasure face every danger—I say, whilst this continues to be the spirit of Americans—Americans must and will be free.”

³ Hendrick Van Dike, Colonel, Second Battalion, Somerset, September 9th, 1777; Colonel, regiment State Troops, October 9th, 1779.

July 4, 1778.*

“The Anniversary of INDEPENDENCE has occasioned another grand day, far surpassing the feu de joye at the old camp, which I formerly described to you. The orders were not issued till evening yesterday, and then not so full as to raise great expectations. I have already described to you the situation of my quarters which commands a view of the bridge and the opposite shore, so that I could see every man as he passed to the ground. The front line of the army extended from the redoubt on the height a little above Brunswick¹ upwards of two miles up the river on the west side; the second line at some distance in the rear, not quite so extensive—The park was placed on the right of the front line at the redoubt, and upwards of thirty pieces of cannon interspersed at proper distances through the lines. After his Excellency with his suite had rid round the lines and returned to his quarters, on a signal given from thence 13 pieces of cannon were fired at the park, which were followed by a running fire of musketry and artillery, beginning on the right of the front, throughout the whole of both lines—After this three huzzas to the perpetual and undisturbed Independence of the United states of America. The same round was performed a second and third time, and exceedingly well executed every time. My situation being high and at a convenient distance in front, afforded me a complete view of the whole, and presented by far the grandest sight I ever beheld. The running fire of musketry is grand of itself, but the cannon throwing out their columns of smoke, and adding their sounds at proper distances, made it magnificent beyond description.

“The enemy are said to be gone from Middletown a few miles, and it is imagined they will all be out of the state by to-morrow.—At half past three to-morrow morn- in the left wing of our army begins its march for King’s ferry, 70 miles from hence, the other two grand divisions will follow the 6th and 7th, leaving Maxwell’s brigade and Col. Morgan’s corps (about 2000 or 2500 men) to cover New-Jersey.

“The Court-Martial for the trial of General Lee did not get to business till this morning: As many witnesses will be examined, and the whole taken down in writing, it will probably last some time, during which they are to continue at Brunswick.”

Last Saturday being the Anniversary of the Declaration of our Independence, was commemorated at Princeton with the greatest demonstrations of joy for our happy deliverance from tyranny and arbitrary power, and the glorious prospect of transmitting freedom and happiness to our latest posterity. At six o'clock in the afternoon (a signal gun having been previously fired to collect the inhabitants) the solemnity commenced by the discharge of thirteen rounds of cannon, being some of the brass field-pieces taken from General Burgoyne, one of the three conquerors of America. The discharge of the cannon was succeeded by three huzzas from a large concourse of people, all exulting in the opportunity of expressing their gratulations in being delivered from the yoke of a merciless tyrant and his execrable minions. After this his Excellency the Governor, with such of the Members of the Legislative Council and General Assembly as were in town, with the Officers of the Army and Militia, and the Gentlemen of the place, repaired to the Governor's quarters, where they passed the remainder of the day with great festivity and decorum, and drank the following toasts:

1. The Honourable the Congress.
2. The Free and Independent States of America.
3. His Excellency General Washington.
4. The American Army and Navy.
5. May our Independence endure while the sun shall shine or the rivers flow.
6. His Most Christian Majesty, our illustrious ally,¹ and the magnanimous protector of the rights of mankind.
7. May the Confederated States of America be ever supported by the same public virtue and patriotism by which they were established.
8. Our Ambassador at the Court of Versailles.²
9. The State of New-Jersey.
10. Our brave and patriotic Militia.
11. All our officers and Privates engaged in the battle near Monmouth Court-house, in which we obtained a complete victory over the choicest and most veteran of the enemy's troops.

² Benjamin Franklin.

12. The memory of all the heroes who have fallen in defence of American liberty during the war.

13. May our example excite the oppressed in every part of the world to resist the outrages of tyranny; and may they be equally successful in asserting the natural and unalienable rights of mankind.

In the evening the inhabitants testified their joy by a general illumination of the village.

It is reported that the enemy have all embarked on board their transports, and sailed from Sandy Hook for the Eastward.

At the Court of Oyer and Terminer lately holden in the county of Monmouth, the Grand Jury found a bill of indictment against Cyrenus Van Mater, for giving information to the enemy, and therefore being the cause of their taking the Hon. Richard Stockton, Esq. and John Covenhoven, Esq. in the month of December, 1776. Van Mater put himself upon his trial, and the Jury found him guilty; the Court thereupon sentenced him to pay a fine of 300l. and to suffer six months imprisonment. We hear that the enemy, in their late passage through that county, released Van Mater; who having piloted them through his neighbourhood, went off with them to New-York, leaving a large real and personal estate behind him, which we presume will be forfeited for his crimes.

On Saturday last a demirep of the city of Philadelphia was exposed to publick ridicule, preternaturally deformed, by an extravagant Head Dress, in humble imitation of some of our disaffected ladies, who it seems adopted this offspring of the abandoned daughters of Britain during their residence in that city; and still preserve it, as a proof of their attachment to the virtuous cause in which they are engaged. Are they not proper objects of ridicule and aversion, who can meanly imitate the Manners and Dress of women prostitute in the service of men whose swords are still stained with the blood of their friends and relations?—O tempora, O mores!

I EMBRACE this first moment of leisure to give Congress a more full and particular account of the movements of the army under my command, since its passing the Delaware, than the situation of our affairs would heretofore permit.

I have the honour to advise them, that on the appearance of the enemy's intention to march through Jersey becoming serious, I had detached General Maxwell's brigade, in conjunction with the militia of that state, to interrupt and impede their progress, by every obstruction in their power, so as to give time to the army under my command to come up with them, and take advantage of any favourable circumstances that might present themselves. The army having proceeded to Coryell's ferry, and crossed the Delaware at that place, I immediately detached Colonel Morgan with a select corps of 600 men, to reinforce General Maxwell, and marched with the main body towards Princeton.

The slow advance of the enemy had greatly the air of design, and led me, with others to suspect that General Clinton, desirous of a general action, was endeavouring to draw us down into the lower country, in order by a rapid movement to gain our right, and take possession of the strong grounds above us. This consideration, and to give the troops time to repose and refresh themselves from the fatigues they had experienced from rainy and excessive hot weather, determined me to halt at Hopewell township, about five miles from Princeton, where we remained till the morning of the 25th. On the preceding day I made a second detachment of 1500 chosen troops, under Brigadier-General Scott, to reinforce those already in the vicinity of the enemy, the more effectually to annoy and delay their march. The next day the army moved to Kingston; and having received intelligence that the enemy were prosecuting their route towards Monmouth Court-house, I dispatched 1000 select men under Brigadier-General Wayne, and sent the Marquis de la Fayette to take the command of the whole advanced corps, including Maxwell's brigade and Morgan's light infantry, with orders to take the first fair opportunity of attacking the enemy's rear. In the evening of the same day the whole army marched from Kingston, where our baggage was left, with the intention to preserve a proper distance for supporting the advanced corps, and arrived at Cranberry early the next morning. The intense heat of the weather, and a heavy storm unluckily coming on, made it impossible to resume our march that day without great inconvenience and injury to the troops. Our advanced corps being differently circumstanced, moved from the position it had held the night before, and took post in the evening on the Monmouth road, about five miles from the enemy's rear, in expectation of attacking them next morning on their march. The main body having remained at Cranberry, the advanced corps was found to be too remote, and too far upon the right, to be supported either in case of an attack upon or from the enemy, which induced me to send orders to the Marquis to file off by his left towards Englishtown, which he accordingly executed early in the morning of the 27th.

The enemy in marching from Allentown had changed their disposition, and placed their best troops in the rear, consisting of all the grenadiers, light infantry, and chasseurs of the line. This alteration made it necessary to encrease the number of our advanced corps, in consequence of which I detached Major General Lee with two brigades to join the Marquis at Englishtown, on whom of course the command of the whole devolved, amounting to about 5000 men. The main body marched the same day, and encamped within three miles of that place. Morgan's corps was left hovering on the enemy's right flank, and the Jersey militia, amounting at this time to about 7 or 800 men, under General Dickinson, on their left.

The enemy were now encamped in a strong position with their right extending about a mile and an half beyond the Court-house, in the parting of the roads leading to Shrewsbury and Middletown, and their left along the road from Allentown to Monmouth, about three miles on this side the Court-house. Their right flank lay on the skirt of a small wood, while their left was secured by a very thick one, a morass running towards their rear, and their whole front covered by a wood, and for a considerable extent towards the left with a morass. In this situation they halted till the morning of the 28th.

Matters being thus situated, and having had the best information, that if the enemy were once arrived at the heights of Middletown, ten or twelve miles from where they were, it would be impossible to attempt anything against them with a prospect of success, I determined to attack their rear the moment they should get in motion from their present ground. I communicated my intention to General Lee, and ordered him to make his disposition for the attack, and to keep his troops constantly lying upon their arms, to be in readiness at the shortest notice. This was done with respect to the troops under my immediate command.

About five in the morning General Dickinson sent me express, informing that the front of the enemy had began their march. I instantly put the army in motion, and sent orders by one of my Aids to General Lee to move on and attack them, unless there should be very powerful reasons to the contrary; acquainting him at the same time, that I was marching to support him, and for doing it with the greatest expedition and convenience, should make the men disencumber themselves of their packs and blankets.

After marching about five miles, to my great surprise and mortification, I met the whole advanced corps retreating, and, as I was told, by General Lee's orders, without having made any opposition, except one fire given by the party under the command of Col. Buttler, on their being charged by the enemy's cavalry, who were repulsed, I proceeded immediately to the rear of the corps, which I found closely pressed by the enemy, and gave directions for forming part of the retreating troops, who, by the brave and spirited conduct of the officers, aided by some pieces of well served artillery, checked the enemy's advance, and gave time to make a disposition of the left wing and second line of the army upon an eminence, and in a wood a little in the rear, covered by a morass in front. On this were placed some batteries of cannon by Lord Stirling, who commanded the left wing, which played upon the enemy with great effect, and seconded by parties of infantry, detached to oppose them, effectually put a stop to their advance.

General Lee being detached with the advanced corps, the command of the right wing, for the occasion, was given to General Green. For the expedition of the march, and to counteract any attempted to turn our right, I had ordered him to file off by the new church, two miles from Englishtown, and fall into the Monmouth road, a small distance in the rear of the Court-house, while the rest of the column moved directly on towards the Court-house. On intelligence of the retreat, he marched up, and took a very advantageous position on the right.

The enemy, by this time, finding themselves warmly opposed in front, made an attempt to turn our left flank, but they were bravely repulsed and driven back by detached parties of infantry. They also made a movement to our right, with as little success, General Green having advanced a body of troops, with artillery, to a commanding piece of ground, which not only disappointed their design of turning our right, but severely enfiladed those in front of the left wing. In addition to this, General Wayne advanced with a body of troops, and kept up so severe and well directed a fire, that the enemy were soon compelled to retire behind the defile, where the first stand in the beginning of the action had been made.

In this situation, the enemy had both their flanks secured by thick woods and morasses, while their front could only be approached through a narrow pass. I resolved, nevertheless, to attack them; and for that purpose ordered General Poor, with his own and the Carolina Brigade, to move round upon their right, and General Woodford upon their left, and the artillery to gall them in front; but the impediment in their way prevented their getting within reach before it was dark. They remained upon the ground they had been directed to occupy during the night, with intention to begin the attack early the next morning, and the army continued lying upon their arms in the field of action, to be in readiness to support them. In the meantime the enemy were employed in removing their wounded, and about twelve o'clock at night marched away in such silence, that, though General Poor lay extremely near them, they effected their retreat without his knowledge. They carried off all their wounded, except four officers and about forty privates, whose wounds were too dangerous to permit their removal.

The extreme heat of the weather—the fatigue of the men from their march—through a deep sandy country, almost intirely destitute of water—and the distance the enemy had gained by marching in the night, made a pursuit impracticable and fruitless. It would have answered no valuable purpose, and would have been fatal to numbers of our men, several of whom died the preceding day with heat.

Were I to conclude my account of this day's transaction without expressing my obligations to the officers of the army in general, I should do injustice to their merit, and violence to my own feelings. They seemed to vie with each other in manifesting their zeal and'bravery. The catalogue of those who distinguished themselves is too long to admit of particularising individuals. I cannot, however, forbear mentioning Brigadier-General Wayne, whose good conduct and bravery, through the whole action, deserves particular commendation.

The behaviour of the troops in general, after they recovered from the first surprize, occasioned by the retreat of the advanced corps, was such as could not be surpassed.

All the artillery, both officers and men, that were engaged, distinguished themselves in a remarkable manner.

Inclosed Congress will be pleased to receive a return of our killed, wounded and missing: Among the first were Lient-Col. Bunner, of Pennsylvania, and Major Dickinson, of Virginia, both officers of distinguished merit, and much to be regretted. The enemy's slain left on the field and buried by us according to the return of the persons assigned to that duty, were four officers and two hundred and forty-five privates; in the former number was the honourable Col. Monckton. Exclusive of these they buried some themselves; as there were several new graves near the field of battle. How many men they may have had wounded, cannot be determined; but from the usual proportion, the number must have been considerable—There were a few prisoners taken.

The peculiar situation of General Lee at this time, requires that I should say nothing of his conduct. He is now in arrest. The charges against him, with such sentence as the court-martial may decree in his case, shall be transmitted for the approbation or disapprobation of Congress, as soon as it shall be passed.

Being fully convinced by the gentlemen of this country, that the enemy cannot be hurt or injured in their embarkation at Sandy Hook, the place to which they are going, and unwilling to get too far removed from the North river, I put the troops in motion early this morning, and shall proceed that way, leaving the Jersey brigade, Morgan's corps and other light parties (the militia being all dismissed) to hover about them—countenance desertion, and to prevent their depredations as far as possible. After they embark, the former will take post in the neighbourhood of Elizabethtown—the latter rejoin the corps from which they were detached.

I have the honour to be, with the greatest respect,
Sir your most obedient servant,

G. WASHINGTON.

The honourable Henry Laurens, Esq.

President of Congress.

ANN DAVENPORT.

—The Pennsylvania Evening Post, July 8, 1778.

New-York, July 13. To our former Account of the Action of the 6th inst. in Jersey, we add the following Particulars, as, hitherto we have been unprovided with a State of the Day's Operations.

The Action commenced at Twelve, on the hottest Day imaginable. After a March of eight Hours, the British Guards forming the Rear of the Army, the Rebels insulting the flanking Parties, at Eleven the General reconnoitered the Enemy, and finding them in Force, ordered an Halt on the Heights of Freehold, having given orders to the advanced Party of the Army on the March, accordingly. The Rebel Battalions shewing themselves with a Disposition to stand, the Commander in Chief ordered the Rear of the Army to form in the Front, and the Light Horse to advance, and Charge those in the Front of the Wood leading to Freehold Court-House, at the same Time commanding the first Battalion of Guards to support the Cavalry, and follow the Charge with Bayonets, while the Cavalry were advancing during the Moment in which the Guards were Loading, in Consequence of Orders, they received a Fire on the Right from the Wood, of 300 of the Enemy posted in Ambush. Orders were now given to face to the Right, and Charge through the Wood. This Order was executed with such Alacrity, that the Rebels were forced with Bayonets through a deep Morass, a Wood hardly penetrable, during a very hot Fire, cross a Plain and Ravine, to the Edge of a second Wood; when the Ardour of the Troops was most judiciously stopped by Orders from the General, who perceiving them affected by the excessive Heat of the Weather; this Influence having occasioned a Check to the first Line of the Rebel Army, they retreated under the Cover of a Cannonade, which occasioned the Loss of the gallant Lieut. Col. Monckton, and several other very respectable Officers.

In this Affair the first Battalion of Guards, and a Part of the British Grenadiers charged, and occasioned the de route of the whole Rebel Army, confessed by themselves, to consist of Fourteen Thousand Men, and led by their most approved Officers.

The whole line of March consisted of thirteen Miles extent, was effected without the Loss of a single Waggon, howsoever molested and harrassed by the whole Rebel Army.

Col. Trelawney, who commanded the first Battalion of British Guards, and was dangerously wounded at the Affair of Freehold, on the 29th of June, we have the Pleasure to hope is out of Danger, and so are almost all of the other Gentlemen present in this Affair.

General Washington's Army is now encamped at Elizabeth Town, Newark, Second River, Hackinsack, &c. in New-Jersey.

The Count de Estange, with 11 Sail of the Line and three Frigates, came to an Anchor last Saturday Afternoon a few Miles from Sandy-Hook, where he now lies.

We hear there are at this Juncture, very great Confusion in General Washington's Army; there has been a Duel fought between a French General, Conway, and Col. Cadwallader, in which the former was shot thro' the Eye, and died on the Spot. General Lee has been accused of Misconduct in the late Action the 28th ult. in New-Jersey; but 'tis said exculpates himself in two Letters published in a Pennsylvania Paper a few Days since. The Somerset Militia we are told suffered much in the Battle of yesterday Fortnight.—New-York Gazette and Weekly Mercury, July 13, 1778.

PHILADELPHIA, July 14.

IN CONGRESS, July 7, 1778.

Resolved unanimously, That the thanks of Congress be given to General Washington for the activity with which he marched from the camp at Valley Forge in pursuit of the enemy; for his distinguished exertions in forming the order of battle; and for his great good conduct in leading on the attack and gaining the important victory of Monmouth, over the British grand army, under the immediate command of Lieutenant-General Sir Henry Clinton, in their march from Philadelphia to New-York.

Resolved, That General Washington be directed to signify the thanks of Congress to the gallant officers and men under his command, who distinguished themselves by their conduct and valour at the battle of Monmouth. Extract from the Minutes.

CHARLES THOMSON, Sec.

TRENTON, JULY 15.

Within a few days past about 650 prisoners, chiefly Hessians, from the Westward, passed through this place on their way to Elizabeth-Town, to be exchanged.

Since our last twelve British prisoners, lately taken near Sandy-Hook, were brought to this town and confined in gaol.

We hear the British army are now encamped on the east end of Staten-Island.

It is currently reported that the French fleet, under the command of Admiral Count d'Estaing, is arrived off Shrewsbury, from whence we hourly expect to hear some important intelligence.

From a correspondent we learn that "on the 23d of June the brave and gallant Capt. JOOST ZABRISKIE, who commanded a company of rangers in the county of Bergen in New-Jersey, having received orders to impress a number of waggons to carry some grain for the use of the army, was murdered by the tories. Two guns were discharged at him as he passed by a wood in a disaffected part of the county; one of the balls entered his body in the small of his back, and he lived only thirty-eight hours. He was a terror to the enemies of his country, and the aversion of the only people that deserve to be slaves. We that have experienced, and have been protected by his valour, weep at his loss."

Camp, July 2, 1778.

"I sincerely congratulate you on the signal success of our arms on the fields of Monmouth, the 28th ult.—Had matters been conducted that morning agreeable to the system for attack, it is more than probable that the whole army would have fallen. Every thing was in fine train—Their men fatigued—murmuring, and in state of uncertainty as to their destination—with their leader much alarmed and discouraged by uncommon desertion. An enquiry is now on foot into the cause of the advanced corps recoiling.

"I am happy to have it in my power to mention the merit of Col. Hamilton. He was incessant in his endeavors during the whole day, in reconnoitering the enemy, and in rallying and charging; but whether he, or Col. Laurens, deserves most of our commendations, is somewhat doubtful—both had their horses shot under them, and both exhibited singular proofs of bravery. They seemed to court death under our doubtful circumstances, and triumphed over it as the face of war changed in our favour. Independent of any prejudice I may have conceived for Col. Laurens, in consequence of his virtues, I cannot but speak of him in terms of the highest military deserving. Colonels Fitzgerald and Mead also claim the greatest encomiums: The former received a slight contusion. Even the Secretaries caught the general contagion, and by putting themselves in places of danger, shared some of the honours of the day. I wish I could do justice to his Excellency; but you have, doubtless, heard of his conduct and the singular talents which he unfolded, with the effects they produced in the completion of the combat e'er this."

Camp, July 5, 1778.

"In consequence of some flying rumors on the 28th ult. that the advanced corps was retreating, the General rode forward, and found the troops retiring in disorder, and the enemy pressing upon their rear. I never saw his excellency to so much advantage; his coolness and firmness were admirable. He instantly took measures for checking the enemy's advance, and giving time for the army, which was very near, to form and make a proper disposition. He then rode back, and had the troops formed on a very advantageous piece of ground, in which and in other transaction of the day, General Greene and Lord Stirling rendered very essential service, and did themselves great honour. The sequel is, we beat the enemy, and killed and wounded at least 1,000 of their best troops. America owes a great deal to General Washington for this day's work—a general rout, dismay and disgrace would have attended the whole army in any other hands but his—By his own good sense and fortitude he turned the fate of the day. Other officers have great merit in performing their parts well; but he directed the whole with the skill of a master workman. He, by his own presence, brought order out of confusion, animated his troops, and led them to success.

“A great number of my brother officers distinguished themselves this day. General Wayne was always foremost in danger—Col. Stewart and Lieut. Col. Ramsay were with him among the first to oppose the enemy;—Lieut. Col. Obrey, at the head of Venum's brigade, made the next stand—Col. Hamilton was with him, got his horse wounded and himself much hurt by a fall in consequence. Col. Livingston behaved very handsomely—Our friend, Lieut. Col. Barber, was remarkably active—towards the close of the day he received a ball through his side, which the Doctors think will not be fatal—Col. Silby and Lieut. Col. Parker were particularly useful on the left, Col. Craig, with Gen. Wayne on the right—The artillery acquitted themselves most charmingly—I was spectator of Lieut. Col. Oswald's behaviour, who kept up a gallant fire from some pieces commanded by him uncovered and unsupported.

“In short, one can hardly name particulars without doing injustice to the rest. The behaviour of the officers and men in general was such as could not easily be surpassed. Our troops, after the first impulse, behaved with more spirit, and moved with greater order than the British troops. You know my way of thinking about our army, and that I am not apt to flatter it. I assure you I never was so pleased with it before this day. The General's family behaved well.—Col. Fitzgerald had a slight contusion with a musket ball, and Col. Laurens another, and his horse shot under him. Col. Hamilton, as I mentioned before, had his horse wounded in the first part of the action. If the rest escaped, it is only to be ascribed to better fortune, not more prudence in keeping out of the way."—The Pennsylvania Packet, July 16th, 1778.

New-York, July 20. Lord Stirling is President of the Court Martial at the Tryal of General Lee, which was not ended last Wednesday.

General Conway was not killed by Colonel Cadwallader as mentioned in our last. He was wounded in the upper Lip near his Nose. Cut was in a fair way of Recovery.

The following Paragraph came too late for last Week's Paper.

The 18th of June, when the Rear of the British Army attacked the Rebel Army in the Heights of Freehold; the spirited Charge of the Light Horse will ever do them Honour: Attacking the Front of their first Line, covered by a Battery of 6 Pieces of Cannon playing alternately Round and Grape Shot. The 1st Battalion of British Guards, while covering the Charge of the Light Cavalry, received the Fire from the Ambuscade on their Right from the Wood at 20 Yards Distance; being then ordered to charge through the Wood, in the Line of Fire, with Bayonets; the Light Horse proceeded with their wonted Ardour till the Rear Battalions came up to their Support. The incessant and allert Fire of the British Artillery, can't be too much commended the Day of Action at Freehold: The Battalion Guns of the Guards, with the two 12 Pounders, covered the Troops after the Charge through the Wood, Morass, and Field in Front of the second Wood, where they were ordered to halt, spent with Heat, Thirst and Fatigue. The Fire was so well kept up, that they expended from Eighty to Ninety Rounds in a short Period, while the Remains of the advanced Corps of the Enemy, were falling back on their second Line. Several of the 1st Battalion of Guards, and the two Companies of British Grenadiers of the 1st Battalion that made the Charge with Bayonets through the Wood at Freehold, had narrow Escapes from the Enemy's Riflemen that lurked in the Under-wood; throughout the Wood scarce a Bush that had not a Fellow under it, whose Fire directed the British Bayonet to prevent the further Molestation of the Royal Army. Sir John Wrottlesley commanding the first Company of the 1st Battalion of Guards, was grazed on the Neck with a Buck Shot, and the Hon. Lieut. Col. Gordon, commanding the second Company had his Bayonet shot off from his Fusee, and afterwards by a Rifleman in the Wood, was shot through his Coat under his Left Breast, without Hurt to his Side or Arm. 'Tis supposed that of several Hundreds that lay in the Wood, besides the 300 under the Command of Col. Parker of Virginia, (that formed the Ambuscade) that scarce twenty escaped alive. Col. Parker was wounded in three Places, and died in the Woods: Lieut. Col Ramsey wounded in two Places, and taken Prisoner. Five Officers, by Appearance Foreigners, were bayoneted in the Wood. Seventeen Prisoners only were taken, eight of whom were run through with Bayonets, and mostly died e're the Rear moved off the Ground to proceed on their March; which, after the Cannon moved off, was covered by the 33d Regiment of Infantry; the steady Behaviour of which Corps, on this Occasion, will always add to their former Reputation. The Commander in Chief exposed himself much, giving in the Front of the Attack, most of the Orders in Person, continually riding in the Line of Fire from Right to Left, during the whole Time the Affair lasted.

We have the Pleasure to understand, by last Accounts from Freehold, that the four wounded Officers of the Royal Army left with the Soldiery, the Flag, and Surgeons, are as well as can be expected, and are treated in a Manner that does much Honour to the American Gentlemen, whose Protection and Care they are under.

The French Fleet under the Command of the Count D'Estaing, continues to lay off Sandy Hook, about 8 Miles from the Light House, and since our last we hear he has taken ten Prizes.

We hear that a French Hospital is opened at Middletown in New-Jersey, for the Reception of such sick Seamen as may be sent from the Count D'Estaing's Squadron.—New-York Gazette and Weekly Mercury, July 20, 1778.

JOHN CAMPBLE.

LONDON, March 9.

March 16. Mr. Livingston, Governor of the Jerseys, in a speech he made to the Assembly of that Province, gave a true description of the majority in certain Houses. He said, "they were a pensioned confederacy against virtue, and liberty, and patriotism, and the rights of man: to exalt the most profligate, and debase the most virtuous." Candor and impartiality must allow, that it is now almost impossible for an honest man to thrive in this country.¹

¹ This comment shows that a strong pro-American spirit was current in the liberal London newspapers of the time.

TRENTON, JULY 22.

Extract of a letter from Elizabeth-Town, dated July 14, 1778.

“Lord Howe has stripped the British transports, &c. at New-York of their seamen, and took on board two or three thousand soldiers to complete their marines, and fell down to the Hook with the whole of his ships of force.—Gen. Maxwell’s brigade is stationed here.”

We are informed that the French fleet are drawn up in a line just without Sandy-Hook, so as to prevent even a pilot-boat from getting out of New York harbour; that the East River is also blocked up by two French seventy-fours; that General Washington, with the grand American army, crossed the North River last week, and will unite with General Gates above Kingsbridge.—Thus are the enemies of America surrounded on all sides, by the forces of the Magnanimous and Most Christian King, and the virtuous citizens of America. It is therefore more than probable that the destruction which the emissaries of Britain had concerted for the free and independent sons of America, will, ere long, fall with tenfold misery on their own heads.

Since our last a number of American prisoners, being lately exchanged, arrived here from New York. They left that place on Thursday last, and report, that the British army, as well as citizens, are under great apprehensions on the appearance of the want of bread in that city, it being very scarce already.

We hear that most of the British troops that were on Staten-Island have evacuated that place, in order to strengthen the posts at and near Kingsbridge, to which place they are moving a number of heavy cannon.

It is confidently said, that some of the French fleet have taken, within ten days past, off Sandy Hook, a frigate and fifteen sail of other British vessels, some of the latter are valuable prizes.

Sunday and Monday last about one hundred recruits, enlisted during the war, passed through this town on their way to camp.

We hear that at the Court of Oyer and Terminer and General Gaol Delivery held at Monmouth, in June last, the following persons were tried and found guilty of burglary, viz. Thomas Emmons alias Burk, John Wood, Michael Millery, William Dillon and Robert M'Mullen; the two former were executed on Friday last, and the other three were reprieved. At the same time Ezekiel Forman, John Polhemus and William Grover were tried for and convicted of high treason, who, it is said, are to be executed on the 18th of August next.¹

THE subscribers being, by act of the General Assembly passed the twenty-second day of June last, appointed a Committee to collect, adjust and settle the publick accounts, do, pursuant to the powers and directions to them given, inform all concerned, that they have opened an office at Princeton, in the county of Somerset, where they, or a quorum of them, as prescribed in the said act, propose to attend in the recess of the legislature to transact the business of their appointment. All persons who have been entrusted with publick monies, have demands upon the State, or are otherwise interested in any publick accounts unsettled, are desired to have a state of the same, with the papers, documents and vouchers of every kind relative thereto, in readiness; that they may attend immediately, upon notice being given for that purpose.

The Paymasters of the militia whose accounts, either in whole or in part, remain unsettled, are desired to prepare them, and attend without delay, that they may be examined, liquidated and reported.

All county and town Committees, who have at any time received or disbursed monies on account of the publick, are desired to pay attention to this advertisement.

The utmost care must be taken that every particular charge and disbursement be supported by full and explicit vouchers; as none but those which are so supported can be allowed.

SILAS CONDUCT,
WILLIAM CH. HOUSTON,
JAMES MOTT, Junior.

Princeton, July 15, 1778.

THE publick are requested to be cautious about purchasing or receiving bank notes or tickets from strangers, disaffected or straggling persons, numbers having fell into the hands of the enemy in their passing thro' this State; which it's probable will be renewed again. The most of those that were lost are payable to John Coxe or bearer, and some to Brigadier General David Forman or bearer.— And if any should be offered by any of the above described persons for sale, the publick are desired to detain them until it can be made appear they came lawfully by them. If any person or persons should meet with any such bank notes as they may suspect have been in the hands of the enemy, and will detain and transmit an account thereof to the Printer of this paper, the favour will be gratefully acknowledged by an unfortunate sufferer, and they satisfied for their trouble by calling on the Printer. The managers of the United States Lottery are requested not to pay any prize or prizes that may have been drawn by the numbers 1952, 1953, the tickets having unfortunately fell into the hands of the enemy.

THE best American made WOOL-CARDS, to be sold by James Cox, near Inlay's-Town.

TEN DOLLARS REWARD.

STRAYED or stolen out of a pasture near English-Town, on the morning of the battle at Frechold, a brownish bay HORSE, about 14 hands high, nine years old, has a little white round the fetlocks of both his hind feet. Whoever takes up said horse and returns him to the subscriber at Princeton, shall receive the above reward and all reasonable charges, paid by THOMAS WIGGINS.

THIRTY DOLLARS REWARD.

WAS STOLEN out of a pasture on the 30th of June, a bay HORSE about 14 hands 3 inches high, neither brand nor ear mark; has a pretty thick main and tail, paces, trots and gallops; is a very good chair-horse, but goes a little rough to ride. Whoever takes up the horse and thief, and he be thereof convicted, shall have the above reward, or Ten Dollars for the horse only.

July 15, 1778.

By order of the Judge,
BOWES REED, Pro Reg.

To be sold a TRACT of LAND, situated in Salem county, New-Jersey, adjoining the town of Salem, containing about fourteen hundred acres, which, for the extreme fertility of the soil, value of timber, quantity of excellent meadow, and conveniency of water carriage, is perhaps equal to any tract of land in New-Jersey. The above-mentioned tract of land is divided into five plantations, all of them subject to leases of improvement, which will expire in three years from the twenty-fifth day of March next. Each plantation will contain at least eighty acres of arable land lately cleared, besides a sufficient quantity of wood-land and meadow, and each accomodated with a frame or log dwelling-house, and three of them with new barns, besides other out-houses. Adjoining to one of these farms is a swamp, containing about eighty acres, of excellent bottom, covered with a great quantity of white oak and other valuable timber. The aforesaid tract of land will either be sold all together, or in separate lots, to suit the purchaser or purchasers, as may be most convenient. Any person or persons inclining to view the premises, may apply to John Carey, Esq. attorney at law, or Henry Luummis, both living near the premises; and for further particulars apply to the subscriber in Philadelphia.

BENJAMIN WYNKOOP.

SIXTY DOLLARS REWARD.

STOLEN the 12th of June last at night, out of the stable of James Jolly, in Lower Makefield, Bucks County, State of Pennsylvania, a BAY HORSE-COLT, rising three years old July 28th, had but one stone down, some white hairs in his forehead, about 14 hands high, is very long made, has a fine neck, lofty carriage, and trots all; nearly full blooded. Said colt is supposed to be stolen by Samuel Burrows son of John Burrows, of Upper Makefield, who was seen with him at Philadelphia amongst the British troops, and offering him for sale: Said thief is a lad about 19 years of age, dark complexion, slim made, and about five feet eight or nine inches high.

Whoever will secure said colt and bring him to the subscriber, or secures him so that he may be got again, and giving proper notice thereof, shall be entitled to the above reward; and for the thief an addition of Forty Dollars, paid by

—New-Jersey Gazette, Vol. 1, No. 33, 1778.

Extract of a letter to a gentleman in Philadelphia from his friend in Elizabeth Town, dated July 18, 1778.

“If the French fleet should preserve its present station, a famine must, I think (and very soon) ensue in the enemy’s army, as all their supplies must be cut off. Nothing but rice, instead of bread or flour, has been dealt out to the soldiery since their arrival in New York. A loaf of bread that used to cost 4d. now sells in the city for a dollar. In short, it appears to me, not at all impossible, that if they should be thus kept hem’d in on the sea and land side, they will be reduced to the necessity of surrendering the city in less than a month, without any enterprize of General Washington against them.”—The Pennsylvania Packet, July 25th, 1778.

Philadelphia, July 18. Yesterday a severe cannonade was heard by many people, supposed to be between our good allies and the British fleet at Sandy-Hook.

New-York, July 27. Wednesday last the Toulon Squadron under the Command of the Count D’Estaing, that had been off Sandy Hook since the 11th Instant, got under Way, and stood out to Sea, supposed to be bound to the Delaware for Water, being much in Want of that Article.¹

Since their Arrival off the Hook they have taken about 20 Sail of Vessels, mostly West-India Men, and some Prizes: among them are Lieut. Whitworth, in the Stanley, with 4 Prizes, a letter of Marque Brig with 3 Prizes, a Ship, and several armed Brigs, Sloops, and Schooners, from Barbadoes.

When the Count D’Estaing got under Way last Wednesday, he stood in directly for the Hook, and was not more than two Miles from the Light-House, when he and a Quarter, was forced to yield; the Action was fought in the Presence of 12 Sail of the Line and 5 Frigates, commanded by the Comte D'Estaing, who were at 4 Miles Distance, and could not, on Account of little or no Wind, get nearer. When the Attack commenced, the Rose had 60 Men on board, eight of which were sick and unfit for Duty, and when she struck, had 44 left; the Bravery of the Men and officers, beyond Description, was applauded by more than Ten Thousand of their Enemies, Spectators of the Event. The firm Caladonian fought his Ship till she sunk; several of his Officers were killed, himself wounded, and his first lieutenant dangerously so, his Life being dispaired of.

Two Schooners, one of them from France, the other from South Carolina, that were taken by the Active Letter of Marque, Capt. Powell, are retaken and carried into Egg-Harbour.

TRENTON, JULY 29.

Extract of a letter from camp, at North-Castle, dated July 21, 1778.

“The army has at length joined the troops under General Gates, and are encamped at this place, a few miles from White Plains. How long we shall continue here is uncertain, but I hope we shall soon move down towards Kingsbridge, and add to terrors and distress which is said to reign amongst the enemy's troops and the numerous tribe of Tories which is collected in New-York from all parts of America. Deserters who come out to us daily, say that their army is already distressed for want of flour, but they look for relief from the Cork fleet, which is expected in daily: But this I hope will fall in the hands of the French fleet, which now lies at the Hook braving the British flag, which once waved in triumph along the coasts of France."

Since our last, about 40 recruits, light dragoons belonging to Col. Bland's regiment, arrived here from Virginia, on their way to camp.

Yesterday about 60 continental troops, being discharged from the hospital here, marched for camp, to join their respective corps.

It having been represented to me, that a number of persons in the county of Monmouth, having erected salt-works on Barnegat Bay, and other waters adjacent to the sea shore, make use of the wood in the vacant lands of the General Proprietors of East New-Jersey, for carrying on the said salt-works:—It having been likewise represented, that those persons, or most of them, have declared their intentions to purchase the right to the said lands, whenever they had an opportunity of so doing:—And it appearing to me that it would be for the interests of the said General Proprietors to make a sale thereof; which cannot be done without a meeting of the said General Proprietors: I do therefore, in consequence of a request to me, made by a sufficient number of the said Proprietors, "That I should call a special meeting of the Board," give this PUBLIC NOTICE, That Tuesday, the eleventh day of August next, is appointed for a meeting of the said Proprietors in council, at the court-house in Freehold, in the county of Monmouth, then and there to take the premises into consideration; and the day following to dispose of, at public sale, such parcel or parcels of rights to be located on vacant lands, convenient and adjacent to the said salt-works, as may then and there appear to the Board to be necessary.—Of which all persons concerned are desired to take notice, and govern themselves accordingly.

¹ James Parker was a Captain in the provincial service, 1746, on the northern frontier. After this campaign he settled in New York City and then removed to Amboy. Here he became a Councillor to the Colonial Governor, Mayor of Amboy, and in April, 1775, he was elected a delegate to the New Jersey Provincial Congress. This body he, however, did not attend, but removed to Bethlehem, Hunterdon county, where he remained until the war was over. He then returned to his estate at Amboy. He was confined at Morristown for some time, for supposed loyalty to the crown, but, retaining a strict neutrality, he was soon released and his property escaped confiscation. He died October 4th, 1797, at the age of 72.—Whitehead's Early History of Perth Amboy, p. 133; Manuscript of the late William S. Stryker.

² Point Breeze, near the mouth of Crosswicks creek, was in part located by Thomas Farnsworth in 1681, and by the Farnsworths sold to Joseph Borden, for whom Bordentown was named. Thence the property passed to Joseph Douglass and to his son George. In 1792 George Douglass made an assignment to Abraham Hunt, of Trenton, merchant, from whom the land passed under the control of Stephen Sayre, formerly high sheriff of the city of London. In 1816 Joseph Bonaparte, brother of Napoleon, having been deposed as King of Spain, acquired title to Point Breeze, which he held until 1844, residing upon the property and beautifying it. Until 1848 the home of Joseph Bonaparte was occupied by his grandson, Count De Musignano. In 1850 Henry Becket, British consul in Philadelphia, purchased Point Breeze. At the present time (1903) the property is in the possession of the priests of the congregation of the mission of St. Vincent de Paul.

TRENTON, August 5.

WILLIAM LIVINGSTON, Esq.

Governor, Captain-General and Commander in Chief in and over the State of New-Jersey, and territories thereunto belonging, Chancellor and Ordinary in the same.

PROCLAMATION.

WHEREAS by a late Act of the Legislature of this state, the Generals in the service of the United States were authorized to grant passes to the citizens of New-Jersey to go into the enemy's lines and encampments, and into places in their possession:— And whereas the said Act is since expired by its own limitation, and some of the said Generals, as well as other officers of the army never thereunto authorized by any law of this State, have, since the expiration thereof, granted such passes; the continuance of which practice, from their unacquaintance with the true characters of the applicants, who are generally disaffected, may prove greatly injurious to the interest of America. I have, therefore, thought fit to issue this Proclamation, to notify to all the citizens of this State, that they are not to expect, by virtue of any such passes, to be exempted from the punishment prescribed by law for going into the enemy's lines, unless they shall be sent by such General Officers, or by Officers having the command of detachments stationed in this State, on publick occasions, or for military purposes; but that they will be proceeded against with the utmost rigour of law, any such passes notwithstanding.

*Given under my hand and seal at arms, at Morris-Town,

Lord one thousand seven hundred and seventy-eight.*

WIL. LIVINGSTON.

Extract of a letter from Monmouth, dated July 18.

“I have been waiting from the time the enemy passed thro’ this county till the present, in expectation that some of your correspondents would, thro’ the channel of your paper, have given the public an account of their conduct to the inhabitants --- but not having seen any as yet, and as it has been such as every honest person ought to depise, I take this opportunity of giving a short sketch of it; which, if you think will be any satisfaction to your readers, you may insert in your paper. The devastation they have made in some parts of Freehold exceeds perhaps any they have made for the distance in their route thro’ this State, having in the neighbourhood above the Court-house burnt and destroyed eight dwelling-houses, all on farms adjoining each other, besides barns and out-houses — The first they burnt was my own, then Benjamin Covenhoven’s, George Walker’s, Hannah Solomon’s, Benjamin Van Cleave’s, David Covenhoven’s and Garrit Vanderveer’s; John Benham’s house and barn they wantonly tore and broke down so as to render them useless. — It may not be improper to observe that the two first mentioned houses that were burnt adjoined the farm, and were in full view of the place wherein Gen. Clinton quartered. In the neighbourhood below the Court-house they burnt the houses of Matthias Lane, Cornelius Covenhoven, John Antonidas, and one Enmans; these were burnt the morning before their defeat. Some have the effrontery to say, that the British officers by no means countenance or allow of burning - - - did not the wanton burning of Charleston and Kingston in Esopus, besides many other instances, sufficiently evince the contrary, their conduct in Freehold I think may --- the officers having been seen to exult at the sight of the flames, and heard to declare that they never could conquer America until they burnt every rebel's house, and murdered man, woman and child. Besides, this consideration has great weight with me towards confirming the above, that after their defeat, thro' a retreat of twenty-five miles, in which they passed the houses of numbers well-affected to their country, they never attempted to destroy one. — This much for their burning.

“To enter into a minutê detail of the many insults and abuses those inhabitants met with that remained in their houses, would take up too much room in your paper; I shall therefore content myself with giving you an account of Gen. Clinton's conduct to one of my neighbour's, a woman of seventy years of age and unblemished reputation, with whom he made his quarters. After he had been some time in her house, and taking notice that most of the goods were removed, he observed that she need not have sent off her effects for safety, that he would have secured them for her, and asked if the goods could not be brought back again — the old Lady objected: But upon the repeated assurances of Gen. Clinton in person, that they should be secured for her, she at length consented, and sent a person along with the waggon he had ordered to shew where they were secreted. When the goods were brought to the door, which was in the latter part of the day, the old Lady applied to Gen. Clinton in person, for permission to have them brought in and taken care of, but he refused, and ordered a guard set over the goods. The morning following, the old Lady finding most of her goods plundered and stole, applied again to him for leave to take care of the remainder; he then allowed her to take some trifling articles, which were all she saved; not having (when I saw her, and had the above information from her) a change of dress for herself or husband, or scarcely for any of her family. — With regard to personal treatment: She was turn'd out of her bed-room, and obliged to lay with her wenchs either on the floor, without bed or bed-clothes, in an entry exposed to the passing and repassing of all, &c. or sit in a chair in a milk-room too bad for any of the officers to lay in, else its probable she would have been deprived of that also. — If the first officers in the British army are so far divested of honour and humanity, what may we not expect from the soldiery?"

Extract of a letter from a gentleman at Elizabeth-Town, dated July 29, 1778.

"We have certain information that the enemy are getting water on board their shipping with the utmost industry.

"This morning a certain Jonathan Chew, Captain in the New Levies, deserted over to us from Staten Island, bringing with him his son; also come off about the same time, a private of artillery. Chew was formerly an inhabitant of Billingsport, in Gloucester county."

Lately retaken and brought into Great Egg-harbour, by the privateer sloop Cornet, Capt. Yelverston Taylor, the schooner Carolina Packet, Capt. Walter Belt, from St. Ubes, with 1600 bushels of coarse salt. Also the sloop Lucy, Capt. Thomas Grandle, from South-Carolina, with 112 tierces and 30 half tierces of rice, one tierce and half ditto indigo.

The sloop Lark, Capt. John Laing, bound from St. Kitts to Philadelphia, was lately taken and sent into a safe port. Her cargo consists of 77 hogsheads of rum, one ditto dry goods, 18 kegs of nails, 3 tierces and 1 case joiners and carpenters tools, door locks, hinges, &c. The schooner Phoenix, Captain Robert Gilbert, from Bermuda for New-York, with 30,000 oranges and lemons, and a considerable quantity of onions. And a schooner from Antiqua, with rum, brandy, &c.

Retaken and brought into Little Egg-harbour, by two New-England privateers, in company with Capt. John Rice, a brig and sloop loaded with tobacco.

We hear that several refugees, despairing of the success of the British arms, and being greatly neglected by those they esteemed their friends, have, within a fortnight past, left New-York, and come into this State, throwing themselves on the mercy of their country.

We are informed, that on Wednesday last a British frigate came within the Capes of Delaware. About the same time a large tender was cruising off our coast, which drove several of our small privateers into the inlets of this State.

It is reported that the prizes which were taken by the French fleet, since its arrival on our coast, are sent into some of the New-England ports.

By a gentleman from the army we learn, that ten deserters upon an average come over every day from the enemy's post near Kingsbridge.

To be sold by the subscribers, in behalf of the proprietors, at May's Landing, on Great Egg-harbour, by publick vendue, on Monday, the tenth inst. (August) at ten o'clock in the morning, about 1600 bushels best St. Ubes coarse Salt; 112 tierces and 30 half tierces Carolina Rice; one tierce and a half best Carolina Indiga.

Extract of a letter from Piscataqua, New-Jersey, dated July 17, 1778.¹

“I beg you will permit me to inform you, that in my passage from Martinico I unfortunately fell into the hands of the enemy on the last of February, about 5 leagues from Cape Charles in Virginia; after which I was carried to Rhode Island, from thence to the Chesapeake again, and back to New York. In this circumnavigation I frequently suffered great hardship, as well from the savage cruelty of my captors, as for want of cloathing, being separated from the principal part of what I had with me by an accident. My arrival at New-York was, however, but the beginning of my calamities, and a pestilential prison ship the place of my abode, where the KING OF TERRORS became so familiar with me, that he often times appeared a beneficent friend—To fill up the measure of my distresses, I had not been many days on board before I was seized with the epidemical fever, raging among the prisoners, which in general proved mortal to healthy, fresh men, in less than six days; but through mercy, I had a more favourable paraxysm of this malignant distemper in less time than ¹ It has been thought that this letter may have been written by Philip Freneau, the satirist, who was so long a resident of Monmouth county. Mr. John Rogers Williams, of Princeton University, after a careful examination of this letter, concludes that Freneau's experiences do not coincide with those of the writer of this communication. From November, 1775, to June 15th, 1778, Philip Freneau was living peacefully upon the estates of his friend, Captain Hanson, on the island of Santa Cruz, West Indies. Upon June 15th, 1778, Freneau commenced his return voyage to the United States. Off the Delaware capes the vessel was taken by the British, but Freneau, proving to be but a passenger, was landed on July 9th, and returned at once to Mount Pleasant, New Jersey. Freneau's experience with the prison ships came later. On the 26th of May, 1780, while a passenger on the ship Aurora, bound for the West Indies, he again had the misfortune of falling into the hands of the British. The Aurora was captured off the Delaware capes (not Cape Charles) by the frigate Iris, and Freneau, with the other prisoners, was sent to New York and placed on board the prison ship Scorpion “lying off the college in the North river.” Freneau's experiences are detailed in his journal describing the capture of the Aurora. This journal has been published. The second reason is that the letter is not in Freneau's easy and graceful style.

that, which miraculously saved my life, and the only one living from 30 inclusive, that came with me on board the same day. In the most reduced and emaciated state of body, with scarcely strength in my limbs to sustain the skeleton, I was on the 25th ult. put on shore at Elizabethtown, as a matter of great favour, on my parole, not to act in the cause of my country until properly exchanged. I have the pleasure, however, of a retrospective and satisfactory view of the innumerable escapes I have had, as well from civil as military persecution in the glorious cause of my country, though much alloyed with the mortification for the little service I have done it: I, however, hope that a favourable occasion will be put into my possession shortly, to compensate for all my unfruitful services and sufferings. When my health shall be again re established, in statu quo, on the wholesome respiration of my native air, and on which I have already very much recruited, I shall be happy to join immediately in the assistance of my country."

ELIZABETH-TOWN, JULY 29, 1778.

SIXTEEN DOLLARS REWARD.

DESERTED from my company, about the first of July, a certain CORNELIUS BARCALOW, about five feet ten inches high, thin visage, ruddy complexion, light brown hair, about twenty two years of age; 'tis believed he is lurking somewhere about the neighbourhood of Allen-Town. Whoever takes up said Deserter and secures him in any gaol in the United States, or delivers him to any officer belonging to the regiment, shall receive the above reward, and all reasonable charges, paid by

JOHN^a BURROWES, Captain.¹

N. B. All persons are forewarned not to harbour said deserter at their peril.—The Pennsylvania Packet, August 8, 1778.

New-York, August 10. The following Anecdote we believe may be depended on.

Whilst the Count D'Estaing's Squadron lay off Sandy-Hook, a Marine Officer belonging to one of the Ships, a Scotch Man by Birth, went on Shore at Shrewsbury, the Inhabitants finding he spoke good English crowded to converse with him, and told him how happy they were made by the Arrival of the French Fleet, as they did not doubt their Independence would be established by their Co-operation. Whereat the Scotch officer with a significant Shake of the Head answered them, "he believed they were mistaken, that he looked upon their Independence only as a Dream, for that France or Britain must have this country."

The effect this Speech had, may be better conceived than described.—New-York Gazette and Weekly Mercury, August 10, 1778.

Chesterfield, Burlington County, Aug. 7, 1778.

TEN DOLLARS REWARD.

WAS STOLEN from the subscriber, a silk and worsted long gown, a blue quilt, a fine shift, a pillow-case, and fifteen shillings in money; supposed to have been taken by a woman who left Philadelphia when the enemy did, and who has been in the neighborhood ever since: she is a short thick woman, pockmarked, with brown hair, and stutters in her speech; had on a black petticoat, a callico short gown, a black bonnet, and was bare footed: Perhaps she may put on some of the stolen cloaths. Whoever takes up said woman and delivers her to JONATHAN GESS or ADAM PARKER, living in Burlington, or JOSEPH VANDYKE in Water-street between Arch and Race-streets, Philadelphia, shall have the above reward and reasonable charges, paid by

TRENTON, August 12.

The following DEPOSITION was omitted last week for want of room.

BE it remembered, that on the 30th day of July, Anno Domini 1778, personally appeared before me, Peter Schenck, one of the Justices of Peace for the County of Monmouth, Mrs. Elizabeth Covenhoven, who being duly sworn on the Holy Evangelists of Almighty God, deposeth and saith, That on the 26th of June last, when the enemy came into that county, General Sir Henry Clinton, with his suite, made his quarters at her house, and promised on his honour that every thing she had should be protected and nothing injured: That some time after they had been there, she saw a soldier driving her horses away, upon which she applied to them to perform their promises, and one of the General's Aids said she should be paid for them; she answered she could not spare them; he then took down the marks, and declared they should be returned; but she heard no more of them. Some little time after she perceived all her cattle, including her milk cows, driving by in the same manner; she then made a like application and said, they must go without milk themselves if their cows were taken away; they then gave orders to have them stopped; but before they went off they killed and took every one of them, not leaving her a single hoof. This deponent further saith, That the General and his Aids finding her furniture chiefly sent away, were exceedingly urgent to have them sent for, declaring it likely they would be destroyed where they were concealed, but if they were in the house they should be safe; she told them she had no way to send for them: upon which they ordered a waggon and guard to go with the Negro wench to bring the goods, and they brought one waggon load home and placed a guard over it, and refused absolutely suffering her to have any thing out of it: That the next morning she found almost every thing of value was taken out of the waggon, and only a bible and some books, with a few trifles, left, which were scattered on the ground; she then applied to the General himself to have liberty to take these few things his Honour had left her—he ordered one of his Aids to go to the guards and suffer her to have them—she followed him, and he said, here you damned old rebel, with one foot in the grave, take them. This deponent also saith, That, though a very old woman, she was obliged to sleep on a cellar door in her milk room for two nights, and when she applied for only a coverlet it was refused her: That by the time they went away her house was stripped of her beds, bedding, the cloaths of her whole family, and every thing of any value. The farm was also left in the same situation; and that at a moderate computation, her loss amounted to 3000l. and that she lost this in trusting to the personal honour of Sir Henry Clinton, which threw her off her guard, and made her perfectly easy, having solemnly engaged to protect or pay for every thing they used; and this deponent declares that the sum of 5l. 2s. which one of the officers gave her for 50 pounds of butter he had, was all the money or satisfaction she received for any thing she lost. And further saith not.

Extract of a letter from a Gentleman at camp at Elizabeth-Town, dated Aug. 7, 1778.

“Yesterday the British fleet, under Admiral Lord Howe, sailed from the Hook for Rhode-Island, as 'tis said. We are also informed that a number of transports are taking troops on board at New-York, but are uncertain as to their destination.”

Extract of a letter from a Gentleman at camp at the White Plains, dated Aug. 8, 1778.

“I doubt not you have heard of the great fire in New-York. Yesterday came out from thence two Hessian officers. They were of those taken at Trenton, and had contracted an affection for the country — therefore shortly after they were exchanged, as they tell the story, they resigned their commission; but not being able to obtain leave to come out, they at length effected their escape. They left the city about 8 o'clock in the evening the 6th inst. and passed King's-Bridge about one in the morning. One of them a handsome young fellow, whose brother is aid-de-camp to Gen. Clinton, tells me he saw the fire — that it began in a house filled with king's stores --- 68 houses consumed and a vast quantity of stores, amongst which 30,000 blankets or pairs of blankets, I think the latter, 10,000 suits of cloaths, and a great deal of provisions, computed at four weeks supply. Some time afterwards a vessel struck with lightning blew up --- this Hessian says she had on board upwards of 200 tons of powder, but other accounts say from 70 to 90 barrels; either was a great quantity for an explosion, and did great damage to the town. They say the inhabitants are much distressed at their present situation, and a vast many want to take their chance in the country, but cannot obtain permission. This morning the pilot who conducted Count de ESTAIGN to Rhode-Island, called on me — They arrived on Wednesday last week, and he left them a day or two afterwards. The French fleet had taken a position to prevent any escapes; but had not, except a ship or two, shewn themselves in the harbour — That the enemy had evacuated Connanicut-Island, and burnt the King-fisher and two gallies which could not otherwise escape a French frigate which was after them. There is the greatest probability of success in that expedition, as I see nothing in the ordinary course of events to prevent it. The pilot says the fleet was ready to enter the harbour, but waited a signal from General Sullivan.”

We hear that on Thursday sennight the ship Love and Unity from Bristol, with 80 hogsheads of loaf sugar, several thousand bottles of London porter, a large quantity of Bristol beer and ale, beside many other very valuable articles was designedly run on shore near Tom's River; since which, by the assistance of some of our militia, she has been brought into a safe port, and her cargo properly taken care of.

By a gentleman from Egg-Harbour we learn, that a few days since a sloop from Jamaica bound to New-York, was brought in there. It seems a number of Americans, captured at sea, and carried into that island, had been put on board in order to be sent to New-York, and on their passage rose, secured the master and hands, and brought the vessel in to the above port. She was loaded with rum, sugar, &c.

Friday last John M'Kinley Esq late President of the Delaware State and Lieu Hall of Maryland arrived here on parole from New York and early next morning they set out for Philadelphia.

And on Sunday morning last about 100 Light Dragoons chiefly new recruits, neatly dressed in uniform and well mounted, under the command of Major Lee arrived here from Virginia on their way to camp.

BAPTIST ASSOCIATION.

NOTICE is hereby given to the Baptist churches belonging to the association¹ usually meeting at Philadelphia, that being disappointed in their meeting last year, a number of Ministers met at Hopewell, in New-Jersey, in concurrence with said church:— Considering the utility thereof to the churches, it was concluded that the association meet this year at Hopewell, Tuesday after the second Lord's day in October.

Hopewell, July 27, 1778.

¹ Of the Baptist churches in New Jersey, of those which antedated the Revolution, the Cohansey congregation claimed its organization from 1683, that of Cape May from 1712, Salem from 1765, Dividing Creek from 1762, Pemberton from 1764, Pittsgrove from 1766, and Manahawkin from 1770. As early as 1688 there was a Baptist congregation at Middletown, where it is said that eighteen of the thirty-six purchasers of the Indian title were members of that denomination. It is curious that, after having "settled themselves into a church state," the Baptists of Middletown became divided, and each party was formally excommunicated by the other. What the trouble was is not positively known, for when the trouble was adjusted, in May, 1711, the record of proceedings was torn out of their church-book. In 1689 the Baptists organized a congregation at Piscataway; in 1747 at Scotch Plains; in 1752 at Morristown, and in 1767 and 1769 at Mount Bethel and Lyons Farms. In Sussex county, at Wantage, the Baptists appeared in 1756, while in 1715 there were members of that faith organized in Hopewell, and in 1745 at Hightstown. Kingwood's church dates from 1742.—New Jersey as a Colony and as a State, Vol. III., p. 315.

THE Committee appointed by Act of the General Assembly of the 22d of June last, for collecting, adjusting and settling the Accounts of the State, give notice to all persons whomsoever, who have been entrusted with publick monies on the part of the State, and have not accounted for the expenditure thereof, or who are interested in any other publick accounts unsettled, to exhibit the same, with the necessary vouchers immediately, that they may be adjusted and reported to the Legislature at their next sitting, which is fixed, by adjournment, to the ninth of the next month. The Committee expect no further notice will be requisite: and observe that no accounts can be received by them during the sitting of the Legislature.

Princeton, New-Jersey, August 10, 1778.

THIRTY DOLLARS REWARD.

STOLEN on the night of the 3d instant, out of the pasture of JACOB DAVIS, near Squancom in Shrewsbury township Monmouth county, East New-Jersey, a lightish coloured bay MARE, three years old, a natural trotter, about 13 hands high or more, with a black mane and tail, her hind feet spotted below the fetlock joint. Whoever will secure said mare and thief, that he may be brought to justice, and return the mare to the subscriber at Shark River, or leave her at Dirick Longstreet's near Princeton, shall have the above reward, or Twenty Dollars for the mare only, and all reasonable charges, paid by me

JOHN DAVIS.

August 10, 1778.

A RIDING CHAIR was left at Point Breeze, near Bordentown, by the British army, in their flight from thence in December, 1776, with the letters J S A in a cypher on it. As it is likely they plundered it from some of the inhabitants of Jersey, any person, a subject of the United States, that has lost the same, may have it, on applying to the subscriber.

GEORGE DOUGLASS.

Point Breeze, July 20, 1778.

Thirty-two Dollars Reward.

DERSERTED from my company, since the battle of Monmouth, Benjamin Voglum, about 5 feet 9 inches high, pock-marked, and has a down look. Hugh M'Clane, an Irishman about 5 feet 8 inches high, a square set fellow, and has bushy curled hair. John Thompson, a nine-months-man, formerly belonging to the gallies, about 5 feet 8 inches high, swarthy complexion, and pock-marked. Also George Cook, born in Philadelphia, by trade a taylor, about 20 years of age, a likely young fellow, about 5 feet 5 inches high; says he has a mother in Philadelphia. Its probable they will change their cloaths and ship themselves on board of some vessel, as two of them are sailors. The above reward will be paid for them, or Eight Dollars for either, with reasonable charges, paid by me N. B. Said Cook has been formerly advertised and taken, but deserted the second time before he joined the regiment.

TO BE SOLD VERY REASONABLY,

A NEGRO MAN about 32 or 35 years of age, a good tempered, ingenious, handy fellow, is a tolerable cook, and can shave and dress a wig very well.—He has been employed as a house servant for some time past, and is now sold for faults which will not be likely to affect a purchaser who needs not intrust a servant with liquor, or the laying out of money. Enquire of Colonel Thomas Lowry, in Flemington, New-Jersey.

To be sold, by virtue of an order from the Judge of the Admiralty of the State of New-Jersey, on Thursday, the 20th inst. (August) at ten o'clock in the morning, by public vendue, at Samuel Cooper's ferry,¹ opposite Philadelphia, upwards of 30 hogshead best St. Kitts Rum; a quantity of Carpenters and Joiners Tools; Door and other Locks, Hinges, Hand-Saws, Files, Nails, Sod Iron, with a variety of other Hardware, &c. &c. Also a small quantity of Oznabrigs and bleached Russia Drabs; part of the cargo of the prize sloop Lark. Also two casks best Carolina Indigo, part of the cargo of the prize sloop Lucy.

JOHN STOKES, Marsh.

Aug. 7, 1778.

To be sold, a PLANTATION, situate in Hunterdon county, West New-Jersey, ten miles distant from Trenton, up the River road, containing 370 acres land, 200 thereof cleared, the remainder rough, but remarkable good wood land, 20 acres good meadow made, about ten more may be made, well fenced, on the premises are a good stone dwelling-house two stories high, a stone kitchen adjoining, a large Dutch barn, a young orchard; and the whole farm plentifully watered. On another part of said tract are other convenient buildings. For terms enquire of the Printer.

WHEREAS inquisition was found the 14th day of May, 1778, against Philip Van Cortlandt, John Bowsby, Edward Bowsby, Charles Bowsby, Richard Bowsby, Jacob Hylor, Humphry Devenport, William Howard, George Beaty, Thomas Husk, Lawrance Buskirk, Jacob Demorest, Samuel Ryerson, Isaac Hornbeck and Nicholas Vreland; of which proclamation was made in Court, the 8th day of July, that they, or any person on their behalf, or any persons who should think themselves interested, might appear and traverse the inquisition. This is to give NOTICE that unless they, or some other person on their behalf, agreeable to the said proclamation, do appear at the next Court of Quarter-Sessions, and traverse the said inquisition, final judgment will be then entered against them.

AARON KITCHEL, Commissioner.

Morris county, July 22, 1778.

CAME to the plantation of the subscriber, on the 25th of July, a sorrel horse, about 15 hands high, with a bald face, supposed to be 11 or 12 years old. The owner is desired to come, prove property, pay charges, and take said horse.

JOHN REEDER.

Trenton, Hunterdon county, 1778.

PUBLICK NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN.

WHEREAS sundry complaints have been made, and great uneasiness appearing among the people in general of Colonel BEVERS's battalion of militia, in the townships of Bethlehem, Kingwood, and Alexandria, in the county of Hunterdon, New-Jersey, on account of the fines levied upon them by the Magistrates and Field-officers of said battalion, for not standing their draught, nor procuring substitutes for the nine-months-service; also on account of the fines levied upon them some time before.

All which fines they complain were not equally and proportionably levied, according to their circumstances and situations, nor with equal justice recovered according to the warrants issued: Some having their goods distrained for the whole, while others are favoured and cleared by paying only one half of their fines, and great part of the monies recovered not fairly applied according to law. This being a matter of great concern and consequence to the publick in general, as well as to the inhabitants concerned in these three townships, it ought not to pass unnoticed in what ever part of the State it may happen. In justice therefore to those who were fined, as well as those who at all times have chearfully gone out, when called, to the field of battle, for the good of their country, some Magistrates and principal inhabitants of the township of Alexandria think necessary to request the favour of all the magistrates of the townships of Bethlehem, Kingwood, and Alexandria, the Field and other commissioned Officers of said battalion, and all the Collectors and Constables of said townships to meet at the house of William Davis at Pitts-Town, Hunterdon county, New-Jersey, on Tuesday the 18th instant, (August) at 9 o'clock in the morning, with all their accounts of the fines levied, what money they have received, how it has been disposed of, with the names and number of substitutes that have been hired and sent out from time to time, in order that a fair and just settlement may be made and rendered to the County Collector and Treasurer of all those fines, as the law directs; and thereby quiet the minds and uneasiness of the people, and prevent any slur or discredit that might hereafter be brought on the officers and inhabitants of these three townships.—It is hoped all concerned will not fail to attend.

N. B: The Constables are desired to be sure and bring in a return of all the warrants served from time to time on account of the fines. All those aggrieved by those fines are also desired to attend.

Alexandria Township, July 5, 1778.

NOTICE is hereby given that there have been inquisitions found against the real and personal estate of the following persons, late of the county of Somerset and State of New-Jersey, that is against Joseph Stockton, Richard Cochran, Charles Roberts, John Harris, Benjamin Worth, William Drake and John Drake, disaffected persons, who have gone over and joined the army of the King of Great-Britain; which inquisitions have been returned at the last Court of Common Pleas, agreeable to an act of the General Assembly of the State of New-Jersey, passed at Princeton on the 18th day of April, one thousand seven hundred and seventy-eight, and no traverse hath been entered; but if all or any of the above said offenders, or any person or persons in his or their behalf, or who shall think himself interested in the premises, do not traverse said inquisitions at the next Court of Common Pleas to be holden in and for said county, final judgment will be entered against said estates.

By order of us,

—The Pennsylvania Packet, August 15, 1778.

New-York, August 17. On Monday last arrived the Schooner Hammond, Capt. Bridger Goodrich, on his Passage to this Port, saw eight Privateers from Tom's River in East-Jersey, three of which he took, and has brought them in; they are, the Schooner May-Flower, with four Carriage, four Swivel-Guns, and 18 Men, from New-England, Andrew Geddridge, Master; the Schooner Scorpion, William Gray, Master, one Carriage, 16 Swivel Guns, and 36 Men, from New-England, the Schooner Sally, Joshua Stutson, Master, six Carriage, ten Swivel Guns, and 25 Men, from New-Jersey.

We are well assured that Col. Butler's Party now on the Frontiers of Pennsylvania, New-Jersey, and this Province, amounts to at least between 5 and 6000 Men, and daily increasing, that the Settlers back from Carlisle in Pennsylvania, to the City of Albany, are in the greatest Tribulation, and daily retiring.

About 7 o'Clock last Saturday evening seven large Ships, Two-Deckers, came to an Anchor off Sandy-Hook, 6 of them were black sided, the other bright; one of them had a red Flag at her Main-Top-Mast Head.—New-York Gazette and Weekly Mercury, August 17, 1778.

PHILADELPHIA.

A gentleman from Cape May informs us, that a fleet of ships approached the coast of New-Jersey, somewhat south westerly of Little Egg Harbour, on Thursday and Friday last. A large ship and five smaller vessels only were seen; but it was manifest there were several others in company, by signal guns fired in the offing. The weather was hazy.—The Pennsylvania Evening Post, August 18, 1778.

“Enclosed you have the copy of an advertisement which a few days ago was actually put up in the coffee-house at New-York; also a list of Admiral Lord Howe’s fleet that sailed from the Hook, with which, ’tis said, he intends to fight Count d’Estaign—¹ “Cornwal 74 guns, Eagle 64, Somerset 64, Nonsuch 64, St. Albans 64, Trident 64, Ardent 64, Reasonable 64, Preston 50, Centurion 50, Renown 50, Isis 50, Experiment 50, Phoenix 44, Roebuck 44, Vigilant armed ship 28 guns.

The Advertisement is as follows:

“TO BE SOLD, the British right in America; consisting, among other articles, of Thirteen Provinces in rebellion, which Britain, in the hour of her insolence, attempted to subdue; the reversion of the government of Quebec, Nova Scotia, Newfoundland, East and West Florida; the interest of Hudson’s Bay Company; a respectable body of troops; a considerable part of the royal navy; all the loyal subjects in America. Conditions of sale to be seen in the hands of HENRY LAURENS, Esq. President of the Continental Congress; and to make it easy to the purchasers, a seat in Congress will be taken in part payment, the rest in Continental dollars."

We hear from Morris-Town that his Excellency the Governor, upon intelligence that a number of people in Scooley's mountain had enlisted in the enemy's service, had several of them apprehended, and committed to gaol.

Among all the romantic stories (says a correspondent) which the tories propagate to delude the ignorant and credulous, their account of the French fleet is the most triumphantly impudent. This they represent as being dispatched by his Most Christain Majesty to co-operate with Lord Howe's squadron for suppressing the revolt in America.

We hear from good authority, that this day se'nnight two British commissaries deserted from the enemy at New-York and came over to Jersey. They report that many others of their acquaintance intend to embrace the first opportunity to do the like, so great is their aversion to their present hopeless situation.

WHEREAS sundry Juries of Inquiry have been held at different times and places in the county of Hunterdon, and inquisitions have been found against the following persons, subjects of the State of New-Jersey, who have either joined the army of the King of Great-Britain, or have otherwise offended against the form of their allegiance to this State, viz. John Allen, Christopher Voght, John Voght, George Castner, James Smith, Christopher Harris, John Oakeson, Peter Young, Conrad Eagler, Christian Rope, Michael Dennis, Joseph Lee, George Cyphers, John Van Buskirk, Rulof Rulofson, Samuel Sharp, Joseph Merril, Andrew Pickens, Nicholas Pickle, Edward Taylor, Bartholomew Thatcher, Thomas Skelton, Joseph Smith, Isaac Allen, John Barnes, Joseph Taylor, Absalom Bainbridge, Charles Harrison, Alexander Kerr, jun. Brereton Pointing and Mary his wife, and Daniel Coxe, late of the county of Hunterdon, Jesse Wall, late of the county of Burlington, and Barnardus Legrange, late of the city of New-Brunswick; which said inquisitions having been returned to the last Court of Common-Pleas, held at Trenton for the county of Hunterdon; and proclamation made in open Court, according to law, for the said offenders, or any person on their behalf, to appear and traverse the said inquisitions; and none having appeared: NOTICE is hereby given to the said offenders, that if they do not appear, or any person in their behalf, or whoever shall think himself interested in the premises, at the next Court of Common-Pleas, to be holden on the fourth Tuesday in October next, at the Court-house in Trenton, for the county of Hunterdon, to offer to traverse the said inquisitions, and put in the required security, that then the said inquisitions will be taken to be true, and final judgment will be entered thereon in favour of the State.

Salem, New-Jersey, August 16, 1778.

THIRTY DOLLARS REWARD.

Ran Away on the 26th of February last with the British light infantry at Salem, a Negro man named HARRY, but it is probable he may change his name; he is about twenty-eight years of age, five feet eight or nine inches high, a stout well made fellow, country born, a large nose, thought he will leave the soldiers and go into the country, and may perhaps endeavour to pass for a freeman; had on when he went away, a fustian coat with a red collar, light broadcloth breeches, two coarse shirts, one fine ditto, a good hat cut Maccaroni¹ fashion, good stockings and shoes. Whoever takes up said Negro and secures him in any gaol, so that his master may get him again, shall have the above reward and reasonable charges, paid by

ROBERT JOHNSON.

N. B. All persons are forbid to harbour said Negro at their peril.

¹ The use of the word "macaroni," known only to the present generation from its use in one of the many stanzas of "Yankee Doodle," was used to distinguish any individual or group of people who sought to attract attention by eccentricities in dress. Contemporaneous terms, some of which are still employed, were gallant, bloods, bucks, beaux, frubbles, fops, monstrosities, corinthians, dandies, exquisites and swells.

The macaronis' reign was short, commencing about 1770 and lasting until the outbreak of the American Revolution. The year of their fullest fruition was 1772. A writer in the Philadelphia North American, contributing an article upon this subject, June 16th, 1803, says that the macaronis distinguished themselves by an immense knot of artificial hair behind, a very small crushed hat, an enormous walking stick with long tassels, and a jacket, waistcoat, and small clothes cut to fit the person as closely as possible. Their most remarkable peculiarity was the large knot of hair, thus celebrated in a satirical song:

Five pounds of hair they wear behind,
 The ladies to delight, O,
 Their sense give unto the wind,
 To make themselves a fright, O.
 This fashion, who does e'er pursue,
 I think a simple tony;
 For he's a fool, say what you will,
 Who is a macaroni.

It would appear that the macaronis originated among a number of young men, who had made the grand tour, and on their return formed themselves into a club, which, from a dish of macaroni, then little known in England, being always placed upon the dining table, was called the Macaroni Club.

London became "macaroni crazy." They took the town by storm. Nothing was fashionable that was not a la macaroni. Even the clergy had their wigs combed, their clothes cut and their delivery refined a la macaroni. The shop windows were filled with prints of the new tribe; there were engraved portraits of turf macaronis, college macaronis and other varieties of the great macaroni race. At balls no other than macaroni music could be danced to; at places of public amusement macaroni songs, of which the following is a specimen, alone were sung to divert the company:

THE MACARONI.

AIR—NANCY DAWSON.

Come, listen all, and you shall hear,
 Of all the beauties that appear,
 And move in fashion's motley sphere,
 The fat, the lean, the bony ;
 The boast, the glory of the age,
 How young and old can now engage ;
 Each master, miss and parent sage,
 Is now a macaroni.

Each tries the other to outvie,
 With firetops mounting to the sky,
 And some you oft with tails may spie,
 As thick as any pony ;
 Insipid gait, affected sneer,
 With side-curls high above the ear,
 That each may more the fool appear,
 Or shew the macaroni.

Each doctor's now become a prig,
 That used to look so wise and big,
 With stiffened and swingeing wig,
 That got him all the money ;
 They've all thrown off the grave disguise,
 Which made each quaking owl look wise,
 For wig, of Whip the coachman's size,
 To shew the macaroni.

The lawyer too's become a crop,
 Instead of tail, a Tyburn top,
 Alack-a-day, each barber's shop
 Now looks but half so funny,
 As when the windows once were graced,
 When stately wigs in rows were placed ;
 But these are days of wit and taste,
 Huzza for macaroni.

The cits that used, like Jerry Sneak,
 To dress and walk out once a week,
 And durst not to their betters speak,
 Are all grown jolly crony :
 Each sneak is now a brickish blade,
 When in the park, but talk of trade,
 He thinks you mean him to degrade ;
 Each cit's a macaroni.

Who would not live in days like these,
 In days of jollity and ease,
 There's no exception to degrees,
 My lord and John are cronies.
 Each order and profession claim
 An equal right, an equal fame,
 For nothing's equal to the name
 Of modern macaronis.

New-York, August 24. On Saturday Afternoon his Majesty's Ship Renown, of 50 Guns, commanded by Capt. George Dawson, fell in with the Lanquedoe, of 90 Guns, and rated to have 1100 Men, about thirty Leagues South-East of Sandy-Hook; this capital ship had been dismasted in the Storm on the 11th Instant. The Renown attacked her on the Quarter, and kept up a steady Fire against her from 4 o'Clock till Dark, intending to renew the Engagement in the Morning; but the French Admiral availing himself of the Darkness of the Night, brought his Ship to an Anchor, by which Means the Renown became separated three or four Miles from him. At Day-break, Capt. Dawson observed the Count D'Estaing, attended with several other Ships of his own Squadron; which occasioned the 50 Gun Ship to bear away, and he thereby escaped from a Superiority, to himself, invincible.

Monday last the Lord Hyde Packet, Capt. Jeffries, arrived here with the Mails from Ealmouth, which Place she left the 7th of July, by whom we have the following Advices, viz. Monday, June 15.

From the London Gazette.

Whitehall June 12.

The following is an Extract of a letter from the Honourable General Sir William Howe, to Lord George Germaine, one of his Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State received by the Swallow Packet, which arrived at Falmouth the 10th Instant from Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, May 11.

My Lord,

I have the honour to inform your lordship of Sir Henry Clinton's arrival on the 8th Instant; and that, in consequence of his Majesty's permission to return to England, I shall delay my departure no longer than is necessary to furnish my successor with the orders and instructions with which I have been honoured, and with every further information that I can conceive may be of advantage or use to the service.

Since the earliest return of Spring, a succession of detachments from hence has ranged the country for many miles round this city, and in the province of Jersey, to open the Communication for bringing in supplies, to relieve the peaceable inhabitants from the persecution of their oppressors, and to collect forage for the army. These detachments have without exception succeeded to my expectations, greatly to the credit of the troops employed, to the annoyance of the enemy, and to the advantage of his Majesty's service. Colonel Mawhood in particular, with three battalions, and a provincial corps, made a descent on the coast of Jersey, near Salem, in the month of March; and, after dispersing the force collected in that part of the country, returned with a very seasonable supply of forage.

To the skill and activity of Lieut Col Abercromby must be attributed a successful surprize made on the 4th Inst. upon a corps of the enemy consisting of 900 men, under the command of a brigadier general, posted about 17 miles from hence, with 400 light infantry, 300 rangers, and a party of light dragoons; that officer attacked and defeated this corps of the enemy, killing, wounding, and taking 150 men, including officers, with the loss of only 9 wounded. The rout would have been far more complete, if the long march of the infantry, in effecting the surprize, had not disabled them from a vigorous pursuit.

I have equal pleasure in reporting to your lordship the good conduct and success of Major Maitland, who was detached the 7th inst. with the 2d battalion of light infantry in flat boats, under the command of Capt Henry of the navy. His orders were to proceed up the Delaware, and destroy all the ships and vessels lying in the river between this and Trenton. The inclosed account of his expedition will prove how effectually this enterprise was executed, and the very considerable loss the enemy have sustained.

Two posts are taken on the Jersey side of the Delaware, at Cooper's-ferry and at Billingsport; the first to cover parties cutting wood for the future supply of the troops, the latter to secure the navigation of the Delaware in the narrow part of the channel. I have the honour to be.

W. Howe

On the night of the 7th inst at 8 o'clock, I embarked with the 2d battalion of light infantry, and proceeded up the Delaware in the flat boats, commanded by Capt. Henry of the navy, and landed about ten next morning at White-hill, where the rebels appeared in force, both horse and foot, but chiefly horse: as soon as our three pounders were landed, I advanced towards Bordentown, two miles distant. The rebels still kept in front, and at a creek where I was obliged to pass by a dam, part of which was wood, they made a stand, having a field piece with them, and attempted to break down the dam to prevent any passage; but the battalion pushing on with their usual alacrity, they were not able to effect this, and a warm fire ensuing, they abandoned their field piece, having only fired it once. We pushed and drove them from five guns they had in the town, which were disposed in such manner as to prevent shipping coming up the river. The rebels left 14 dead on the spot. In this town we destroyed four storehouses, containing provisions of all species, a very large quantity of tobacco, some military stores, and camp equipage; the fire accidentally communicating from the stores to Mr. Borden's house (a colonel in the rebel service) it was consumed, together with all the furniture.

The rebels alarmed the country, and collected a strong body at Trenton, where it appears they apprehended I would direct my march; I was willing to confirm them in their opinion, and therefore moved a little that way; then re-embarked and crossed to the Pennsylvania shore, when I took post so as to cover the naval force. Early next morning we proceeded to Biles-island creek, and burnt some valuable vessels belonging to the rebels, particularly two ships loaded with tobacco, rum, and military stores. About two o'clock the battalion marched for Bristol (13 miles distant) where they arrived at five in the evening, burnt what vessels were there belonging to the enemy, and embarked by sunset.

Upon the whole, this expedition has been very fatiguing to the troops, but must in its consequence be extremely distressing to the rebels, as their magazines and ships upon the river are totally destroyed. The annexed list will inform you of their number and quality.

The galleys being sunk in deep water could not be injured.

In justice to Capt Henry and the seamen employed on this expedition, and to the battalion under my command, I must say they behaved with such spirit and alacrity as cannot fail to do them honour, and I flatter myself has merited the general's approbation. (Signed)

John Maitland Major Comm. L. I.

Admiralty office June 13. The letter from lord Viscount Howe, commander in chief of his Majesty's ships and vessels in North America, to Mr. Stephens, of which the following is a copy, was this day received by the Swallow packetboat from Philadelphia.

Sir, Eagle, off Billingsport, May 10.

Upon advice received that the enemy had advanced four armed galleys down the Delaware, between Bordentown and Bristol, a detachment of the light infantry under the command of major Maitland of the marines, were embarked in the flat-boats, and with the galleys and armed vessels of the fleet, under the chief command of Capt Henry, sent up the river in the night of the 6th inst. to intercept the enemies gallies, and bring down or destroy such of their frigates and other vessels as had been withdrawn above the shoaler-passages of the river, when the troops first took possession of Philadelphia.

The inclosed report of Capt Henry's judicious conduct in the execution of his orders, contains all the particulars I have to communicate to the lords commissioners of the admiralty, on the subject of that material operation. I am, with great consideration, Sir, your most obedient humble servant,

Howe.

Philip Stevens Esq-Secretary of the Admiralty.

Report from Captain Henry.

At ten o'clock on Thursday night the 5th of May, the Hussar, Cornwallis, Ferret, and Philadelphia gallies, with the Viper and Pembroke armed schooners, four gun boats, and 18 flat boats, in which the 2d battalion of light infantry, with two field pieces were embarked, proceeded from Philadelphia up the river Delaware. The wind being down the river with much rain, and the ebb making, when we had proceeded 12 miles we came to an anchor, and so remained till five next morning, we then got under way and sailed up the river. At noon we were abreast of White-hill, where the gallies, armed vessels, and gun-boats were placed to cover the landing of the troops, which was performed without opposition. At this place the Washington and Effingham rebel frigates (the former pierced for 32 and the latter for 28 guns) were set on fire, and consumed, together with a brig and a sloop. The troops then marched, took possession of Bordentown, and destroyed a battery of three six pounders; whereupon the gallies, armed vessels, &c. proceeded to that place, where they burnt two new ships, one of which was pierced for 18 guns, one privateer sloop for 10 guns, with ten sail of brigs, schooners and sloops; several storehouses, containing provisions, artillery stores, camp equipage, and some tobacco were burnt at the same time. This service being executed, the boats proceeded up Crosswell¹ creek, and set fire to the Sturdy Beggar privateer, pierced for 18 guns, and eight sail of Brigs, sloops and schooners. The troops were then embarked, and landed on the Pennsylvania side, where they rested that night.

At five on Saturday morning the Hussar and Ferret gallies, gunboats, &c. rowed up to Biles-island creek, and burnt one new schooner pierced for 14 guns, one new sloop for 16 guns, one old schooner for 10 guns, one old large sloop for 16 guns, and two large new sloops.

The rebel galleys in Watson's creek, on the Jersey shore being reconnoitred, were found sunk and hid at low water.

At noon the troops marched to Bristol, first burning two sloops at the ferry; and the galleys, gunboats and flat boats proceeded down the river to embark there, which was done at six o'clock in the evening, after burning a ship and brig at that place. The Philadelphia galley, Viper and Pembroke armed schooners, with two gunboats, burnt the remaining vessels consisting of four new ships, one new brig, and an old schooner.

The whole number of vessels destroyed was 44 sail.

At six o'clock on Sunday morning the troops arrived at Philadelphia without losing one man.

During this expedition up the Delaware some houses were unfortunately burnt, very contrary to the directions and sentiments of the officers employed on this service.

(Signed)

John Henry.

This they represent as being dispatched by his Most Christian Majesty to co-operate with Lord Howe's squadron for suppressing the revolt in America.

We hear from good authority, that this day se'ennight two British Commissaries deserted from the enemy at New-York, and came over to Jersey. They report that many of their acquaintance intend to embrace the first opportunity to do the like; so great is their aversion to their present hopeless situation.

FORTY DOLLARS REWARD.

Ran Away from the subscriber, living at Aquackanack, in the county of Essex, state of New-Jersey, on the night of the nineteenth inst. (August) a Mulatto boy named HARRY, light complexion, dark brown hair, about five feet four inches high, eighteen years of age, with a scar in one of his eyebrows, and one of his little fingers crooked, speaks Dutch; had on when he went away, a tow shirt and trowsers, woolen stockings, shoes with brass buckles, light brown coat and vest with pewter buttons, and a cut hat; having a linen shirt and striped trowsers he may shift them. He is supposed to have gone off with one William Sutliff, lately a soldier in the British service, who wears a red coat without facings, straw hat lined with black snakeskin, and a band round it of the same. Whoever takes up said boy and brings him to the subscriber or secures him in any of the county gaols and gives information to the Printer hereof or to Mr. Josephson, in Market street, Philadelphia, shall receive the above reward and reasonable charges, from

—The Pennsylvania Packet, August 25, 1778.

BY HIS EXCELLENCY WILLIAM LIVINGSTON, Esquire,

Governor, Captain-General, and Commander in Chief in and over the State of New-Jersey, and the territories thereunto belonging, Chancellor and Ordinary in the same.

A P R O C L A M A T I O N .

WHEREAS, by an Act of the Legislature of this State, intituled, "An act to prohibit the exportation of provisions from the State of New-Jersey," passed at Princeton the twentieth day of June last, an embargo was laid to prohibit the exportation of wheat, flour, rye, Indian-corn, rice, bread, beef, pork, bacon, live-stock and other provisions from this State, from and after the publication of the said act until the fifteenth day of November next: Provided always, that nothing in the said act be construed to prevent the taking on board such provisions as may be necessary for the stores only of any ships or vessels of war, and others trading to or from this State.

And whereas, the British troops both in New-York and on Long-Island are so greatly distressed for want of provisions, and especially of bread, as already to have had several mutinies among them upon that account; and must, in a short time, by our preventing them from obtaining any supplies by capturing our vessels; and more especially by suppressing the villainous practice of directly furnishing them with provisions from any part of this State, be reduced to the necessity of surrendering themselves prisoners of war, unless they should be fortunate enough to steal an escape to their own country, with the indelible infamy due to their rapes, robberies and murders.

And whereas, some of the inhabitants of this State, instigated by the most boundless avarice, and equally regardless of the blessings of peace and the calamities of war, the felicity of freedom and the horrors of bondage, still persist in the traiterous practice of enabling the enemy, by supplying them with provisions, and especially with flour and grain, to continue their savage depredations, after having totally abandoned all hopes of conquest, and every prospect of succeeding in the horrid purpose of enslaving this incorruptible and invincible country.

And whereas, the Honorable the Congress by their resolution of the fourteenth instant, considering it as of the first importance to continue the distress prevailing in the enemy's fleet and army at New-York for want of provisions, have requested me to take the most effectual measures to enforce the due observance of the said embargo, I have therefore thought fit to issue this PROCLAMATION, hereby strictly commanding all the Officers of this State, both civil and military, and earnestly requesting all the other loyal citizens thereof, as they tender the welfare of their country, the glorious cause of liberty, and the speedy restoration of peace, to exert their most vigorous efforts in support of the said embargo; and particularly enjoining the civil and military Officers of the counties of Monmouth and Bergen to use their utmost vigilance in preventing all commercial intercourse with the enemy, and to seize and secure all persons concerned in transporting any provisions to any place in their possession, so that they may be brought to speedy and condign punishment.

Given under my hand and seal at arms at Morris-Town, the 22d day of August, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and seventy-eight, and in the third year of the independence of America.

WIL. LIVINGSTON.

By His Excellency's command,
William Livingston, jun. D. Sec.

GOD SAVE THE PEOPLE.

We have undoubted intelligence that Lord Howe's fleet, which some time since sailed from New-York to Rhode-Island, are returned to Sandy-Hook, without effecting the purpose of their expedition.

It is currently reported, that after the late storm at sea (which scattered the French and English fleets) several warm actions happened between single ships, in which the English have been severely handled; and that the Isis, of 50 guns, had been sent to New-York in a very shattered condition to refit.

Yesterday arrived here, the third North-Carolina regiment, consisting of about 600 fine healthy troops, under the command of James Hogun, Esq. being on their way to Head-Quarters at White Plains.

Friday last the crew of the Mermaid, consisting of about 170 men, which was drove on shore at Cape May by one of Count d'Estaing's fleet, on his arrival off the Delaware, passed thro' this place on their way to Elizabeth-Town to be exchanged.

This day fortnight a row-galley, carrying one 18 and two 2 pounders, belonging to the enemy at New-York, was drove ashore near Shrewsbury, and fell into our hands with 30 men.

Died on the 14th of August, at Chatham, Morris County, New-Jersey, Mrs. EUNICE HORTON,¹ Widow of the Rev. AZARIAH HORTON, in the fifty-seventh year of her age. On the sixteenth her remains were decently interred in the burying-ground at South Hanover, attended by her bereaved family, the clergy of the adjacent churches, and a very great concourse of respectable inhabitants.

Before the procession began, was delivered at her dwelling-house to the children of the deceased, and occasionally applied to the spectators, by the Rev. Jonathan Elmer, a most pathetick address — “If my father and my mother “forsake me, the Lord will take me up”—And after it was over, at the church an excellent sermon well adapted to the occasion, by the Rev. Timothy Johnes, from Deut. “XXXII. 29. “O that they were wise, that they understood “this, that they would consider their latter end!”

It may be said, without the least addition to truth or diminution from it, that the deceased, in her house, was an acknowledged pattern of œconomy, received her friends with cheerfulness, and entertained them with generosity; that, in piety, she was an early convert to the noble doctrines of the Gospel, the genuineness of which she exhibited to the world by her growing attachment to, and steady invariable observance of them, through the whole course of her life; and in her last hours, tho’ exquisitely distressed with bodily pain, in the full exercise of reason, critically reviewing the past and attentively surveying the future, had the approbation of her conscience, and, as the taper of life was going out, so conversed and so aspired after the full fruition of the Deity, as might have convinced the infidel, reformed the profligate, and stimulated the faint indeed, — as would have done honour to any christian, and brought reputation to religion itself.

His Excellency the Governor has appointed a Court of Oyer and Terminer and General Gaol Delivery, to be held in the county of Sussex on Tuesday the fifteenth day of September; and in Morris county on Thursday the twenty-fourth day of September next.

—The Pennsylvania Packet, September 1, 1778.

Mr COLLINS,

IN perusing your useful papers, those pieces which have a particular relation to the policy of New-Jersey generally draws my most serious attention. The happiness and well-being of its community, which lays near my heart, prompts me to it. I consider the legislative and executive bodies in the State, as also the subjects, for whose benefit laws are made and executed, as fallible and imperfect men; and therefore esteem any hints offered with deference and prudence to either of them, among the happy means for securing and promoting the happiness of a people, and the liberty of the press, (the medium of conveying them) one of the greatest advantages to civil society. Hence is evident, that the duty of those who presume to offer their thoughts to the publick, is not to aim at the detraction of their neighbour, raised above them in the esteem and confidence of their country, (such views are hatched in hell) but the real good of their country. I presume their opinions ought to be offered with judgment, prudence and candour, and urged with judicious and solid arguments. If this be confessed, what treatment do the labours of such authors deserve, as give us for arguments ridicule, low buffoonery and low surmises of the principles and views of other mens actions? — And the duty of those to whom the arguments are addressed undoubtedly is, to peruse them with attention, and reap all possible advantage from them for the regulation of conduct in their different spheres of action. The man in office, who conceits himself above instruction, or disdains receiving it from any he may regard as his inferior, I hesitate not to pronounce as unfit for office. And it behooves the community at large, particularly in free and popular states, to improve their minds, in order that they may become qualified to serve their country in their turn.

Notwithstanding the general consent to the necessary qualifications in a writer, before mentioned, yet the contrary practice is too much pursued by many, and too eagerly made use of by others to bad purposes. I confess if we have under consideration the reasonings of a man who is justly suspected of subtle, designing and disingenuous practices to promote his sinister views to his own private emolument, we have the more reason to examine his arguments, and endeavour to discover their fallacy and expose their tendency; but to treat even such arguments with mere scurrility and buffoonery, will by no means answer the necessary purposes; and thus to treat the argumentation made use of in the pursuit of truth, equity and justice, deserves the highest contempt. A few pieces, Sir, in your useful paper, have convinced me that New-Jersey is not free of such contemptuous characters ; and therefore am apprehensive, should I presume to offer my thoughts on any subject, in order to promote justice, equity, truth, and thus the weal of civil society, I may meet with antagonists who will endeavour to confute my arguments only by branding them as selfish. To blunt the edge of such weapons as much as possible before an attack, I beg leave to give some descriptive account of myself, while I, in conformity to the present custom, conceal my name. What I am now about to say is matter of fact, and not a romance. By birth I am an American from generation to generation ; so that my ancestors have been among the virtuous few who have had to struggle, in the first settlement of America, with a howling wilderness and its cruel savages. As to civil principles, a real friend to democratical government ; one who has interested himself in the present contest, as far as his sphere of action would permit, to the extent of his abilities for the preservation of the liberty and independence of America. As to my circumstances in life, I gratefully acknowledge the favour of possessing a comfortable subsistence in real estate, which my own family improves ; and I hope what I have due will about adjust and balance the accounts against me. As to offices in the civil or military department, I hold none, and do not expect I ever shall : I have not the least prospect of any personal advantages but such as I may reap in common with the rest of the community ; and therefore if self-interest sways me, it must be such as is the interest of the community ; and I frankly own this to be my darling object.

I beg of my readers to excuse the length of my preamble ; I had my reasons for it. I shall now proceed to what I had particularly in view. I have read, Sir, with serious attention, in your 13th number,¹ the letter of T. W. to his friend, and also the answer to it by Equal Taxer, in No. 16.² I do honestly declare that I know not who are the authors of those performances, nor the friend the letter was addressed to ; but I am persuaded the former gave no cause to the latter for the abusive language he so liberally makes use of in his animadversions on T. W.'s letter, stigmatising his antagonist with the opprobrious epithets of usurer, in the odious sense of the appellation, a poor soul in which the revolution and independence of these States stuck, giving him leave to romit it up or choak : A miser, poor creature, whom, he declares, was he to keep on his knees, he would be charitable enough to fling a copper to, to be quit of him, as a Pharisee, whose heart betrays him. Is this the language of a gentleman ? Is this the proper method to lead our fellow-creatures to the knowledge and practice of justice, equity and truth ? Is this any proof that Equal Taxer is a whig and a friend to his country ? I leave the answers to men of candour. The subject in debate is, the equity, justice and propriety of taxing money drawing interest. A subject, perhaps, more important than superficial reasoners may apprehend. The conclusion in the affirmative makes in my favour ; I would, however, always wish to be guided to the side of equity and justice, and have therefore endeavoured to weigh arguments on both sides: I have duly considered those of T. W. and the animadversions of Equal Taxer on them; and beg leave to offer a few observations upon the subject, as treated by these gentlemen.

It appears to me that the 8th article in the Confederation of the States removes the first objection of T. W.

The second objection of T. W. is, the impracticability of the scheme. I think the spirit of his reasoning shows that he does not mean an absolute impossibility, but an impracticability of carrying it into execution with any tolerable degree of equity and justice to the part of the community concerned in it. The animadverter seems to have taken him in the first sense. The bonds, &c. in a desk are to him as his horse locked in a stable, and his improved lands equally known to his neighbours. I can not believe that the greatest favourer of this scheme will be able to give any credit to this assertion. Hard necessity seems, however, to extort from him the concession that it will prove somewhat more difficult to come at the knowledge of bonds, &c. than horses and lands; and therefore he proposes two ways, by either of which the difficulty might be removed. The first is, let bonds, &c. not given up, be forfeited. But would this penalty bear proportion to that of other taxables? Excessive penalties may become real grievances. Farther, does he mean that every bond not given up, and if all the bonds are given up, but not their whole amount, are all to be forfeited? as under the tyrannic government we have discarded, the least contraband discovered on board, the whole ship and cargo was forfeited. If only the sum not given up, then the poor innocents who are not well acquainted with accounts and tricks might get severely trounced; but men of a contrary character would find easy means to elude the law. How would the assessor find out that any bonds or notes, &c. were kept back? Suppose he discovered bonds, &c. in a man's desk, to the amount of a thousand pounds, and that man declared that he owed to the amount of the same sum to others. Here the man's word must be taken, or he must either swear to it or produce the counter bonds: The latter is impossible; because they are not attainable by him unless paid. And as to the former, I hope heaven will prevent such a profanation of oaths among us, as naturally would arise from such temptations to perjury as self-interest affords. The other is, let the borrower pay the tax, and deduct it from the interest. This, I confess, appears the most reasonable: Let it however be considered, what the end in view would be, if the borrower was to have that sum deducted from his tax, there would be some inducement for him to give it up; but if he must still pay the same as if he owed none, will he have any thing to counterpoise the lender's ill-will, and the disagreeable situation of thereby giving an opportunity to all who may see the assessor's duplicate, to know how much he is in debt, and avail themselves of it? And yet even this method is not without its insurmountable difficulties. Only let us recollect how many thousands of pounds have been, and doubtless will be, borrowed from persons in other States. In such case the borrower must pay tax for the property purchased with the money; he also must pay for the money it was purchased with, and the lender pay for it in the State he lives. Here will be a treble tax for the same property. Our laws bind not in the other State; the borrower comes into that, is there arrested, and the bond and full interest recovered. Will this prove an advantage to the poor borrower, in whose favor Equal Taxer seems so much to plead? If money from other States be exempted, how long will it be till the men of wealth have all their money in other States, and borrowers here owe all there? A few of the middle class among us, whose sums are small, and acquaintances in other States few, will be the only persons who will pay this tax. T. W. corroborates this argument by examples of our predecessors, both in Britain and New-Jersey. The animadverter's answer to this remark appears to me mere scurrility and low buffoonery. His answer plainly amounts to this: The parliaments of George the third have become corrupt, venal and tyrannical; therefore if T. W. appeals to any of their predecessors, he becomes justly suspected of becoming a tory, the most despicable of the human race! If such argumentation holds true, what must we judge of that august body the Continental Congress, who have, in their publick declarations, so liberally bestowed the epithets of virtuous, wise and brave upon the predecessors of the present Britons. If he would have enervated this corroboration of the argument, he should have proved that British parliaments, in their purest and best times, did tax bonds, &c. This would have answered his purpose.

The third objection of T. W. is the injustice of it. Here the animadverter assumes an air of argumentation; but I confess that amidst all the parade and show of geometrical demonstration, I can find no conclusion that bears any reference to the matter in debate. The proposition which T. W. proves, is this: If the lender and borrower both pay tax, the one for the money, the other for the property purchased with it, that then the same property pays a double tax. Equal Taxer might as well have tried all his skill in geometry to demonstrate that two lines drawn parallel will meet; and his skill in arithmetick, that two and three do not make five, as to prove the former proposition to be false. It became him then to have acknowledged the proposition; and if he still persisted in his notion of going on with the double tax on such property, to have proved it to be just and equitable. And here he would have received just as much assistance from the maxims in morality, as in the former from those in geometry. It appears impossible to me that men of virtuous principles, who are capable to understand the matter, can plead for a thing which is so flagrantly unjust. I acknowledge that men of my circumstances in life, who possess unencumbered real estates, may reap benefits from such a tax, and such alone can do; but God forbid that I should call any thing just which in its own nature is unjust, for the sake of lucre or gain.

The animadverter lays down as a maxim, property is defended, therefore property must be taxed. This is granted; but let him show why this property should pay double tax to what other property does. He endeavours to illustrate the application of the maxim to the case in hand, by this process: B purchases a farm from A for a 1000 l. and gives his bond and mortgage upon the land for the money. B having no money when he purchased it, is supposed that the whole of the property belongs to A. Is this any proof that both A and B ought to pay the tax? Is it probable that a double tax will prevent a suit at law to dispossess B and strip his family? Can you persuade yourself to believe it? In all probability you cannot; and why then all that combustion and hurly-burly made in consequence of a supposition you yourself do not believe? Perhaps Equal Taxer means that in the case before stated B should pay none, but A the whole of the tax. If this be his meaning he has at least given up that part of the dispute that T. W. proves to be unjust; and then the whole of the remainder is, whether the lender or borrower ought to pay this tax? and in fact this only can be debated by men of virtuous principles.

Here I beg leave to observe, that in proportion as men have no interest to pay or receive, they become disinterested in this dispute; for, suppose the sum to be raised to 50,000*l.* will it not be perfectly equal to such men's share of tax in that sum whether the lender or borrower pays, since only the one or the other is to do it.

T. W. offered some reasons to show, that as this property is found in the actual possession of the borrower, he ought to pay the tax; and that it is the business of the legislature so to regulate the interest that he might be able to do it. I was much surprised to find that the animadverter had made no remarks on this part of the argument, which was the only part that left room for fair debate.

(The remainder to be in our next.)

TRENTON, SEPTEMBER 2.

We hear several prizes were taken last week, and brought into Egg-Harbour; among which is a vessel from London, with goods to the amount of 20,000 pounds sterling.

Saturday night last the house of the widow Boellisfelt, near the Great Swamp in Amwell, was attacked by seven armed tories painted like Indians, who cruelly robbed her of 700 dollars, threatening that if she made the least noise or resistance they would put her to immediate death. We doubt not but the Gentlemen in authority will exert themselves to bring those daring villains to exemplary and condign punishment.

It is also asserted, that on Monday se'nnight the British fleet from New-York fell down just without the Hook; next day seven topsail vessels, which came in from the southward, supposed to be part of Admiral Byron's squadron, were seen to join them, and in the evening the whole hoisted sail and stood to the eastward, bound, it is apprehended, to Rhode-Island.

Sunday several deserters from the enemy on Staten-Island passed thro' this town.¹ They left that place on Thursday last.

The Secretary's office for this State is now kept at Burlington, in the usual place.

Philadelphia, August 18. On Thursday last, before the Hon. Thomas McKean, Esq; chief justice for this state, Elias Boudinot, Esq.¹ delegate in congress for the state of New Jersey, appeared among others, an attorney, or council, for John Roberts,² an infamous tory, now confined in the gaol of this county, on a charge of high treason. The question argued was, Whether said John Roberts may be admitted to bail? This leads to another question, How far it is consistent with the dignity of congress for a delegate representing one of the Thirteen United States, actually attending his duty in congress, to appear as attorney or council in favour of notoriously disaffected persons?

New-York, September 7. On the 20th ult. Capt. Sibbles, in the Tryon Letter of Marque, sunk a small Rebel Privateer belonging to Egg-Harbour, called the Glory of America, William Williams, Master; the Crew were taken out and last Wednesday brought in here by his Majestys Ship Maidstone, Capt. Gardner, who was good enough to receive them from on board the Tryon. The Captain of the Privateer and one of his Hands were put on board the Daphne.

Last Saturday Morning a small Boat from Kings Bridge going too near the Jersey Shore at Hoebuck, was fired upon by a Party of Men that lay in Ambush in the Meadows, and 'tis supposed some of the People in the Boat got hurt: The Boat immediately made to the Shore, when the Crew were made Prisoners, and the Boat burnt.

It was confidently asserted in Jersey last Saturday, that General Pigot attacked General Sullivan in his Retreat from Rhode-Island, on which a bloody Battle ensued; that the latter lost many Men and several Officers of Distinction, but that General Piggots Loss was not known, though General Sullivan kept the Field; that all the Particulars relative to the Action was not received, but that an Express was expected at Elizabeth-Town with an Account last Saturday.

The 7th of August two large French Ships and a Snow from Cape Francois, attacked the Sovereign, Capt. Wheatley, and some others of the Fleet, when a smart Engagement ensued, in which three Men on board the Sovereign were wounded, one of which was Capt. Boyd of the Glasgow Brig, who went to assist Captain Wheatley, had his Leg shot off, of which wound he died. The French Snow is brought in here, but the two Ships escaped. Last Friday they were attacked by several Privateers off Egg-Harbour, one of them a Brig.

The same Day 14 Vessels arrived here from London, having left the Downs the 13th of June. One of the Fleet, a Brig called the Recovery, is said to be taken and carried into Egg Harbour.

IN order to assist in pursuit of the knowledge and practice of justice, equity and truth, I beg leave to offer the following observations:

1. That by reason of the opportunities the monied part of the community has to extortionate on the indigent, it becomes the legislature to interpose and regulate the interest.

2. That the lending and borrowing of money to purchase freeholds, is of vast advantage both to individuals and to the community. — By limiting it to the purchase of freeholds, I mean to exclude that of merchants, who entice people to buy many superfluities upon credit, and afterwards not only get bonds or notes, but even make them pay interest for their book debts. This is ruin to a community, against which the legislature ought to guard as much as possible.

To make the proposition as above stated, evident, let us suppose B borrows from A 1000l. and buys with it a farm worth that money. It is confessed the property of that farm properly belongs to A. Also D hires of C a farm worth 1000l. Thus far these two are alike. The difference is here, B has the fee-simple, and whatever improvement he makes upon the farm, redounds to his own advantage; which is a manifest incitement to industry, prudence, care and œconomy. The case of D, who hires the farm, is the reverse. All his improvements on the farm redounds to C, who has the title. The natural result is, that farms thus purchased, have been well improved, to their own and the publick's advantage, while those hired have been neglected. Hence has followed the matter of fact which none will presume to deny, that where one man has made an estate by hiring farms in America, five hundred, perhaps a thousand, have made them by borrowing money.

Here permit me to express my surprize at the amazing ignorance and stupidity of the Equal Taxer, who asserts, that it cannot be the duty of any state, especially these in America, to encourage usurers, If by usurers he only means such as exact unlawful and immoderate interest, I cordially join with him; but from his reasoning it is manifest this is not his meaning. If the Americans, from the beginning of its settlement, by combating the men who live upon their money as useless members of society, had so embarrassed the lending of it that money could not have been borrowed, what would have been the consequence? The answer may be readily given — The monied gentlemen would have laid out their money in lands, (as this friend to his country would have it) and thousands of American freeholders, who now live in affluence, and prove the bulwark against English tyranny, would now have been the tenants of some tyrannical lord, bidding up against their neighbours the rents of farms, in order to obtain a bare livelihood for themselves and families, and thereby enable his lordship more effectually to tyrannize over them. Is this what Equal Taxer aims at? With his leave I shall here borrow his exclamation: Kind heaven! deliver my country from such Equal Taxers.

Let it also be observed, that the opportunity of borrowing money has been, and will be, the means, especially in America, of keeping rents of farms within bounds; for a tenant, who by economy and industry has gained something while the terms of his lease were moderate, finding that his landlord begins to bear harder upon him, may borrow an additional sum, and purchase a freehold; so that the landlord cannot here get his tenant in the dilemma of complying with his demand or be ruined. Such attempted oppression then only proves the means of advancing the tenant's and the community's interest; which would not be the case if money was not to be borrowed.

Hence it appears, that though in point of equity and justice it would be the same, yet in point of policy to our natural advantage and safety, the taxing of both landlord and tenant for the same farm, would be greatly preferable to that of the lender and borrower of money; because it would have a natural tendency to the purchase of freeholds, to private and publick emolument.

3. I observe hence, that it is the duty of our legislators to encourage the lending and borrowing of money for the purchase of lands. He that consents to my former observations, cannot deny this. Lending and borrowing are relative terms, inseparable from each other. If no money is to be lent, there can be no borrower; if there is no borrower, money cannot be lent. The manifold advantages arising from the purchase of freeholds in the settlement of this new country, are doubtless very strong incitements to the borrowing of money. Hence it is the duty of the legislature to take care that the borrowing of it be not so embarrassed by opportunities for extortion, or any other way, that the disadvantages of borrowing overbalance the advantages in purchasing. It is manifest from the nature of things, that as soon as this becomes the case, such purchases will decrease and stop; also that the lending of it be not so embarrassed, that those who have it may have no inducement to let it to others for use. It is very evident and natural to suppose, that if persons who have the money, see it to be to the safety and emolument of their estates to apply it any other way, they will not let it to interest. And I hope it will be allowed, that men have as good a right to dispose of their money as their other possessions. And here it is evident, whatever inducements may be for purchase, none can be made if no money is to be hired, save only by the few who have it, and consequently the most profitable improvement of America will cease. Thus it appears to me that the foregoing observation is undeniable.

4. That any law which subjects the money borrowed for the purchase of freeholds to a double tax in proportion to other taxables, is of pernicious tendency to the State, as well as unjust in its nature. I conceive this proposition to be undeniably evident from all what I have before offered.

5. I observe that it is the duty and business of the legislature so to regulate the paying of the tax aforesaid, as may do justice to lender and borrower, and prove an encouragement to both: He that consents to the former propositions, will not presume to deny this. Here, however, is the grand point, to wit, How the legislature is to conduct the matter, in order to obtain this valuable end in view! Here I think one important consideration is, to guide in the deliberation. If the circumstances of times and things are such, when the law is about to be passed, as plainly insinuates that the borrower has got so far the advantage of the lender, by the rise of the value of his farm and its income, as to enable him to pay the tax, and then leave him upon such good conditions to his advantage as when he took the money, he ought to pay the tax. If by the fall of the price of lands and its produce, the lender has got the advantage of the borrower as that he may pay the tax, and be then left upon equal terms of advantage with the borrower, he ought to do it; and when circumstances are such that neither should pay the whole, that then the parts ought to be regulated in proportion to the foregoing rules. Such regulations would leave this matter on its former footing, which has proved, by long experience, of great advantage to individuals and the community.

. 6. I observe, in the last place, that it becomes the legislature to regulate this matter between lender and borrower in such a manner as may be most agreeable and advantageous to both, which certainly will prove an encouragement to both, before proved to be necessary and profitable. And thus in forming this plan two things ought to be avoided; on the one hand, to oblige the borrower to render an account of what he owes; and on the other, the lender of what he has due. The disagreeable nature and bad consequences of the former, I think are such as ever to deter the legislature from attempting it, if possible to be avoided. The reasons are not only the disagreeable feelings it must produce in the mind of an honest and industrious person, who has been obliged to encumber himself, for the present, in order to promote his future advantage, to have a state of his debts laid open to every assessor, and also to every one who may inspect the duplicate in the hands of the collector, but also the grand abuse which ill-disposed neighbours might make of it, to the great damage of himself and family. And as to the latter, although they may be out of the reach of such abuse, yet those among them who are men of honour and tender feelings, will feel disdain rise in their breasts from such injury. Though some persons of a contrary character may be disposed to trifle with this remark, yet if I may be permitted to suppose that men of honour at different times and places may have the same feelings, I appeal, for a corroboration of this remark, to the effect of the attempt which Philip the second made in the United Netherlands. Every one acquainted with the history of that nation, knows what was the effect of the laws which that tyrant caused to be made, exacting the tenth, fiftieth and hundredth penny. One of the grand objections was, that an inquiry was necessary to be made into private estates, to which reference was had in the laws, in order to levy the tax. The then Dutch were men of such feelings, that when the inquiry was attempted to be made, they absolutely refused to submit; and this proved one of the main causes of their general revolt.

Hence remains the only safe, equitable, just and easy way; and that is the regulation of the interest, which in effect answers all the valuable purposes before mentioned, and avoids all inconveniences. To make this evident, let us suppose that B pays 7 per cent. interest; circumstances change, so that justice requires that A should pay the tax for that sum, which we will suppose to be 1 per cent. Query, what is the difference to the borrower whether he pays the tax and has it deducted from the interest, or whether he pays the interest in full, and has that sum deducted from his tax? or whether instead of 7 he pays 6 per cent? In every case the borrower, who has the improvement of the farm purchased for that money, pays 10l. And let the borrower say whether he chose rather to pay 70l. interest, and then be obliged to give up this sum to the assessor, and expose his debt to the view of the world, and the lender pay 10l. of it, or pay 60l. and be free of all the other disagreeable encumbrances? I am sure he would not hesitate a moment.

How far the reasons I have offered on this subject are founded on equity, justice and truth, I leave to the candid publick to judge.

The remarks of the animadverter on the fourth objection of T. W. is a piece of such mean scurrility, as demeans it below the notice of any man of candour; as for me, I shall regard it no other. I do honestly declare, that though I do reap as much benefit from such a law, in proportion to what I am worth, as any man in the State possibly can do, yet I find my mind sensibly affected with the subject of T. W's fourth objection. How can I avoid feeling, when I recollect how many widows and orphans there be, whose deceased guardian has directed by his last will, that his estate should be sold, and his widow and orphans be maintained out of the income of the amount, which at that time afforded them a comfortable subsistence? The depreciation of the Continental currency, which a set of tory villains have first begun, and a set of extortioners, more abandoned, if possible, than the former, have since encouraged and supported, has since reduced their principal to less than half its first value. And what can they now purchase for the income towards their maintenance? while they get 5 or 6 per cent. they must pay 500 or 600, and many things 800 or 1000 per cent. for the necessaries of life. In the same predicament are many honest friends to their country, who have fled from a tyrannical enemy and left their abodes and employments, in hopes of procuring a livelihood by some money they had out in the country, and some they took along with them, and have taken shelter among us.

These things considered, it is evident that no people among us have been obliged to make a greater sacrifice of property, or, in other words, no property has paid greater taxes than money, in the present glorious struggle for liberty; for, while the farmer, mechanic and day labourer follows the track of the extortionate trader, the widow, the orphan, the superannuated, and many virtuous refugees, remain confined within bounds. I fear this will open a view, if kind heaven does not prevent, which will make many an innocent bleed to death. I cordially wish that Equal Taxer, who so eagerly pursues the miser, as the useless member of society, (of which, I am persuaded, he shall overtake but a small number in this State, in comparison with the extortioner, and even the innocent sufferers I have mentioned) would here do what he with great parade was about to do in another case, that is, put on spectacles, and try whether he cannot discover suffering innocence, and thereby recover bowels of pity, if ever he had the feelings of it; then I am sure he would not endeavour to add unjust taxation to the oppressive load of unjust depreciation of their property and its income.

If I have erred in what I have here offered to the consideration of others, I do declare it has not been intentional; my pursuit is after equity, justice and truth: And 'till I be otherwise convinced by better reasons than I have hitherto seen, I shall remain satisfied that I have argued on the right side of the question.

I am, Sir,

Your and the publick's humble servant,

A TRUE PATRIOT.

To the Author of the Burlington Almanack.

AT a time when sweetening has become so very scarce and dear as not to become at by many, it may be agreeable to some of thy readers to know that a very good syrup, nearly equal to West-India melasses, may be made of Indian corn stalks, in the following manner:¹

As soon as the grain is hard enough to save with care, and before the leaves lose their verdure, husk the corn, clear the stalks of leaves, and cut them close to the ground: the tassel, with three or four joints of the top, may then be taken off, and the rest of the stalk run through a good apple mill well wedged up, unless a mill with round rollers, made for the purpose, can be had, which is the best, as the stalks may be run through that a second time; keep a large tub under the nuts or rollers, with a coarse linen cloth tied over it to separate the pure juice from the broken stalks: the liquor thus strained should immediately be put over a good fire in a brass kettle, some say iron is good, skim it clean as long as any skum arises: after which, and the liquor boils, it should be stirred frequently, and when boiled away to near one third, strain it through a flannel, or if that cannot become at, a coarseish strong linen cloth will do, then immediately hang it over the fire again, and boil it until of a proper thickness, which may be known by cooling a little in a bowl. It is observable, when near done, a rich yellowish froth appears on the top, resembling that which sometimes is seen in warm weather on good melasses; and in this last boiling it should be almost constantly stirred with a wooden stick, to prevent its burning. The time it requires to evaporate to a perfect melasses depends a little upon the ripeness of the juice when the stalk is cut, and the briskness of the fire; if the juice is in maturity, and the liquor is kept in a constant good boil, about seven or eight hours actual boiling has been found sufficient, otherwise a longer time is necessary. The process may be expedited and much helped by having several kettles on at once: and when partly boiled and strained as above directed, put the whole into one that will contain and finish it off; this makes room for more fresh juice, and prevents burning the kettle or the melasses.

A very good melasses may also be made of pumpions,¹ by baking them until soft, then expressing the juice and boiling it as above; and also of cider made of sweet apples: In both cases the second straining is necessary to make it of the best quality.

If these hints, from one who has had some little experience, may put others upon making the trial, and furnishing thy next year's Almanack with a more clear and practical method in one or all of these branches of manufacturing this useful commodity, and in the meantime encourage my countrymen to supply themselves with a substitute for the foreign melasses, that may atone in some measure for the present scarcity, and perhaps save the importation of so much made by the iron hand of slavery, in future the aim of thy correspondent will be answered.²

TRENTON, SEPT. 9.

On Saturday last His Excellency Governor Livingston passed thro' this town, on his way to Philadelphia, and yesterday he returned; having paid a visit to Monsieur Gerard, the French Ambassador. In a short time after the Governor's arrival here from the city he set out for Princeton, in order to meet the Legislature of this State, who are to meet there this day for the dispatch of public business.

Yesterday arrived here from Philadelphia, the Provost Troop of Light Dragoons, under the command of Captain Hair, being on their way to camp at White Plains.

Last Monday evening five villains, two of whom, we hear, acknowledge themselves to be of the gang that robbed the Widow Boelsfelt near the Great Swamp, as mentioned in our last, were brought to town, and committed to close gaol.

This is to give Notice to the PUBLICK in GENERAL,

THAT DANIEL MANNING still continues to carry on the DISTILLERY at William Savage's, within four miles of Princeton, where he intends to use the utmost of his endeavours to give final satisfaction to all who please to favour him with their custom, which he flatters himself he is capable so to do, as he has already provided a number of hogsheads, in order to relieve those that are sent with the commodities that are to be distilled, and as casks at present become a scarce article.

N. B. Said Manning proposes to distill at the moderate rate of one gallon of the spirit each barrel will produce when distilled.

STRAYED or stolen, on the 5th inst. from the subscriber at the Scotch Plains in Essex county, New-Jersey, a dark bay MARE and COLT, both have a small star in their foreheads; the mare is about 14 hands high, trots and paces; as does the colt. Whoever takes up said mare and colt, and secures them, so that the owner may get them again, shall have the above reward and reasonable charges.

JOHN WEBSTER, the 3d.

Sept. 7, 1778.

TAKEN from a British Doctor at Crosswicks, about the first of July last, a bay MARE, supposed to belong to a subject of the United States, about thirteen hands high, six or seven years old. She has been advertised before. The owner is desired to come prove his property, pay charges, and take her away.

WILLIAM RICHARDS,

Has removed his medicines, &c. from Reading to his store in Philadelphia, on the North side of Market-street, next door to the corner of Second-street, at the sign of the Spread Eagle, where he manufactures and sells the best velvet corks, and mustard; he gives seven pounds ten shillings per bushel for mustard seed, and twenty shillings per half peck. A good cork-cutter is wanted, and a man that understands making the G R Holland stone ware.

Said RICHARDS has at Lamberton, (one mile below Trenton) put his stores, wharf, and his schooner called the Lamberton Packet, in proper order for the reception of goods to and from Philadelphia, and for the accomodation of passengers.

BROKE into the pasture of the subscriber, innkeeper, in Morristown, on the 24th day of June last, a bay MARE, with an old saddle and part of a bridle on her, is about 14 hand and a half high, trots and paces, but mostly inclining to a pace; a large white streak in her face, branded with an H on her near thigh, but not easily perceived; shod before; supposed to be about six or seven years old. The owner is desired to prove his property, pay the charges, and take her away, otherwise she will be sold, as she has been advertised for a stray.

PETER IMLAY.

Sept. 2, 1778.

To the PRINTER of the NEW-JERSEY GAZETTE.

SIR,

SEVERAL essays have been published in your Gazette, and in other News-papers, calculated to prove the superior excellence of our independence to that of our subordination to Great-Britain. But as the lion told the man, who showed him the statute of a human figure with that of a lion at his feet, "that men were the only statuaries; and that if lions understood the art of carving images, they would represent the man prostrate before the lion" --- So I may venture to say that all those essays are the compositions of warm whigs, who are intoxicated with the imaginary charms of democracy; and that were the friends of government to handle the subject, they could easily shew its superiority to all our republican and levelling systems. This talk I have undertaken in a firm reliance of being allowed that freedom of sentiment to which, according to our professed ideas of liberty, every man seems to be clearly entitled --- I shall, therefore, without any apprehensions of exposing myself to a legal prosecution, and with the greatest decorum and impartiality, proceed to particularize some eminent advantages peculiar to the old government, of which we are most lamentably deprived by our independency and republicanism.

The most violent whig will not presume to deny that we have contracted an enormous debt by the present war; and though we are very able to pay it, (which our short-sighted politicians urge as an argument to alleviate the affliction) it is that very ability of ours which, in my opinion, enhances the misfortune; for as we are able to pay the debt, I am under great apprehensions we really shall pay it. But in this respect Great-Britain has evidently the advantage, because being utterly incapable of discharging her national arrears, it is certain she never will discharge them; and indeed her incapacity annihilates her obligation, it being an undisputed maxim in law, that no one is obliged to impossibilities. What renders her situation still more fortunate, and in which she differs from all other debtors in the world is, that she continues to have credit after being universally known to be insolvent. But who will trust America after she becomes bankrupt? Not even his most Christian Majesty himself. Would it not, therefore, have been infinitely better for us to have remained in subjection to a nation that can equip the most formidable fleets and armies on credit, and prosecute endless wars in every quarter of the globe, not only without any cash of her own, but without the least intention of repaying what she borrows from others for that purpose? The argument is conclusive.

Again, the Congress, notwithstanding our present exalted opinion of that respectable body, may in process of time, betray their trust, and sacrifice our liberties. --- But in this perfidious manner the House of commons cannot serve their constituents, because the people selling their voices to the members on election, the latter undoubtedly may, without the imputation of corruption, dispose of theirs to the ministry, to re-imburse themselves the expenditure; and the matter being thus understood by both parties, bribery in the representative cannot be considered as a violation of his duty. And as to their sacrificing the liberties of the people, it is manifest from the electors repeatedly chusing the most obsequious instruments of administration, that they really intend them to be thus obsequious; and that, saving to themselves the precious privilege of calling their king a fool, and his mother a w--re, (a privilege peculiar to Englishmen) the parliament may justly dispose of the remainder of their rights and liberties as they please. And indeed I cannot see how any people can have greater liberty than that of freely resigning all liberty whatsoever. It is therefore evident that the people of England can never be betrayed by parliament, nor wrongfully abridged of their liberty, except only by an express statute against libelling his majesty and his mother, (which, in consideration of the resignation aforesaid) is not likely to be ever passed. We, on the contrary, shall have reason to complain of a breach of trust, whenever our delegates in congress act in derogation of our rights, or deviate how minutely soever from the path of rectitude and integrity; which, from the imperfections incident to human nature, are undoubtedly possible events.

That the vulgar should be flattered by our muggletonian, tatterdemalion governments, is not to be wondered at, considering into what importance those whimsical raggamuffin constitutions have elevated the heretofore dispicable and insignificant mobility. But I am astonished that men of fashion and spirit should prefer our hotchpotch, oliverian, oligarchical anarchies, to the beautiful, the constitutional, the jure divino, and the heaven-descended monarchy of Britain. For pray how are the better sort amidst our universal levelism, to get into offices? During the halcyon days of royalty and loyalty, if a gentleman was only blessed with a handsome wife or daughter, or would take the trouble of informing the ministry of the disaffection of the colonies, suggesting at the same time the most proper measures for reducing them to parliamentary submission, (the inexhaustible source of all peace and felicity) he was instantly rewarded with some lucrative appointment, his own disqualifications and the maledictions of the rabble notwithstanding. But how is a gentleman of family, who is always entitled to a fortune, to be promoted to a post of profit, or station of eminence in these times of unsubordination and fifth monarchynism? Why, he must deport himself like a man of virtue and honor, (which abridges him of a thousand innocent liberties) and would in almost any other employment yield him ten times the amount of his emoluments. He must moreover pretend to be a patriot, and to love his country, and he must consequently be a hypocrite, and act under perpetual restraint, or he is detected and discarded with infamy. Besides, it is not only the smallness of our salaries, and the necessity of having an adequate degree of merit to get into office, (a condition never exacted by the generosity of monarchs) but the comparative scarcity of offices themselves, that must make every man of laudable ambition eternally regret our revolt from the mother country: For the present governments being manufactured by the populace, who have worked themselves into a persuasion of I know not what, of public weal and public virtue, and' the interest of one's country, it has been ridiculously imagined that there ought to be no more offices in a state than are absolutely requisite for what these deluded creatures call the benefit of the commonwealth. Under the old constitution, on the contrary, whenever the crown was graciously disposed to oblige a gentleman, (and the royal coffers at the happy juncture of princely munificence happened to shew rather too much of their bottoms) an office was instantly invented for the purpose; and both land and water, earth and sea should be ransacked, but his Majesty would create a Surveyor of Woods and a Sounder of Coasts. Thus every humble suitor who had a proper introduction was always sure of being genteely provided for, without either consulting a mob, or losing any time about the wild chimera of public utility.

The article of religion is another thing in which the British constitution has manifestly the advantage of ours. For notwithstanding our boasted generosity on that momentous subject, and all our pompous declarations of leaving every one at his option to chuse his own religion, our gentlemen of distinction are now obliged, in order to co-incide with the popular prejudice, to give some presumptive evidence of their being neither atheists nor deists. Whereas, in England, and indeed in America, before our unhappy defection, the belief in christianity as a qualification for any office was entirely out of the question; nor did any public personage, or gentleman of fashion, think himself under the least obligation to give any proof, even of his faith in the existence of a Deity, except only that of profanely swearing by his name. Nay, amidst all our parade of catholicism, it is well known that not a lady in the land, let her be as whiggish as the Congress itself, can now enjoy the liberty of conscience of wearing an innocent head-dress of three feet in altitude, without falling under the suspicion of being disaffected to independency, and perhaps exciting surmises still more indelicate and uncharitable. Nor can it be denied, that many truly conscientious persons have been roughly handled for only conveying intelligence to the British troops, and others for supplying them with a trifle of provisions, (according to scriptural precept of feeding our enemies) tho' they made the most solemn professions of their peaceable neutrality, and even of their friendly disposition to the United States, which is beyond all question downright persecution for conscience sake.

We have irretrievably lost, by our fatal revolt, another important advantage, I mean the late useful and uninterrupted influx of the British gallantry, and all the politeness of the Court of London. While we received our governors and other principal officers immediately from the fountain-head of high life and polish'd manners, it was impossible for us to degenerate into our primitive clownishness and rusticity. But these being now unfortunately excluded, we shall gradually reimmerge into plain hospitality, and downright honest sincerity; than which nothing can be more insipid to a man of breeding and politesse. Alas, how often shall we recall to mind those jovial and delicious hours, when our bucks experienced the inimitable conviviality, and our belles the not-to-be-told-of endearments of a *Dunmore*¹ and a Sparks!² And with respect to that unnecessary and rebellious innovation in the ancient and constitutional colour of the British military uniform, which Congress have wantonly transformed into all the multifarious discolorations of Joseph's coat; I pertest, were I a woman, I should instantly turn tory in revenge of the dismal prospect of our not having, by next Christmas, a single red-coat on the continent.

Our printers, I am confident, will universally join me in my lamentation over our unfortunate secession. These gentlemen, in conformity to the principles of our civil establishments, (probably indeed coincident with their own, but that renders foreign restraints not the less arbitrary or irksome) are cruelly restricted to plain truth and decency; while their brother-craftsmen in the enemy's lines, with the whole typographical fraternity on the constitutional island, are generously permitted to range uncontrolled thro' the boundless fields of imagination, and to exert all the powers of inventive genius in embellishing their publications with the marvellous; which has ever been deemed a capital beauty in composition, and affects the mind in the most agreeable manner, by its unexpected surprize and novelty.

Thus have I endeavoured to point out the most essential defects of our republican government, and have, in my humble opinion, offered sufficient reasons to induce every dispassionate American to wish for a speedy reconciliation with the parent state, consistent with that union of force, on which the safety of our common religion and liberty depends.

I ought, however, candidly to acknowledge that many gentlemen are of opinion that we have gained one very material advantage over Great-Britain by our separation from her, I mean that no persons employed by the States are mistrusted for imitating her example in speculation, and defrauding their country in any the departments committed to their management, and that all continental property is husbanded with the greatest economy; but this, without any predilection for Old England, I shrewdly suspect wants confirmation.

*An ESSAY upon the manufacture of INDIAN CORN STALKS, for the purpose of making Molasses, Sugar, and Spirits.*²

As the habit of using saccharine or sweetening substances, such as sugar, molasses and syrup, has become so common as to constitute a considerable part of our commerce, as well as of our sustenance, particularly for the female and more delicate part of the community, and from which the men in general would not willingly be exempt, if to be procured at a reasonable expence; this essay is intended to point out a method to such as may not before have been acquainted with it whereby we may serve ourselves with a substitute for those articles, equal, and in some respects superior in quality to what has been imported from the West-Indies, with this additional advantage, that a very considerable sum may be saved to the Continent, even from an article which has hitherto been considered as fit for nothing but the barnyard or stereorary;¹ and what is still more interesting to the real friends of freedom and mankind is, that it may be procured in considerable quantities without the service or assistance of slaves, which to a generous mind must render it abundantly more valuable. The subject from which it is to be procured is no other than the common Indian Corn Stalk.

Having accidentally heard that trials has been made with them in different ways, which seemed to afford encouragement for profitable success, I was induced the last fall to attempt the experiment myself; and as the price of foreign sweets continue extravagantly high, the season in which they may be procured at home now approaches, and as I have not yet seen any essay or directions on the subject, whereby many (who would probably enter into the matter whether from motives of patriotism or interest) are deprived of the opportunity of exerting themselves on the occasion; I am therefore induced, from my own inclinations, as well as the persuasion of divers others, to lay before the public the observations I have made, together with such instructions as I am at present able to furnish, and shall first begin with the mill for grinding the stalks.

When I made my experiments the last fall, I had not heard that any other machine had been used for the business except the common cyder mill; but considering the form and nature of the stalk, and the inconvenience that would attend grinding in the common mill, by their being so imperfectly crushed, as well as their absorbing or sucking up again a considerable part of the juice as they passed through the mill, and the disadvantage and loss that would attend pressing the stalks, considering the hardness of their texture, induced me to believe that a different plan must be preferable; I therefore employed a turner to make two smooth cylinders or rollers of good white oak, of the same diameter as my cyder mill, and which might fit my old cyder mill frame; this was all the additional work as to the grinding apparatus; I chose this frugal method for my first trial, as being attended with little expence, and for that reason, as well as those above-mentioned, would recommend the same conduct to the farmers in general, as the more simple and less expensive any new business is, the more likely it is to succeed; but if any person should incline to undertake it as a profitable employment, which I believe would answer well, especially for such as have children or small folk in their families, another might be added, and the whole plan executed upon a large scale; round the top of the short roller, and at the same height in the other, are fixed a set of cog teeth, about an inch and a half long, which should be so truly adapted to each other, as to work smoothly and without fretting, these teeth serving to force round the rollers in case of any great resistance, such as may arise from the hard joints of the stalks; let these rollers be fixed in the place of the common cyder nuts, with the usual simple apparatus, having a tub or trough underneath to receive the juice, and the machine is ready for grinding: In order to feed the mill more conveniently, let there be a sort of a trough, about five feet long (made like a cutting box for straw) with narrow strips of wood nailed horizontally across the small end of the box, so as to keep five or six, or as many stalks as the nuts will receive, separate one above the other, let this end of the box be set close to the mill, passing the stalks between the strips so that the rollers may catch them, observing to put the small ends first, and as fast as the mill draws them through replace them with others: Two persons are necessary to tend the mill, boys may do as well as men, one to feed it, and the other on the opposite side to receive the stalks, who should mind to keep them rather in an ascending than declining position as they pass out of the mill, in order to prevent them as much as possible from drawing away with them any part of the expressed juice: The stalks, when they have passed through the mill the first time, should be laid down as even as possible, with the small ends all one way, in order to their being passed through a second time, the hardness of the joints preventing the juice from being fully squeezed out at once; the rollers at first should be kept about a quarter of an inch asunder, but when the stalks are to be passed through again, they should be wedged up so as to touch each other, by which means they will squeeze the juice out so effectually as to leave the stalks nearly as dry as a chip, and by this method a much greater quantity of liquor may be procured, than can by the common method of grinding and pressing apples. — As to the season proper for cutting the stalks, there have been divers opinions, some think they should be cut and ground when quite green, having the ears plucked off when they first appear; and others, that they may be left 'till the usual time of gathering; but I apprehend neither of these to be the best. Upon the strength of the first opinion, I had a small piece of ground planted and ordered for that purpose, having the ears plucked off while young, but from the quantity of juice these afforded, am satisfied that the advantage by no means would be equal to the loss of the grain, or to the profit that may be obtained by letting the ears remain on for use, and cutting the stalks at the most suitable season; which, from the attention I have paid to the matter am convinced is about midway, between the state of well-grown roasting ears and that of full ripeness, or according to another criterion, when the stalk begins to change from green to yellow, about this time the stalk having finished the conveyance of all juices necessary for the perfection or maturity of the grain, which, though now not in so hard a state as when left longer on, yet I judge can receive no further addition of substance, or any other advantage, save that of gradually drying, the want of which is all the inconvenience that can attend gathering the corn at the time here proposed, which, however, may, in a great measure be remedied, by spreading the ears abroad in a dry airy place, or trying several ears together with part of the husk, and suspending them on poles something after the manner of tobacco, which last method might answer well in the southern provinces; or, perhaps, if laid in broad heaps and turned so as to prevent their heating, it might also answer; that corn gathered at this season, will (with sufficient air) keep sound and good through the year, I have proved by experiment; and whether there would be any loss, or at least worth regarding, I much doubt (especially if put in competition with the advantage otherwise gained.) However, this may be satisfactorily proved by measuring a certain quantity of each kind (in the ear) the ensuing fall, and then weighing them both carefully the next summer. When the stalks are fit to be taken, about fifteen or eighteen inches must be cut from the top, and the blades stripped off, which, when taken at this time, must make excellent food for cattle, and though not much attended to in some places, may amply compensate for the trouble of stripping and cutting; the nearer the ground the stalks are cut the better, as the lower joints are much the richest, and it will be well not to cut down more at a time than can be passed through the mill in two or three days, as they would suffer by laying long unground, so that the sooner they are used the better. The manner of feeding the mill has been already described, the next thing to be considered is the management of the juice, which should not be expressed in greater quantities than can be boiled down within two days at furthest, especially if the weather be warm, as it is apt to ferment and sour, which ruins it for the purpose of syrup. When there is such a quantity obtained as may suit the boiling vessels we are furnished with (those of copper or brass being best) the juice should be strained thro' a sieve or coarse cloth to separate any chips or small pieces of the stalk; it should then be placed over the fire, and boiled moderately as long as any scum arises, which must be carefully taken off, and set in a vessel apart; when it appears that the scum has done rising, the liquor must be taken off the fire, and set by to cool and settle without disturbance, and in a few hours will deposit a considerable sediment and become clear, after which it must be carefully poured over into another vessel, leaving all the sediment behind; this part of the process is particularly necessary to be observed, in order to obtain a neat clear syrup, as the fœces is not separated, but boiled down with the liquor, as hath been commonly the case with those who have done anything in this way, will render the syrup impure, and give it a disagreeable taste; this sediment may be put with the skimings, and both strained through a woolen bag made somewhat like a funnel, the first runnings whereof must be gently returned into the bag until the stream appears pretty clear, when it may be suffered to run 'till the whole is out, the strained liquor may then be put into the kettle and boiled with the rest, by which means scarce a drop will be lost. As to the time spent in boiling it will vary according to the quantity of liquor, and the heat given it, which must be continued till a syrup is obtained of about an eighth part of the quantity of juice first put in. As it has been observed by some that the syrup is attended with a slight acidity, this may be effectually prevented by putting about half a gill of strong lime water to a gallon of the juice while it boils, which will also promote the granulating of the sugar if intended to be made, which it no doubt may of very good quality, as there might also be obtained a very neat and elegant spirit if distilled, which I would recommend to the trial of the curious. As it may be satisfactory to some to know the quantity of juice that may be obtained from any given number of stalks, as well as the quantity of syrup from a certain quantity of the crude liquor, I may add that I have carefully tried them both, and found from several experiments made on stalks from several different places, that thirty-six well grown stalks yield better than a gallon of raw juice, and that a gallon of juice from a mill with two rollers turned by one horse, may be obtained in ten minutes time; and that a gallon of juice, when properly boiled down, will yield a pint of pleasant rich syrup, allowed by those who have tasted it to exceed in goodness any molasses imported from abroad.

If these remarks and directions are worthy of attention, and should prove a means of encouraging any to make similar experiments, or to improve upon those already made it will be a sufficient satisfaction to one who professes himself a friend to the public good, and to all useful improvements.

TRENTON, SEPTEMBER 16.

About a fortnight since was brought into Egg-harbour, a schooner from Jamaica, bound for New-York, laden with spirit. Also a schooner from Nantz, taken by a British cruizer, and retaken by an American privateer.

A brigantine directly from London bound for New-York, with a very valuable cargo on board, was brought into said port about the same time.

Tuesday the 13th of October next is the day fixed by the constitution, for holding the annual election in the several counties in this State, for chusing members of the Legislature.

Friday last came to town four Hessian deserters. They left Kingsbridge about 10 days ago, in company with a number of others.

Since our last a number of recruits, light-dragoons, passed thro' this place from Virginia and North-Carolina, being on their way to camp.

Died suddenly, on Monday night last, Mrs. ELIZABETH VAN COURT, the amiable Wife of Doctor MOSES VAN COURT, of this town, in the 22d year of her age. Her remains were yesterday decently interred at the Old Presbyterian Meeting-house,¹ on the Scotch Road, four miles from this place.

Saturday night last the fulling-mill belonging to Abraham Skirm near this town, was broke open and robbed of a number of dressed and undressed pieces of cloth. This atrocious villainy was perpetrated, it is supposed, by a certain Thomas Brooks, who belongs to and is a deserter from our army. He had been taken up and previously committed to gaol in this town for desertion, and on suspicion of his being a horse-thief, but found means to make his escape.

THE Trustees of New-Jersey College are requested to be punctual in attending their Annual Meeting at Princeton, the last Wednesday of this month, at 9 o'clock.

By order of the Board,

EIGHT DOLLARS REWARD.

WAS LOST, on the 12th day of this instant, in the afternoon, on the road between Allentown and Cross-wicks, a double Leather Pocket-Book with a Steal Clasp, containing a number of valuable writings, such as notes of hand, loan-office certificates and accounts; which would be of no use to any person beside the owner, with about nine dollars in money. Whoever finds the same, and will leave it with the Printer of this paper, or send it to the owner at Cross-wicks, shall have the above reward, paid by NASSAU-HALL, Princeton, N. Jersey, Aug. 21, 1778.

The Students of New-Jersey College, and all others concerned, are desired to take notice of the following particulars:

1. The members of the senior class of the year 1776, who were examined and approved in August that year, and performed their public exercises at Commencement in September following but did not receive their degrees, a quorum of the Trustees not being present, are hereby informed, That at a meeting of the Board at Cooper's Ferry,¹ in June 1777, they were formally admitted to their Bachelors degree of the standing of September 1776, and may have their diplomas when they please to call for them.

2. The senior scholars of the year 1777, who were examined and approved in August that year, were also admitted at the next meeting of the Trustees, (though there was no public Commencement) to their Bachelors degree, and may have their diplomas, bearing the proper date, when they apply for them.

3. Though the building has been occupied by the public, first as a barrack and afterwards as an hospital for sick and wounded soldiers, the teaching has been kept up since July last year agreeably to the advertisement then published, the President and Professor of Mathematics by turns, with the assistance of one tutor, taking charge of the few that attended who were boarded in the town and recited in the President's house; and it is hereby notified that there will be a public commencement on the last Wednesday of September,² when not only those who have attended constantly or occasionally, but those who have studied at home, provided they will submit to examination, shall be admitted, if qualified, to degrees according to their standing. Those who are entitled to take the Masters degree at this Commencement may, if they please, come prepared to perform a public exercise, either in Latin or English, as no orators have been chosen this year for that purpose from the uncertainty of their places of residence, and the difficulty of sending intelligence to them in the present state of the country.

¹ This meeting at Camden was probably the first and last time that the Board of Trustees of the College of New Jersey ever met outside of Princeton, under the pressure of war.

² Long vacation was held in the autumn. It was not until the middle of the nineteenth century that the "Long vacation" commenced in June.

4. Assurances have been given by the Director General of the hospital and other principal officers, that the sick are to be wholly removed in a few weeks. The College, therefore, will be repaired as speedily as possible, and the whole students may collect safely, and it is hoped be conveniently accommodated, at the usual time of beginning the winter session, viz. the 10th of November.

5. The Grammar school was begun agreeably to public notice last April and continues to be taught with care. Parents therefore may send their children without delay, as there will be no vacation of the school in the fall this season. The Public may be assured that the utmost care has been and will be taken in this school to lay the foundation well in a thorough knowledge of grammar and syntax; and it is earnestly recommended to other teachers, whose scholars are intended for Princeton College, to attend to this circumstance, and not hasten them on to the reading of difficult Greek and Latin authors while they have a very raw imperfect knowledge of the principles and structure of these languages.

For several years past great pains have been taken at Princeton to recommend and introduce an accurate knowledge of the English language. An attention to this also is requested of the teachers of Grammar schools, who, if they possess such knowledge themselves, may easily communicate it by occasional extemporary remarks on the idiom of the language in translating from Greek and Latin, and by periodical exercises in reading, spelling, writing and pronouncing orations, but above all by competition in such exercises on public days.

J. WITHERSPOON.

N. B. Board may be had at Princeton and in the neighbourhood on as easy terms as the present prices of provisions will admit.

New-York, September 21. Yesterday Afternoon a Sergeant and 6 Men were sent in by Col. Emmericks Dragoons. They were taken at Tuckeyhoo: one Harrison from Rockey-Hill was wounded.—New-York Gazette and Weekly Mercury, September 21, 1778.

Tears like the dew shall fall on the memory of Heroes.
In the action at Monmouth on the 28th of June last fell Lieutenant MACNAIR, of the Artillery, an officer who deserves the tears of his country. Born in North Britain, he came to America, and early embarked in the cause against the tyrant. He served as a private in the first campaign at Boston, and in the course of the war rose gradually through the intermediate offices from a private to a Lieutenant, without the least solicitation to obtain that promotion, and without the interest of one friend but what his merit gave him. He was humble in spirit, modest in manner, and steady in his conduct. His Captain, in a letter of the 25th of August from the Camp at White Plains, writes of him as follows. "I cannot help lamenting the death of so valuable an officer. He was cool, attentive to his duty, intrepid and brave, undisturbed in the hottest engagements, and commanded with the firmness and courage of a Roman. He was loved and esteemed by the officers, and loved and feared by the soldiers. He was humane and extremely charitable. He was possessed of the highest sense of liberty, and wished to establish the independence of his country. He had a warm sense of duty to God and lived regularly and religiously. In his life he was loved and esteemed, and in his death much lamented. He died fighting bravely for his country against slavery and tyranny. Not less than a cannon ball separated his noble soul from his body. It may be said of Britain what Solomon says of Sin. Many hath she cast down wounded, many strong men have been slain by her.

PERICLES.

—The Pennsylvania Packet, September 22, 1778.

WHEREAS a certain Timothy Flood parted with a mare some time in August last, to Mr. Gilpatrick, near Veal-town, from whom it is said he stole the said mare, and a few days afterwards, on the 25th of August aforesaid, came to the house of the subscriber, in Reading-town, Hunterdon county, and western division of New-Jersey, and again parted with the same creature. From said Flood's conduct, who is now confined in Millstone gaol, it is reasonable to suppose him not to be her proper owner when he first parted with her. Said mare is near 15 hands high, is a kind of dark sorrel mix'd with gray hairs, bald faced, four white feet, light coloured mane and tail, has neither brand or ear mark, paces and trots, but paces mostly, is about 10 years old. The owner is desired to take her away, after proving his property and paying charges.

GEORGE MERLATT.

The owner, by proving property and paying charges, may have her again, by applying to

Postmaster.

LAST night broke gaol in New-Brunswick, a certain Doctor JOHN HUNT, about 30 years of age, five feet 9 or 10 inches high, long black hair, thick, well set and very likely: Also a certain JOHN WARREN, about 23 of age, and about the same height as the former, very fair complexion and bold look, speaks quick and very impertinent: Also a certain JOHN BURROW, about 35 or 36 years of age, about five feet 5 or 6 inches high, swarthy complexion, short black hair, and lived near Bonan-town.¹ Whoever secures the above fellows, or either of them, in any gaol of the United States, and gives notice thereof, shall receive 60 Dollars for Hunt, 30 for Warren, and 20 for Burrow, and reasonable charges, paid by JOHN VANKIRK, Sheriff of Middlesex.

ALL the legatees of Thomas Olden late of Piscataway, deceased, are hereby notified to meet at Bound Brook, at the house of Daniel Blackford, on Tuesday, the 27th day of October next, in order to receive their dividend out of all such monies as can be by that time collected in; who are also required to ascertain the exact number of the legatees in the said estate. At which time and place due attendance will be given by

DANIEL BLACKFORD,
JOSEPH BLACKFORD, Executors.

Bridgewater, Sept. 16, 1778.

ALL persons indebted to the estate of JOSEPH SKELTON, Esq. deceased, by bond, note or book accounts, are desired to pay them off before the first day of April next; and those having any demands against said estate, are requested to bring in their accounts properly attested.

Pitts-Town, Sept. 16, 1778.

White house near Trenton.

STRAYED or stolen, out of the pasture of Samuel Henry, on the night of the 15th inst. September, a brown HORSE, four years old last spring, about 14 hands high, trots and paces, but the latter is most natural to him. Any person that will deliver the above described horse to the subscriber, at the White House, shall receive a reward of Eight Dollars, paid by GEORGE MILLER.

FOR SALE.

JOHN RAMSAY, at Bottle-Hill, (four miles from Morristown) intending soon to remove to Philadelphia, will dispose of the FARM on which he now lives, about thirty acres. It is remarkable for having two orchards of the best grafted fruits — of apples, pears, peaches, plumbs, cherries, mulberries, &c. a tolerable garden, kitchen adjoining the house, with a well of good water before the door, barn and other out-houses, &c.

A FARM adjoining the same, about sixty acres; having also two excellent orchards just in prime, a good well of water before the house door, and a barn, &c.

A FARM at a short distance, about ninety acres, with two large orchards, a good well at the house, two barns, a cyder-mill with two presses under cover which is constantly employed thro' the season, being handy to convey the cyder from thence to the still-house without carting.

Likewise (either with or without the farm) the same convenient still-house, with two stills and worms as good as new, one of 40, the other of 100 gallons, with hogsheads and cisterns to contain about 300 barrels; the worm tubs supplied with water from an upper spring with a gutter without the trouble of pumping; eighty or ninety barrels of cyder can be distilled weekly. It is well supplied every fruit season with as much as possibly can be distilled, and is now at work; it has every convenience for stilling of cyder or grain spirits.

The premises above-mentioned to be sold at private sale, and will be shewn by the owner at any time when called on. The purchaser of either place, by paying one-third of the value, may have any time that best suits to pay the balance.

He has also for sale, by the quantity, — Indigo, of the best quality; copperas; pepper; Geneva and apple spirit;

Irish linens; a good mare four years old, with a spring colt, and one or two good draft horses.

—The Pennsylvania Packet, September 29, 1778.

Mr. COLLINS,

IN taking a review of those pieces in your Gazette, which have a particular relation to the policy of New-Jersey, I found that T. W. was the friend, to whom the letter in your thirteenth number, was addressed, and not the author. I beg your readers to excuse my inadvertency. — In this review my attention was particularly attracted by the two essays of the Elector, in your 14th and 28th numbers; as also the remarks of a Whig on the sentiments and advice he gave his countrymen respecting offices somewhat lucrative to be given to gentlemen in legislative or executive authority within this State, on supposition that the Elector's sentiments were unjust and prejudicial to the State. Was the language this Whig makes use of, the best calculated to convince the Elector of his error, and to expose the dangerous tendency of his tenet to publick view? What could that gentleman have aimed at, in comparing this performance of the Elector to a mendicant brief? In so strongly expressing his suspicion of the author's veracity? The one declares he never had any post of honour, nor never expected any. The other cannot help thinking he is already a representative, or expects to be one at the next election, &c. Do you, Sir, intend the promotion of publick good by such prostitution of charity? Supposing it to be as you suspect, will that alter the nature of the thing? If it is just, equitable and beneficial to the community in its own nature and tendency, its being affirmed to be so by a representative or Justice of the Peace will not make it to the contrary. I heartily detest such treatment of authors and arguments; and am sorry to see a good subject thus abused. — I do assure the Whig, that I know not who is the author of the pieces signed an elector. (He is at his liberty, if virtue will permit him, to suspect my veracity.) If I, however, may be permitted to judge from the performances of both authors, I beg to be indulged with the full persuasion, that the Elector knew full as well that pro aris et focis was a metaphorical expression, and what the literal translation of it was, as the Whig his poetry; and that he slipt it in upon his readers with much more propriety, in the chain of his reasonings, than the Whig his criticisms.

Though I esteem many of the hints this author gives to those in authority, and to subjects, just, equitable, and proper; and hope they may be duly noticed and improved to valuable purposes: Yet, I must confess, I was sorry to see the one that Mr. Whig has animadverted upon, amongst the rest.

To deliver my sentiments with candor and sincerity on that subject, I must acknowledge that it does not appear unjust to me, to entrust the legislature with other offices. As those gentlemen are supposed (at least in the opinion of those who elect them) to be the wisest and most virtuous in the community, it seems just and prudent to entrust them with other the most important offices in the State. And it appears probable, that this has led our author to his hints on this head. — If this matter be, however, maturely considered, and traced in its natural tendency and consequences, I humbly conceive it will be found very impolittick and exceeding dangerous to the safety and well- being of the State. To make this evident, let the following particulars be considered :

1. The property of the community is entrusted in the custody of their representatives. If they should have the distributing of the lucrative offices among themselves, consequently the salaries annexed to them also ; which, in fact, would be saying, Friends take as much as ye need. Common prudence dictates our duty not to lay such powerful temptations before the most virtuous men, to whom such important trust is committed.

2. The offices in a state ought to be distributed in such a manner as would make it the interest of the individuals who bare them, to keep a jealous watch over each other, and so prove a spur to a faithful discharge of their duty. This proves the most powerful preservative against corruption ; and may always be effected, if these matters are properly regulated and directed. But such engrossing of officers by the legislature would have the directly contrary effect. It is obvious to every one, how natural it is to excuse a fault, if it may tend to promote our interest : And what wide door would this open for collusion and corruption ? For the same company to have the command of the publick's purse, and themselves become entitled to receive it.

Though reason dictates that the community should support its officers in a dignity becoming their different stations ; yet prudence directs, that they should not squander the publick money in support of luxury, or to give them an opportunity to amass estates for themselves and families. Besides, that this is betraying the trust reposed in them, it is the most powerful temptation for the worst of men to seek the offices from wicked principles, and with pernicious views ; and after obtained, to neglect their duty and abuse their power. If the misery and ruin of states are candidly traced in history, this will be found to be their genuine and universal source.

It thus appears from what has been observed on this subject, that the prohibition of the legislators enjoying any other office of profit in the constitution of New-Jersey, was founded in prudence, and calculated for the safety of the State. I have therefore been much surprized at some of the reasons the Elector gives in support of his opinion, viz. Lucrative offices are to be given as a reward or indemnification to legislators. Amazing error in politicks ! Why should other offices be more lucrative than the legislative ? Whence do lucrative offices derive their income ? Is it not from the community ? Why then this round-about way to reward our legislature ? Must they first add such salaries to those offices, as will reward them after they get them ? Be, perhaps one year a legislator, in order to obtain the office, and then decline, to improve the opportunity for lucre or gain by it. Must thus the door be opened for the State to maintain hundreds of such, by their lucrative offices ? — I desist !

I here also observe, that it would be prudence in our legislature to avoid giving offices of profit to their families. As it is natural for a parent to provide for a child, it exposes them in a degree to the same dangers, at least to the suspicion of their constituents.

Our community has never been sufficiently sensible to what danger they were exposed under the former government; where the King had the gift of all the offices, and the period of their assembly was seven years. The present drained and ruined state of Britain shows to what you are liable, even exclusive of all the tyrannick acts passed since 1763. I cordially congratulate you on your happy deliverance from such great and imminent danger. Heaven has now placed you in the possession of as many and valuable civil and religious privileges as ever a people enjoyed: A gracious reward for your patriotic defence of your lives, liberties and property. It is now become a matter of undoubted fact, that our savage enemy despairs of subjugating the free-born sons of America by force of arms. Their whole soul is now bent upon bribery, flattery and deceit; and their whole view is only to disarm us, and then to do with us what seemeth good in their eyes. Their present conduct has frequently brought me to recollect that of Philip the II^d, King of Spain. After he had carried ruin and destruction, unheard of murder and slaughter throughout the Dutch United Provinces, finding, however, that they collected strength and had become determined, he began to view his success as doubtful; and unable to prosecute the war to effect, he and his court bent themselves upon cunning and deceit. They proposed to the Dutch, by the Duke of Parma, the full enjoyment of all their liberties, privileges and franchises. Thereupon a treaty was set on foot and concluded. In this was granted to the States General whatever they demanded. And for the security of the Dutch, this treaty was not only signed and solemnly sworn to by the Duke, but also sent to Spain, and signed with the King's own hand, and it was called The eternal Edict. What was the consequence? Towns and fortresses were given up to the King's possession: And from that very moment their infernal plans were laid to renew their former practice, in perfect disregard of this solemn treaty. Immediately the war broke out again, and burnt with redoubled fury. The Dutch had to recover, at the expense of blood and treasure, what they had given up by this treaty. An event which the patriotick Prince of Orange had plainly foretold them, laying it down as a maxim, that crowned heads never look upon themselves as bound by any treaties with subjects they deem rebels, longer than they see an opportunity to revenge the pretended injury offered to their crown and dignity. — If America ever returns to a dependence on the crown of Great-Britain, I doubt not but she will have the same game to play, let the treaty be ever so plausible. An event which, I am persuaded, never shall happen, unless God intends it as the greatest of punishments for our manifold and aggregated national sins. It affords me a heartfelt pleasure to see that all the golden apples of the shadow of liberty and peace held forth by the Commissioners, treated by Americans with utter disdain; and that they remain determined not to part with their independence but at the hazard of their lives and fortunes. Let the briber, Governor Johnstone, resign; let him gratify himself in his phantom, that great numbers among us are thirsting for such a peace: I, however, rejoice in being fully assured that there are none among Johnstone's number, no, not even in those parts which have most severely felt their galling yoke, and remain most exposed to the fury of their resentment, but only such as throughout the whole course of this contest proved to be either dastardly cowards, or abandoned traitors: And so will every friend to his country regard the man, that dare open his mouth in favour of such a peace.

While Heaven has thus far smiled upon our just exertions in self-defence, what solemn obligations are incumbent on us to improve our advantages therefrom accruing to us, for the good of society and the glory of the Allwise, Supreme Disposer of human events? Here is afforded me an opportunity of offering some important hints to my fellow-citizens; perhaps future time may afford me more leisure, or an abler hand undertake it, which will afford me the greatest pleasure. I cannot, however, avoid offering a few.

First to you, the Honourable the Legislature of this State. Consider, Gentlemen, what an important office you fill. You are the representatives of a free people. To you they have entrusted their purses, the defence of their lives, and their dear-bought liberty. To you they look up for wholesome laws. To you they have entrusted the appointment of civil and military officers; and to you they have made them responsible. O! what glorious opportunities are put into your hands, to promote the happiness of this people. In the dark ages of paganism, a Lycurgus has taught the Spartans, and a Solon the Athenians, what incomparable benefit wise, judicious, and honest legislators may be to society. It is then undoubtedly your duty, privilege and advantage to study and enact laws, not only just in their nature, but also calculated for the benefit, advantage and safety of the State---To take effectual care that the laws are duly executed. Let laws be ever so wholesome, what good will they promote, if not executed? Such neglect is to the State, as the cancer or consumption to the human body; it sucks the vitals, destroys the vigor, produces a languour in the whole system, and finally causes death. Every Justice, every Judge ought to be noticed by the members of the legislature; also the Attorney-General. He is now a servant of the State by your appointment. That important post is entrusted to him, not for his private emolument, but for the good of the community. Your duty demands that you take effectual care that the mulets, which the laws demand, and ought to go in the coffers of the State to alleviate the taxes, be not applied to his own use, by compounding with the guilty, and so screening them from public justice, &c. as has been too much the case under the former government. To you, your constituents look up for the punishment of neglect of duty, or mal-administration. You know where our constitution has lodged that power. Surely your enacting laws is with a view that they should be executed. Fear not the frowns of a negligent or wicked officer. Depend upon having the approbation of God, and the most virtuous part of the community, and also their support, in the most vigorous discharge of your duty. A few examples will be sufficient to teach others their duty.

Permit me also, my fellow-citizens, to address a few hints to you, especially at this time, when your annual election is at hand.¹ I entreat you to consider how much your welfare upon a proper and judicious choice. Only recollect that your property, lives and liberties are to be committed to the custody and disposal of the persons you are about to elect: Therefore do not indolently leave to others to chuse for you. Go, see and hear, and act from noble principles. Be not influenced in your votes by the gaudy appearances of riches, or bribery. Be not swayed by friendships, consanguinity or self-interest, but only by the following motives:

1. The constitution of New-Jersey justly restricts your votes to persons professing a belief in the faith of any protestant sect. If the person be otherwise properly qualified, no distinction of protestant denominations ought to influence electors. Whatever denomination of protestants he professes to be of, let him not show by his conduct that he makes religion an engine of state. If he makes not practice of paying homage to the Divine Being, in attending upon publick worship, (which all protestant denominations profess) believe him to be an atheist, or at best, a deist in disguise: For Jews, papists, mahometans and pagans, as well as protestants, profess and practise a publick worship of the Deity. Also those who discover a disposition and inclination to luxury, gaming, drunkenness, extortion, profane swearing, and such like vices, which prove the bane as well of civil as of religious society. Persons of such a character seem to endeavour to betray and deceive their God and the interest of society. And are such fit persons to commit your dearest concerns to? If they really believed a future state of punishments and rewards, would it not influence their own conduct? But their practice shows it does not. What then will influence them, to make them faithful in the important trust you repose in them? All the sacred obligations of oaths and virtue can have no influence on such abandoned minds. As their sensuality and self-interests are chief in their view, so will they most powerfully operate upon the whole of their conduct.

2. Let the past conduct of those who have heretofore, or do now represent you, determine your vote respecting them. Acquaint yourselves, as much as possible, with their legislative character. Carefully peruse the minutes of their proceedings. (I am sorry to say, that from some cause, undoubtedly known to our honourable legislature, those have been published so late, as almost to prevent electors this opportunity.) Those published may serve respecting some. Take notice of their yeas and nays. A few you will find in every proposed case, on the nay side. You have great reason to suspect this proceeds from a temporizing principle. Only consider, it will afford as good a plea to compromise matters with the enemy, to have it in their power to shew by their records that they have opposed all business, as any whatever. It is matter of amazement to me, that true friends to their country, in countries which have suffered much, have not noticed this before now.

3. Let the known and approved abilities and patriotism of the person principally sway you. Those that have faithfully served you to the best of their abilities, deserve your grateful acknowledgments, notwithstanding imperfections attending their endeavours, which flow from natural inability or human frailty. Let your choice be directed to men who show to the world, they are determined to rise or sink with their country — who have embarked their all in this vessel of the state, as independent. Friends and countrymen, the time at this juncture will probably be as trying to your representatives as any we have had; therefore be cautious; be zealous, and determined in pursuing your duty. — May kind Heaven direct you, and preserve this distressed country farther in a perilous day, is the cordial wish and prayer of your friend and well-wisher!

A TRUE PATRIOT.

In CONGRESS September 17. 1778

ORDERED that One Million of Dollars be advanced to General Mifflin, late Quarter-Master General, for which he is to be accountable: and that he be directed to render an account of all such sums as are now due from the late Quarter-Master General, in order to their being paid.

Extracted from the Minutes

CHARLES THOMPSON, Secretary.

In pursuance of the foregoing order of Congress the Deputy Quarter-Masters, under mentioned, are appointed to settle and pay the accounts of the Districts, respectively annexed to their names. So soon as the cash is received from the Public Treasury it shall be paid to the Deputys for that purpose; of which proper notice will be given them to their several Districts.¹

TRENTON, SEPTEMBER 30.

“On Saturday the 12th instant, was married at Phils-Hill, the seat of Philip Van Horne, Esq. by the Rev. Mr. Beach, STEPHEN MOYLAN, Esq. Colonel-Commandant of the American Light Dragoons, to Miss MARY RICKETTS VAN HORNE, eldest daughter of Colonel Van Horne: A Lady possessed of every accomplishment to render the marriage state happy."

We hear that Ezekiel Forman, who was under sentence of death on a conviction for high-treason, is pardoned on condition of his leaving this State in two months, and the United States in six months, from the date of his pardon, and never returning again into any of them.

His Excellency the Governor has been pleased to appoint a Court of Oyer and Terminer and General Gaol Delivery, to be held in the county of Gloucester on Tuesday the seventeenth day of November, and in the county of Salem on Monday the thirtieth day of November next; in the county of Cumberland on Friday the eleventh day of December, and in the county of Cape May on Monday the twenty-first day of December next.

We are informed that on Friday the 18th instant, two armed ships and two brigs, belonging to the enemy, came to anchor close to the bar off Tom's River Inlet, where they lay all night, and next morning between seven and eight o'clock, they sent into the inlet seven armed boats with between 20 and 30 men in each, who retook the ship Washington, formerly called the Love and Unity, and two sloops which were near the bar, with most of their crews. The Captain of the ship, his Mate, Boatswain, and three sailors, made their escape in one of the sloop's boats. Soon after they got ashore, a certain Robert M'Mullen, (who some time since was condemned with William Dillon to be hanged for burglary in Monmouth, and both having been reprieved, the former entered himself aboard of this ship) took the boat and made off to the enemy, huzzaing as he went. Dillon, who also joined them some time before, was supposed to pilot the British vessels into the inlet.

On the 18th inst. died at Mount-Holly after a long and painful illness, HENRY PAXSON, Esq. in the 60th year of his age. Next day his remains were interred in Friends burial-ground at that place, attended by a large concourse of people of all denominations.

We hear that John M'Kinley, Esq. late President of the Delaware State, was lately exchanged for W. Franklin, Esq. formerly Governor of this State.

Tuesday se'nnight about 3000 of the enemy from New-York landed near Hackensack, where they are plundering the country of forage, &c. To facilitate this business, they have sent a number of vessels up Hackinsack and Passaic Rivers to carry off the plunder; but from the great body of the militia ordered out, and now collecting with all possible dispatch, to reinforce General Maxwell, there is good reason to believe these freebooters will, ere long, be driven to the place from whence they came.

We have this moment learned, that the enemy at Hackinsack are commanded by Gen. Clinton, and that their numbers are daily increasing by troops sent from New-York. As a party of them are bending their course north-eastward, and having sent a number of their ships up the North river, it is apprehended their plan is to cut off the communication between the Southern and Eastern states. --- In this we hope they will be disappointed.

New-York, October 3. An account of the Action at Tappan, Sunday night, the 27th ult.¹

The Second Battalion of Light-Infantry led the Column, supported by the 2d of Grenadiers, with the 33d and 64th Regiments; these, commanded by Major-General Gray, marched from the New-Bridge at nine o'clock on Sunday Evening, and between One and Two in the Morning arrived at the Rebel Cantonments; Major Straubenzie had been detached with Six Companies of the same Battalion of Light-Infantry, the other Six under the Honourable-Major Maitland, Kept the Road, by which Manceuvres the Enemy's Patroll, consisting of a Sergeant and about a Dozen Men, was entirely cut off. Major Straubenzie moved on with the 71st Light Company, and in a Small Village surprised a Party of Virginia Cavalry, stiled Mrs Washington's Guards, consisting of more than an Hundred, commanded by Lieut.-Col. Baylor, who, with Major M'Leod, and two other Officers; upon forcing the Door of an House, attempted to get up a large Dutch Chimney; the Two former were mortally wounded, the Third killed, and the Fourth made prisoner; from hence a Part of Sir

James Baird's Company was detached to a barn where 16 Privates were lodged, who discharged 10 or 12 Pistols, and striking at the Troops sans effet with their Broad Swords, Nine of them were instantly bayoneted and seven received quarter. ---- Major Maitland's Force coming up at that Time attacked the Remainder of the Rebel Detachment, lodged in several other Barns, with such Alertness as prevented all but three Privates from making their Escape. The Troops lay on their Arms till Break of Day, when, moving forward, the Light-Infantry fell in with a Volunteer Company of Militia in a very Thick Wood and Swamp, these gave one Fire, which the 40th Company, commanded by Capt Montgomery, returned, and drove them off, leaving 6 Dead, but afterwards scampering across the Road, in Front of a Company of Grenadiers, three more were killed by them. The Light Infantry, in pursuing them, up to Tapan, where they were INTIRELY dispersed, took Five Prisoners, all of them wounded. The whole Loss on this Occasion was one Private of 2d Battalion Light-Infantry killed.

Upon entering the above mentioned house one of the Rebel Officers demanded the Name of the Corps which had attacked them, was answered, "the British Light-Infantry," on which he exclaimed, ---- Then we shall be all cut off.

New-York, October 5. A sloop with Tobacco, Prize to the Amazon's Tender, was retaken by a Privateer, and carried into Egg-Harbour last Tuesday.

By a person who lately left Virginia we learn that General Arnold¹ was very busy in raising Troops to send to Jersey, in order to repel the British Army; that the Militia of Jersey was collecting very fast, there being in and about Elizabeth-Town and Woodbridge not less than 2000 Men, under the Command of Gen. Maxwell.

General Washington, with his Army, we hear crossed the North-River, near Dobb's Ferry, into New-Jersey, last Saturday; and the Day before a large Body of Militia, and some continental Troops, marched from Woodbridge, Elizabeth-Town, &c. under the Command of the Generals Maxwell and Heard, for Hackinsack.

Among the Rebel Prisoners lately taken in New-Jersey, and brought here, is a Major Van Beuren, from Albany, who is well known by many respectable Refugees now here, for his Activity in apprehending and imprisoning the Loyalists. He was Master of the Ceremony at the Declaration of Independence in Albany; at the Close of that Day, he conducted with great Pomp, the burning of the King's Arms, formerly deposited as an Ornament in the Court-Hall, and expressed monstrous Indignity on that Occasion, against the King and his Friends: In short, he has been instrumental to many Acts of Tyranny and Oppression to the King's Friends; as a Reward for his meritorious Deeds — to encourage the Spirit of Rebellion, and to discourage that of Loyalty, and on the Principle to return Good for Evil, perhaps some pretended Friend to Government may intercede for his Release.—New-York Gazette and Weekly Mercury, October 5, 1778.

We hear young Mr. Bogart son of Nicholas Bogart, merchant, of New York, was a few days ago inhumanly killed by the enemy in New-Jersey.—The Pennsylvania Packet, October 6, 1778.

TO THE PUBLIC.

As our domestic enemies now despair of succeeding against the liberties of their country by the power of Britain, they are going to change their ground, and endeavor by secret sap to undermine the foundation of our constitution. Apprehending a day of vengeance when the enemy shall have quitted the country, they are preparing to avert the punishment due to their crimes by a new arrangement in the Legislature of the State, which they mean shall be composed of your half-tories, your moderate men, and your nothings at all; and from which every spirited whig is to be excluded. Such Legislatures are expected to appoint, and doubtless would appoint, officers of the same cast, and thus these gentry will not only be exempted from the just indignation of their country for their adherence to the cause of the enemy, but in a short time engross the whole direction of our public affairs. To facilitate the execution of this project, they are already endeavouring by various calumnies to asperse the characters of the most active whigs in every department. But it is hoped our honest citizens will not suffer themselves to be thus imposed upon to endanger the vessel of the commonwealth, now to all appearances so near the haven of safety; nor to requite with ingratitude those to whose labours and exertions, during the storm, we are under so great obligations for our deliverance.

That the leading tories have concerted such a plan, there are too many concurrent reasons to entertain any doubt; and to disappoint their devices, is the indispensable duty of every real friend to his country to appear at the ensuing election, and exert himself as for his political salvation, to prevent those miscreants from sowing their tares among the wheat.

PUBLICOLA.

Mr. COLLINS,

As our annual election is coming on, please to give the Twentieth Section of our excellent Constitution a place in your next Gazette; for it cannot be too often read, or be made too public.

Sect. XX. "That the legislative department of this Colony may, as much as possible, be preserved from all suspicion of corruption, none of the Judges of the Supreme or other Courts, Sheriffs, or any other person or persons possessed of any post of profit under the government, other than Justices of the Peace, shall be entitled to a seat in Assembly; but that, on his being elected and taking his seat, his office or post shall be considered as vacant."

How often has our Legislature broken this barrier against corruption?¹ I shall only remind them of an Attorney-General, a Judge of the Supreme Court, Judge of the Court of Admiralty, a Clerk of a County, and several Loan Officers have been permitted to hold their seats without the least objection. 'Tis true those who have had several appointments by the Legislature have declined the next election. But is this keeping the legislative department as free as possible from all suspicion of corruption?—Cæsar's wife was not only to be virtuous, but she was to be free from all suspicion.—I expect to be treated by those interested, as Lord North's battalion, in the English Parliament, treats the reasoning of a Burke, a Barré, a Wilkes, and a Luttrell, that is give it a hearing. Although I allow that Lord North's battalion is the best disciplined of any in the world, yet we have some apt Scholars in this State as well as in Pennsylvania, and perhaps the same absurd and cruel reason given, to wit, the depreciation of the Bills of Credit. Was ever paper money emitted in the universe on better security? Never. Why then is it not secured from depreciation by the several Legislatures of the United States?

"But where interest fortifies an argument,

"Weak reason serves to gain the will's assent;

"For souls already warp'd receive an easy bent."

You shall hear from me again occasionally.

A JERSEY FARMER.

TRENTON, OCTOBER 7.

On the morning of the 27th of September General Maxwell received intelligence that General Clinton had come from New-York to Staten-Island the evening before—That a large body of the enemy were lying on their arms on the Island—That a number of armed vessels and flat-bottomed boats were collected; and that it was expected they would land at Elizabeth-Point, at 11 o'clock. At half past ten they appeared in sight, standing for Crane's ferry, with 11 or 12 sail of brigs, sloops, and gallies, and their flat boats behind. The weather being hazy, and the General not able to see their rear, supposed them to be coming in force, and therefore ordered the alarm guns and signals to be fired. The militia turned out—the General with his brigade marched down with his usual spirit to meet them. But they turned about and went up to Newark bay, and thence up Hackinsack river. The enemy have some days past desolated the county of Bergen as far as their power extended---- They have thrown up some works on the other side of the New-Bridge beyond Hackinsack.

The same day General Winds, of our militia, marched from Acquackanonk to Hackinsack with upwards of 1000 men in high spirits, and more were following. General Heard, our other Brigadier, was the evening before with four regiments at the Short-Hills above Woodbridge.

General Winds has since been as far as Hackinsack, and had parties out to the New-Bridge. He has offered the enemy battle but they declined it. They have sent near 100 small vessels up the bay to Hackinsack, such as sloops, shallops, row-gallies, and flat-bottomed boats, for the purpose, as it is supposed, of bringing off their plunder.

In the night of the 28th, they began a smart firing from their vessels, with small cannon or large swivels, at Dehart's Point, near Elizabeth-Town, upon our sentries, but hurt not a man --- Our people briskly returned it, and supposed by the bawling of the enemy that some were wounded.

We hear Col. Baylor's regiment of horse, having taken post the beginning of last week at or near Old Tappan, were surprized in the night by means of a tory giving the enemy information, and who conducted them along bye roads into the rear and between our out-centries. These horrible murderers consisted of two regiments of British light-infantry, a regiment and two troops of horse --- who made a joint attack, the British officers ordering their men to "give no quarter to the rebels." Our cavalry being in a situation which did not admit of a successful defence, a considerable part of the regiment unavoidably fell a sacrifice to those cruel and merciless men: Several of our soldiers were murdered after they had surrendered. Col. Baylor, Major Clough, and Dr. Evans, were dangerously wounded, taken prisoners, and left on parole; the Major, we hear, has since died of his wounds; 20 others were killed on the spot, the like number left for dead, and near 30 wounded and taken off by the enemy.

A gentleman from Morristown reports, that on Tuesday last a small detachment of our cavalry, on the other side the North-River, commanded by --- Butler, surprised a party of the enemy's horse, killed 15 of their men in the skirmish, took 14 prisoners and 20 horses, without any loss on our side.

The same Gentleman informs us, that Major General Lord Stirling, with a formidable body of the American army, crossed the North-River a few days ago, in order to chastize the plundering herd from New-York, under the command of Gen. Clinton. --- General Maxwell, with his brigade, has also marched to co-operate with his Lordship's detachment.

We hear that a Packet has arrived at New-York with the August Mail, which contains such dispatches for the Commander in Chief, as have given the tories and refugees great uneasiness. It is said New-York is shortly to be evacuated, and that those gentry are petitioning for a garrison to be left there; promising to do duty as soldiers, and to give the garrison every assistance in their power. The day of their distress seems to be hastening fast upon them.

We have just received information that ten regiments of the enemy have received orders to embark at New-York for the West-Indies.

In the night of the 29th Sept. Governor Livingston received intelligence of the enemy's intentions to attack Egg-Harbour, and at three o'clock in the morning called a Council, and took measures to defeat their enterprize.

General Count PULASKI, with his Legion of Horse and Foot, arrived here on Sunday last from Pennsylvania. Monday evening the General received intelligence that the enemy were about to make a descent upon Egg-Harbour, and yesterday morning he marched for that place with all his troops, in high spirits and with alacrity.

"To the unspeakable loss of a much bereaved and mourning Husband and Children, died, of a tedious sickness, on the 27th ult. in the morning, Mrs. CHRISTIAN STELLE, the very amiable and much lamented Wife of the Rev. ISAAC STELLE, at Piscataway in East-Jersey, in the fifty-fifth year of her age. Her remains were the next day decently interred in the publick burying-ground in the town aforesaid. On which occasion a very applicable sermon was preached the same day, on Ezek. xxiv. 16, by the Rev. BENJAMIN MILLER. She was a most obliging wife, a very tender-hearted mother, and a peaceable neighbour. In a word, such were her moral virtues, that wide room is left for liberal minds to enlarge on the subject. She made an early profession of Jesus Christ, and adorned the same with a becoming life; and in her last hours manifested a freedom to bid farewell to all things here below."

By virtue of an Act of the Legislature of this state, passed at Princeton, the 16th day of September last, the Supreme Court in future are to be held at Hillsborough, in the county of Somerset, on the first Tuesdays in April and September; and at Burlington on the second Tuesdays in May and November annually. And all writs returnable to the next term, are to be tested at Crosswicks on the 16th day of May, 1778.

* * * The sheriffs of the several counties are requested to furnish the Printer, as early as may be, with the names of the gentlemen who shall be returned at the annual Election, on Tuesday next, to represent this state in Council and General Assembly.

BY HIS EXCELLENCY

WILLIAM LIVINGSTON, Esquire

Governor, Captain-General and Commander in Chief in and over the State of New-Jersey, and territories thereunto belonging, Chancellor and Ordinary in the same.

A PROCLAMATION.

WHEREAS it has been represented to me, That a Number of Persons in the County of Monmouth, and particularly those hereinafter mentioned, have committed divers Robberies, Violences and Depredations on the Persons and Property of the Inhabitants there of, and in order to screen themselves from Justice, secrete themselves in the said county: I HAVE, therefore, thought proper, by and with the Advice of the Council of this State, to issue this Proclamation, hereby promising the Rewards herein mentioned to any Person or Persons who shall apprehend and secure, in any Gaol of this State, the following Persons or Offenders, to wit: For JACOB FAGAN¹ and STEPHEN EMMONS, alias BURKE,² Five Hundred Dollars each; and for SAMUEL WRIGHT, late of Shrewsbury, WILLIAM VANNOTE, JACOB VANNOTE, JONATHAN BURDGE and ELIJAH GROOM,³ One Hundred Dollars each. And all Judges, Justices of the Peace and other Officers or Ministers of Justice, and all other the Subjects of this State are hereby required to be aiding and assisting in the Apprehension of the above Offenders, as they tender the Welfare of their Country and are ambitious of signalizing themselves in the glorious cause of Liberty and Virtue.

Given under my Hand and Seal at Arms, in Princeton, the fifth Day of October, in the Year of our Lord One Thousand Seven Hundred and Seventy-eight.

*By His Excellency's Command,
BOWES REED, Dep. Sec.*

² Stephen Emmons, alias Burke, was killed in January, 1779, by Captain Benjamin Dennis, who had been active in the death of Fagan. Emmons was famous as a "Pine Robber."

³ The Vannotes, Burdge and Groom were also members of the freebooters fraternity in the old county of Monmouth. Many who were implicated in these crimes were men of respectable families, and some were highly connected with the plantation-owning aristocracy of that section of New Jersey. Of so atrocious a character were the crimes of the "Pine Robbers" that even those in New York, who were keenest to palliate massacre and robbery, when done for the Tory cause, refused to offer excuses for the atrocities committed in the county of Monmouth.

ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS REWARD.

BROKE out of Trenton gaol last night, the two following villains, viz. CHRISTOPHER LOOP, about six feet high, black straight hair, swarthy complexion, and is a down looking fellow, resembles an Indian, and is very much pitted with small-pox; he is about 20 years old. Also PHILIP BEVEN, about five feet six or seven inches high, short hair and full faced, a down looking fellow, very much pitted with small-pox, has a sear on the right side of his nose, and is about 21 years old. It is needless to describe their cloaths, as they will probably change them. Whoever takes up the said villains, shall have Fifty Dollars for each, paid by

POSTSCRIPT.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 10. Extract of a letter from Springfield, New-Jersey, dated Oct. 6, 1778.

“Since I came home, I snatched a moment to give you a small account of the enemy’s proceedings, and now I take another. They possess the ground between the North and Hackinsack rivers, near the half of Bergen county, which they were very busy stripping. Upwards of one hundred vessels, some pretty large, went up to bring off their forage; several have returned, of these we have burnt four; these were loaded with forage and the petticoats of old women. The hay was pressed, and stalls made, and to appearance ready to put directly to sea. Yesterday they crossed Hackinsack river, and possessed the heights on the east of Passaick river, driving and carrying off with great industry till near night, when they returned into their old quarters over Hackinsack. Which way they intend to stretch their course next is uncertain. Great preparations were made at Staten island to invade us at Elizabeth town and Woodbridge, and Vaughan, the fire brand who has the command on the island, swears by the Eternal God, he will burn every house in Elizabeth town. Our comfort is that he as well as other devils has his chain, beyond this he cannot go. Our militia here seem to manifest their usual spirit. The distance of our grand army leaves us indeed much exposed; but if we are invaded, we are determined to yield our country but by inches, and to sell every inch slow and dear."

By accounts from Little Egg Harbour, we learn that on Tuesday afternoon the enemy landed about four or five hundred men out of the sloops and rowgallies, which they had brought up Little Egg Harbour river as far as capt. Pain's house, which they burnt with several vessels scuttled in that part of the river, the owners not having time to move them higher up. And it is thought they would have gone up to the Forks, in order to destroy the vessels there, if they had not discovered that col. Proctor, with his artillery, had taken possession of an important post upon the river betwixt them and that place; and on Wednesday evening, they embarked in great hurry and confusion, upon hearing that some American reinforcements were arrived. On Thursday morning the Continental forces, consisting of col. Proctor's artillery, Polaski's legion, and New-Jersey militia, were upon their march to Great Egg Harbour, at which place it was expected the enemy would attempt to land. None of the stores, public or private, were destroyed, being moved at the first of the alarm, and capt. Pain had fortunately carried off his stock and household furniture. The Philadelphia militia, on Thursday noon; were within sixteen miles of Little Egg Harbour, in high spirits.—The Pennsylvania Evening Post, October 9, 1778.

“Virtuous woman is never solicitous to resound her chastity, although she feels a proper degree of resentment at being called a Whore even by implication.”

MR. DUNLAP,

I HAVE very little faith in dreams, but whenever those unaccountable visions of the night make such strong impressions upon the sensorium as to leave whole pages of what I dreamt I had read or heard, it is my practice to commit them to writing early in the morning, and at my leisure to remark the difference between my sleeping and waking vagaries. I am an old man, and have been thought a good friend to American Liberty, but too insignificant to be called on to carry a musket. I amuse myself with reading newspapers, conversing with my neighbours about the times, applauding the young fellows who turn out cheerfully against the common enemy, and encouraging such as appear a little timid.

I was last night under my pipe reading your packet of the 10th of September, some parts of which led me into deep reflection, and while I was taking a general view of public affairs, the conduct of each of the United States, and of their representatives in Congress, I felt asleep.

In this state of freedom from the cares of the world, a little fairy maid, ten thousand times handsomer than any Tory Lady in Philadelphia with her top-gallant-royal comode,¹ stood at the foot of my oaken elbow chair, delivered me a paper containing the identical words here-under written. She dropt a curtesy, said, "Old man, Virtue is its own reward," and vanished.

"FACTS."

"The largest return of the army commanded by Major-General Sullivan in his late attempt against Rhode-Island, amounted to ten thousand men; the Militia of the Eastern States who had joined him could not therefore exceed five thousand.

"The firing of a tar barrel and the discharge of a cannon collected instantly four thousand of the New Jersey Militia, who joined and co-operated with the army under His Excellency General Washington in his pursuit of the enemy through that State—and—N. B. this was in the time of harvest.

"The Eastern Volunteers, who composed about one moiety of General Sullivan's army, took occasion to return home before the General's retreat, leaving him and the other moiety of troops on the island.

"The Jersey Militia continued with General Washington till the enemy was routed, and their assistance no longer necessary.

"General Sullivan seems to complain a little of the Eastern Militia going off and reducing his army to little more than the amount of those of the enemy.

"General Washington declares his deep sense of the ser“vices of the New Jersey Militia in opposing the enemy

 “in their march from Philadelphia, and for the aid which “they had given him in harrassing and impeding their mo- “tions, so as to gain time for his troops to come up with “them.”

“Congress by their resolves of the tenth ult. declared “their high sense of the patriotic exertions made by the
 “Island.

“BUT,

“By no resolve have Congress ever manifested any sense
 “of the patriotic exertions of the State of New-Jersey, “whose Militia have twice put to the route nearly the “whole army of the enemy in their marches through that “State.”——

I had finished reading this paper, and was entering upon reflections in order to reconcile the conduct of Congress from a persuasion that they never wilfully err, when my pipe dropped out of my hand; the clattering upon the floor startled and awoke me.

Now I am awake, let me, Mr. Printer, say what I should probably have dreamt had not the breaking pipe disturbed me.

From the sentiment which I entertain of the wisdom of Congress, I am perfectly satisfied the partiality implied in the fairy tale did not arise from a predilection in that august body to any particular State or States, but from mere inadvertency — Inadvertence, howbeit the common failing of human nature, should not too often appear in the acts of those who are appointed guardians of an infant empire and with the most profound respect for the FREE CHOICE OF THE PEOPLE, I claim the liberty of the press to inform them that all their proceeding in and out of doors are inspected by

TRENTON, OCTOBER 14.

Thursday last the General Assembly of this State adjourned. During their sitting they passed twelve acts, the titles of which are not yet received.

About ten days ago Jacob Fagan, who having previously headed a number of villains in Monmouth county, that had committed divers robberies, and were the terror of travellers, was shot. Since which his body has been gibbeted on the publick high-way in that county, to deter others from perpetrating the like detestable crimes.

BOWES REED, Esq. is appointed Secretary of this State, in the room of CHARLES PETIT, Esq. who has resigned.

Since our last several British deserters came to town from the enemy at Hackinsack.

We hear that on Wednesday last the enemy left Egg-Harbour, after having destroyed a number of vessels, and several houses belonging to Gentlemen who have distinguished themselves by their attachment to the American cause. They have, it is said, bent their course towards Tom's River, in order to destroy our salt works.

Among the officers who fell into the hands of the enemy in Col. Baylor's late disaster, at Old Tappan, were Captain Swan, Doctor Evans, junior surgeon, Lieut. Randolph, and three Cornets. Capt. Stith being suddenly surrounded by the enemy's horse and foot, and seeing no probable way of getting off, called out for quarter; but they, contrary to the rules of war and to every sentiment of humanity, refused his request, called him a damn'd rebel, and struck him over the head with a sword — which fired him with such indignation, that he bravely fought his way thro' them, leaped over a fence, and escaped into a morass. Lieut. Barret got off on horseback; and Lieut. Morrow with a number of others badly wounded and left on the field as dead, were next morning brought off by a party of the regiment, the remaining part of which is now commanded by Capt. Stith. Several of those his party brought off are since dead of their wounds.

FOR SALE,

THE ruins of a compleat MERCHANT MILL, (which was destroyed by the British army in their late march through New-Jersey) together with about 40 acres of Land, situate on Black's creek, about half a mile from Borden-Town, in the county of Burlington, a healthy part of the country, distant from Philadelphia 28 miles.

There yet remains on the premises a tolerable good saw-mill, an old dwelling-house, kitchen, cooper's shop, stable, smoak-house, &c.—The mill walls are built very good stone 37 by 52 feet, and about 18 feet high, the foundation of which being well fixed on piles, are still sufficient to support a frame building, or even stout enough to build upon with stone or brick, having sustained little or no damage by the fire. The mill consisted of two water wheels, and three pair of stones all running double geer'd, for which the foundation works are well calculated—besides a spare water lane suitable for a small wheel for hoisting, or many other purposes. The house was large and convenient, four stories high, covering all the wheels, and furnishing granaries to contain about 10,000-bushels of grain, with a remarkable large meal-loft, and the necessary room for boulting-chests, packing rooms, storing flour, bran, shorts, &c. The fore-bay and water lanes are not so much damaged but they may be repaired at a small expence. All the iron work (which was made by a complete workman) consisting of gudgions, spindles, rines, steps, punchions, bands, machine for raising and lowering millstones, &c. will be disposed of with the premises.

The advantages attending this valuable seat for any kind of water-works are very great, the stream being pretty good, and is raised to ten feet nine inches head and fall—the tide flowing up the creek a short distance from the river Delaware to the spot, a flat boat has constantly carried from thence 120 barrels of flour, and a vessel may easily be constructed which may load at the mill-tail and carry off upwards of 200 barrels of flour with great convenience immediately to Philadelphia market. The country for many miles round is fertile, and has always furnished this mill with large quantities of wheat, rye, and Indian corn; besides great supplies of wheat annually brought down the river Delaware in Durham boats,¹ which unload with much ease and dispatch, being hoisted out by water directly into the mill. Exclusive of those advantageous circumstances a very ample supply of wheat may generally be had from Philadelphia, by the return vessels which are continually employed in transporting produce from the several neighbouring landings on the creek and river, at a reasonable freight, and has frequently been procured on better terms than the wheat purchased in this part of the country. From either of those resources a very plentiful supply of wheat for manufacturing may always readily be purchased, with additional quantities for further speculation.

An iron-work¹ was formerly erected at this place, which was supplied with pig-iron from Durham, and other furnaces up the Delaware.

Will be sold with the above premises a lot of ground near the mouth of the same creek, whereon is erected a small dwelling-house, and wharf, for the convenience of the mill, as well as for the benefit of the country, from whence considerable quantities of grain, pork, flour, lumber and other produce, are annually transported to Philadelphia, and from whence a shallop can carry about 300 barrels of flour --- being distant from the mill seat less than half a mile. There is also a quantity of white-oak and other valuable timber part on the spot, and part about two miles distant, already squared suitable for building a large tumbling dam, which will be disposed of with the same, or separately.

A good title will be given to the above described premises.—For terms of sale apply to ROBERT LEWIS, merchant, in Philadelphia; ROBERT LEWIS, jun. at Penny-pack mill; WILLIAM LEWIS, near Crosswicks; or to the subscriber on the premises.

Fish-Kill, October 8. Extract of a letter from an officer in Jersey, dated Aquakanoek, October 4, 1778.

“In my last I informed you of the landing of a party of the enemy from New-York. This irruption into our State has been conducted with the utmost degree of prudence and circumspection, — with a force sufficient, had it been managed with dexterity and spirit, (in the interval of assembling our militia) they might have harrassed a considerable extent of country and perhaps secured a large number of cattle. 'Tis true in attempting this they must have exposed thier retreat to the sagacity of a commander who from his vicinity to Jersey, had it in his power to cut them off. Instead of penetrating into the state, they confined themselves to a small portion of country, between two navigable rivers, exposing only a small front, impenetrable by its situation, and by works thrown up for its further security. Here they lay foraging, chiefly among their friends the tories, in the neighbourhood of Hackinsack. We can explain this conduct of theirs, only by complimenting the spirit of our countrymen, who turned out most readily on this occasion, and by supposing them much fonder of forage than of fighting. Had they ventured farther it might have proved fatal. However, this supineness gives us time to collect our strength, and receive reinforcements from the main army on your side of the Hudson. We now are a body of some consideration, sufficient to give confidence and cover to the country, with the assistance which we received, and to be at the same time an effectual restraint on the enemy's depredations beyond their lines. At present they are busied in transporting their plunder; and we are watching for a vulnerable point, where we may revenge the barbarities practised on the unfortunate and amiable Baylor.

“Our whale boats in the mouth of Hackinsack river are not unemployed. They have destroyed four vessels with forage that were returning to New-York, and had we an opportunity to work, you may be assured we would not be idle. We have felt injuries, and learnt how to revenge them, and wish most sincerely for a parting blow with our enemy. We harmonize perfectly with the continentals, and are peculiarly happy under the command of Lord Stirling.”

New-York, Oct. 19. The Cork fleet arrived at Sandy Hook Yesterday Afternoon.

When the British troops withdrew from the New Bridge, near Hackinsack, the Continentals and Militia that were in that Neighbourhood, marched directly towards Newark, Elizabeth-Town, &c.—New-York Gazette and Weekly Mercury, October 19, 1778.

For the NEW-JERSEY GAZETTE.

THE public, it seems, is once more entertained with another dying speech of their Excellencies the British Commissioners, who, like Mr. Partridge, the Almanack-maker, will be walking about, after having been proved stone-dead before. As these Gentlemen are not the first who have published their own disgrace, the dissemination of their Manifesto, will, I am persuaded, injure none but themselves. It fully proves, and indeed acknowledges, that they had no power finally to do anything but to grant pardons, that is, to hold up the most insolent offer (for receiving them from the bosom of liberty into the shackles of slavery) to a free and independent nation, which their own tyranny and nonsense (Johnstone himself being judge) have eternally separated from them, and from which they ought, in all humble manner, to implore forgiveness for their numberless barbarities and outrages: A nation that has reduced them to a degree of humiliation and abasement of which their history knows no example, and that is only restrained by the principles of humanity from imitating their own bribing pattern, to lay their metropolis in ashes.—They offer no inducement for any man to become of their party. They tell all the world what all the world knew before—They reiterate the nonsensical experiment of disaffecting the people against the Congress, which they have attempted ever since they landed, and which attempt must end as all other the like attempts have ended—in nothing at all. But have at ye my lads,—and woe to all non-returning rebels,—they threaten in the ravings of despair to execute that vengeance, with a ruined power, which they were incapable of inflicting with all their strength in its fullest vigour. To reconcile such proceedings to common sense, it must be presumed that the Manifesto is rather calculated for the meridian of London than that of America. For as the English have not yet heard that 'Squire Johnstone is banished for bribery, and still believe (for except the truth, what is there that they do not believe) that the people of America can be spirited up against the Congress, (which is but another name for the people of America in the State-house of Philadelphia) their little fools here, must govern themselves by the sentiments of the great fools there; and, to avoid the cool reception of almost the whole fraternity that have been sent upon the Quixote errand of enslaving America, must be able to introduce themselves to their disappointed constituents with the amplest proofs of their having tried whatever the folly of their employers induced them to believe practicable, however repugnant to the sense or the conscience of the negociators employed. This supposition, Messieurs Commissioners, I make in sheer compassion to yourselves, as I cannot but think there must be some sense in a Scotch secretary whatever there be in an English pair of red-heel'd shoes.

The Manifesto¹ which has fallen into my hands, friend Collins, I once thought of consecrating to the Goddess Cloacina, but it being ornamented with his Majesty's own arms, and I having heard so much in times of yore about the Lord's annointed, (by which some commentators understood Kings, but by which the prophet David certainly meant the people) I was struck with horror at the sacriligious (rebellious) impulse. I shall therefore paste it up over my chimney-piece, but in all probability topsyturvy, (a ridiculous exhibition, you will say, of the Lion and Unicorn, but very emblematical, say I, of the affairs of Great-Britain) that if I am hang'd at last, my descendants may know it was thro' sheer love of hanging, by refusing so gracious and unmerited a pardon upon sincere repentance, with so grim-frowning a lion on the top, terrificly denouncing the royal vengeance against final contumacy and impenitence after the forty days quarantine mercifully allowed to air away all the infection of republicanism and rebellion.

“SIR,

“For fear that my first letter concerning my engagement should miscarry or be delayed, and having other particulars to mention, I thought proper to send you this letter.

“You must know that one Juliet an officer, lately deserted from the enemy, went off to them two days ago with three men whom he debauched and two others whom they forced with them. The enemy, excited without doubt by this Juliet, attacked us the 15th inst. at three o’clock in the morning, with 400 men. They seemed at first to attack our pickets of infantry with fury, who lost a few men in retreating: Then the enemy advanced on our infantry. The Lieut. Col. Baron de Bose, who headed his men and fought vigorously, was killed with several bayonet wounds, as well as the Lieut. de la Borderie, and a small number of soldiers and others were wounded. This slaughter would not have ceased so soon, if on the first alarm I had not hastened with my cavalry to support the infantry, which then kept a good countenance: The enemy soon fled in great disorder, and left behind them a great quantity of arms, accoutrements, hats, blades, &c.

“We took some prisoners, and should have taken many, had it not been for a swamp, through which our horses could scarcely walk: Notwithstanding this, we still advanced in hopes to come up with them; but they had taken up the planks of a bridge for fear of being overtaken, which accordingly saved them. However my light infantry, and particularly the company of rifle-men got over the remains of the plank, and fired some volleys on their rear. The fire began again on both sides. We had the advantage, and made them run again, although they were more in number.

“I would not permit my hunters to pursue any further, because I could not assist them, and they returned again to our line without any loss at that time.

“Our loss is estimated, dead, wounded and absent about 25 or 30 men, and some horses. That of the enemy appears to be much more considerable. We had cut off the retreat of about 25 men, who retired into the country and the woods, and we cannot find them; the general opinion is, that they are concealed by the Tories in the neighbourhood of their encampment."

Ordered by Congress to be published.

Brigade, dated Elizabeth-town, Oct. 17, 1778.*

"The enemy have embarked ten full regiments, and the vessels have fell down with them to the Hook. We have information by deserters this day that the enemy have evacuated Paulus Hook¹ and Hoobuck; if so, they have no post left in Jersey. They were also evacuating fort Washington; fort Independence, and their other works without Kingsbridge,² they had abandoned some days ago. We observed them moving off from their encampment nearest us on Staten-Island this morning, whether with intent to leave the island, or set down on some other part of it, is yet uncertain."

Tuesday se'nnight the enemy left Hackinsack, after having plundered the country thereabouts of most of the forage, a number of cattle, robbed hen-roosts, and committed many acts of barbarity on the defenceless inhabitants. Several tory families, we hear, went off with them.

On Friday last Major-General LINCOLN passed through this place on his way to Philadelphia.

New-York, Oct. 26. Last Monday Morning, a large fleet Sailed from Sandy-Hook for England, under Convoy of the Leviathan, Captain Brown.

The Schooner Lord Howe, Capt. Ion, about 14 Days since, was drove out of Sandy-Hook, in a Gale of Wind, with only the Lieutenant and 11 Hands on Board, and a few Days after fell in with 4 Sail of Frenchmen the largest of which a Pollacco mounted 16 Guns, who engaged the Schooner very smartly, but Mr. Colvill, who had the Command ranged up along side and gave three Cheers, when Monsieur thought proper to give up the Combat, and surrendered Prisoners. The Ship is called the Divine, was from Marseilles bound for Philadelphia. Her Cargo Brandy, Olives, Capers, Salt, &c. &c. The other Vessels got away by Reason Mr. Colvill, could not man, if he had taken them. There was 17 Frenchmen on board the Ship.

EXPEDITION TO EGG-HARBOUR.

About 3 Weeks ago a small Detachment of his Majesty's Ships, 2 Gallies, and 4 armed Vessels, under the Command of Capt. Collins of the Zebra, having on Board 300 Men commanded by Captain Patrick Ferguson, sailed from hence for Egg-Harbour, where after surmounting some Difficulties in passing into the Harbour, they destroyed 11 Sail of Vessels, among which was a very fine Ship, the Venus of London, and others of considerable Size. The Troops being landed, proceeded to destroy the Settlements and Store Houses of the Committee-Men and every Person notoriously concerned in the Pyratival Vessels, which have greatly annoyed the British Commerce from that Quarter. The Salt Works on the Bay were also effectually destroyed.

Intelligence being received of a detachment of 600 Rebels, consisting of Polaski's Legion, Proctor's Artillery, the Militia and Four Pieces of Cannon being posted with an Intention to oppose the Operations of his Majesty's Troops, it was determined to surprize them; 250 Men were accordingly landed on Minceok Island, and about 4 o'Clock in the Morning, led by Captain Ferguson, who having passed the Bridge undiscovered, presently surrounded 3 Houses, in which the infantry of Polaski's Legion was posted, these were instantly charged with Bayonets by the King's Troops, and 60 of them put to Death, amongst them were a Lieut. Colonel, two Captains, an Adjutant, and three or four more Officers; the Loss sustained in this Attack was one Man killed, one wounded and two missing: about ten o'clock the same morning the Troops returned to their vessels, and after waiting a considerable Time for a favourable Wind, arrived here on Thursday last.

A Flag arrived here last Saturday Night with 150 British Prisoners from Elizabeth-Town, where they left about 400 more: They are from Philadelphia, where there has been a Gaol Delivery.—New-York Gazette and Weekly Mercury, October 26, 1778.

Mr. Collins,—Please to give the enclosed a place in your next Gazette, and oblige a Customer,

TO THE JERSEY FARMER.¹

Sir:

I have seen your short publication of the third instant, which has convinced me fully that our constitution has been broken, and I believe, in more instances than you have mentioned. Has not a Chief Justice held a seat in the legislative department, assisting in the making of laws, then sits in the administration of justice to execute those laws? which, in my humble opinion is inconsistent with our excellent constitution, and as you say, ought to be like Caesar's wife, "free from all suspicion."

From whence have all the calamities of the civil war now carried on by Great Britain against these United States originated, but from a breach of Magna Charta, by that purchased majority in the British Parliament, which you call Lord North's battalions with propriety, for all the reasoning of the greatest speakers has no effect on their venal, veteran, pensioned, purchased souls, which has really been the cause of Britain and America's being separated forever? Let us then guard against every the least innovation of our constitution, and not suffer it to be broken with impunity .

Her surest guard is innocence.
None knew 'til guilt created fear,
What darts and poison'd arrows were.

You mentioned another important matter, which has given me a serious concern — the depreciation of our Continental Bills of Credit, which is daily growing worse and worse; and what is most shocking to me, is, that the Legislatures of the several states have, instead of passing laws to regulate the price of the produce and internal manufactures of these states, raised the salaries of the officers of government to five or six times as much as usual, and when asked why these extravagant salaries are given, their answer is, You don't consider the depreciation of our paper money. Is this not alarming that Legislatures should give a sanction to the depreciation of our Bills of Credit? Such language may be expected from engrossers, forestallers, and purchasers of hard money at five or six for one, but from members of a legislative body it is shameful. — I have heard that some of our respectable clergy have applied to their hearers to raise their salaries, in proportion to the depreciation or the present extortion of the times, call it which you please. I have heard of one compliance only of three for one for a year, which surprized me not a little; for let me assure you, I expected better things of the reverend clergy, — that they would have publicly exhorted their hearers against so destructive a measure to the Independence of the United States. Call to mind the depreciation of the paper money in the New England colonies; it surely must be remembered by very many now living. How exceedingly was the conduct of those people condemned; and yet we in the present day are, if possible, doing worse? I wish the Jersey Farmer (as he has told us we should hear from him occasionally) would give his sentiments, how we may secure our paper money from a depreciation. I am only a common tradesman, and have said more than I intended, but most heartily unite with the Jersey Farmer, and most cordially hope the farmers and tradesmen united will be able to secure our constitution from any further violations, also, our bills, emitted on the best security in the world, from further depreciation.

PROCLAMATION.

Whereas the Honorable the Congress, on the twenty-second day of April last, did resolve that any man or body of men who should presume to make any separate or partial convention or agreement with commissioners under the crown of Great Britain or any of them, ought to be considered and treated as open and avowed enemies of the United States; And whereas notwithstanding the said resolution the Commissioners of the King of Great Britain have sent into this State, under the sanction of a flag, certain seditious papers under the name and title of a Manifesto and Proclamation, to distribute through the United States with a view to stir up dissensions, animosities and rebellions among the good people of the said States; And whereas such practices are contrary to the laws of the nations, and utterly subversive of the confidence necessary between belligerent powers for alleviating the horrors of war, and the agents therefore employed to distribute such papers are not entitled to protection from a flag while engaged in the prosecution of such nefarious purposes; And whereas the Congress, by their resolution of the sixteenth day of October instant, have recommended it to the executive powers of the United States to take up and secure in safe and close custody all and every person and persons, who, under the sanction of a flag or otherwise, may be concerned or engaged in the purposes aforesaid: I have therefore thought fit to issue this Proclamation, hereby strictly charging and commanding all the militia officers of this State, and all others whom it may concern, to take up and secure in safe and close custody all and every person and persons, who, under the sanction of a flag or otherwise, shall in future be concerned or engaged in distributing any seditious papers in this State, under whatever title or denomination, calculated to excite dissensions, animosities, and rebellions among the good people of the United States, and forthwith to certify to me, or to the Governor or Commander in Chief of this state for the time being, their proceedings in the premises.

Given under my hand and seal at arms, at Elizabethtown, the twenty-first day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and seventy-eight.

BERNARD HANLEN.

Nov. 3, 1778.

STRAYED or stolen from near Elizabeth-Town, on Sunday night the 25th of October, a brown MARE, about 14 hands high, half-blooded, very straight limb'd, a natural trotter, and thin of flesh: Whoever takes up the mare so that the subscriber gets her, and the thief is secured, shall have Forty Dollars reward, Twenty for the thief and Twenty for the mare, with reasonable charges, paid by DANIEL HUNT, in Maidenhead.

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.

Last Monday morning, a large fleet sailed from Sandy Hook for England, under convoy of the Leviathan, Capt. Brown, in which went passengers his grace, the Duke of Ancaster, and General Sir Robert Pigot.

TRENTON, NOVEMBER 11.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman at camp at Quackerhill, dated Oct. 27, 1778.

We hear that on Tuesday sennight 120 sail of British vessels of war, and transports full of soldiers, sailed from Sandy-Hook, supposed to be bound to the West Indies; that all the new levies are on board, except Boskirk's¹ regiment:—that those who remain on Staten-Island, under Gen. Skinner, are posted at Watsons ferry, and the Watering-place:—and that Mr. Galloway² has lately sailed for England.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman at Camp at Quackerhill, dated Nov. 2, 1778.

On Tuesday, third instant, Captain Marriner, of Brunswick, with seven men belonging to Lord Stirling's division, landed from the Jersey shore at New-Utrecht, on Long-island, and brought off Simon and Jaques Cortelyou, two famous Tories in the enemy's lines, and in specie and other property to the amount of 5000 dollars. The two prisoners are on parole at New Brunswick, and to be exchanged for two citizens of this State in captivity with the enemy.

The following character would have been inserted earlier, had it not been mislaid.

“To the unspeakable grief of a mourning wife, and the great loss of four desirable children, died of an odematous tumour, in the morning of the 26th of August last, at Springfield, in the borough of Elizabeth, in the 48th year of his age, Doctor JONATHAN DAYTON,¹ who had practiced physick with great care, success and reputation of the space of 24 years, in that place and parts adjacent: and his remains were the next day decently interred in the burying-ground in the place, and a suitable sermon, from Mark 13, 37 was preached upon the occasion, by the Rev. James Caldwell.²

“He was eminent in his profession: warmly attached to the cause of his country: and shined as an husband, a father, a neighbour and a friend. In a word, his worth was best known to, and the loss sustained by his death most sensibly felt by his friends, and those among whom he practiced.”

“On the 27th of October last departed this life, at Westfield, in Essex county, the amiable consort³ of Doctor PHILEMON ELMER, in the 23d year of her age, the only child of Mr. Ephraim Marsh. The day following, her funeral was attended by a number of ministers, a train of mourners, and a large concourse of people. Upon which occasion a very pertinent and instructive discourse was delivered by the Rev. James Caldwell, from Isaiah 40; 5, 6, 7 and 8th verses. She was a dutiful child; an affectionate and agreeable wife; of a sweet temper and disposition; the darling of her relations; beloved and admired by her acquaintance; hospitable to the poor; compassionate to the distressed; a pattern of modesty and worthy of imitation in her mien and deportment; an honour to her sex and all in connexion with her; has left two babes, a disconsolate husband and afflicted parents to bewail the loss which they have sustained by her death."

MR. COLLINS,

You may, if you please, insert the following repartee; which I think contains a great deal of delicate and genuine wit.

BONMOT.

A British officer in New York being in company with a lady whose sentiments were favourable to the cause of liberty, was making some severe remarks upon the American troops. However, Madam, said he. I think you have a Howe and a Clinton in your army. "We have, Sir," replied the lady,—“but you have not a Washington in yours.”

EIGHTY DOLLARS REWARD.

Lost on the fourth instant, on the post-road between Marseille's tavern and the Scotch Plains and Quibble-town, a Parchment Pocket book, containing between three and four hundred dollars in Continental currency, chiefly in 40, 30, 20 and 8 dollar bills, emitted April 11, 1778. There was also in the pocket-book the subscriber's Lieutenant-Colonel's commission; a letter from Col. Samuel Ogden directed to Governor Morris, Esq. at Philadelphia; another letter to Mrs Mary Heasdan, several state lottery tickets, numbers unkuown, with many other papers which can be of no benefit to any but the owner. LOST at the same time and between the same places, Gaine's Universal Register, or American and British Kalendar for the present year, with some papers of consequence. Whoever finds the said pocket-book, and returns the commission and money to the owner, or will give him directions by letter, or otherwise where he may find it, shall receive Eighty Dollars from the subscriber. Should the pocket book fall into dishonest hands, any person who will give information of it to the subscriber, so that he may obtain the money or secure the rogue, shall be entitled to the same reward of Eighty Dollars; but as the papers cannot be converted by any kind of knavery or legerdemain to be of use to any person whatever but the owner, be his inclination that way as great as it may, the subscriber flatters himself, that if any persons finds the pocket book, and feels no compunction of conscience at converting the money to his own use, he will still have honesty enough to fall upon some method to convey the papers and letters to the owners, and cunning enough to conceal from what quarter they come. A letter, or any information sent to the post-office at Morris-town, will be gratefully acknowledged by HENRY BROCKHOLST LIVINGSTON.¹

WHEREAS a number of non-commissioned officers and privates, the good subjects of these states, (who were unfortunately made prisoners previous to the reduction of Fort Washington, in November 1776, and afterwards admitted to return to their friends on parole in December following,) do still conceive themselves as bound in honour not to bear arms or otherwise assist in the common defence of the rights of their country — NOTICE is hereby given, That they are now regularly exchanged and fully discharged from any such their parole, the full complement of men due the enemy being wholly paid.

JOHN BEATTY, Com. Gen. Pris.

The Printers in the different states are requested to publish the above.

To be sold by the subscriber in Bordentown, state of N. Jersey, the following TRACTS OF LAND, &c., lying in Piles Grove, Salem county :

No. 1. A plantation on which Dr. John Gray¹ lately lived, containing 300 acres or thereabouts; on which are a good frame barn and stables, and an old log house; adjoining it is a two story brick house built by Dr. Gray, which I suppose may be purchased, as he owns but one acre of land on which the house was built.

No. 2. A plantation on which the widow M'Kirnyno now lives, containing 300 acres, adjoining the above; on which is an old barn, a new log dwelling-house, a considerable part of it well timbered, and is very good wheat land.

No. 3. A plantation on which Conrad Adres lives, containing 90 acres, with an old log house thereon, and is an excellent good stand for a tradesman.

No. 4. A plantation on which the widow Titus lives, containing 140 acres, an old log house and barn.

No. 5. A plantation on which Simon Bickler now lives, containing 200 acres, adjoining the above plantation; the building but indifferent.

No. 6. Containing 400 acres, or thereabouts, adjoining the glass house; on which there is no settlement, but is all wood land.

¹Not mentioned in "History of Medicine in New Jersey," by Stephen Wickes.

This tract of land lies very high, and at such a distance from the marshy ground, so as to render it as healthy as any part of this state. It will be sold all together, or in plantations, as may best suit the purchaser. A warranted title will be given by Whoever takes up and secures said horse, that the owner may have him again, shall receive the above reward, and all reasonable charges paid, by JOSIAH CONKLING, living at Trenton.

TO BE SOLD BY THE SUBSCRIBER,

THAT valuable FARM formerly the property of Mr. George Armstrong, within five miles of Morristown and three from Baskingridge meeting-house, pleasantly situated, containing 500 acres, one half of which is improved, and well adapted either for grass or grain, the remainder in good thriving young timber; the whole is well watered, and the greatest part in good new fence: an excellent orchard of the very best grafted fruit, containing upwards of 1000 apple and peach trees. It is so well situated, that a late frost in the spring never injures it, and yields a plentiful crop every year: 60 acres of good meadow, which produces plenty of good timothy and clover. On the premises is a large convenient dwelling-house, two stories high, four rooms on a floor, with two kitchens and a large cellar, commodious for two families: also a good large barn, stable, cyder-house, and every other building necessary for a farm, all in good repair, together with the farming utensils and stock. Also an elegant house and barn, together with eight acres of land, in the town of Newark, wherein Lewis Ogden, Esq. formerly lived, and now occupied by Mr. Henry Ten Brook; the house is well finished, commodious and pleasantly situated; also a lot of four acres of land, opposite the Rev. Mr. M'Whorter's.¹ The whole will either be sold separate or together, as may best suit the purchaser, by applying to the subscriber, in Morris county, who will give an indisputable title for the same.

Newark, one of the centers of the Revolutionary movement in East Jersey, was the birthplace of Jonathan Odell. Graduating from the College of New Jersey in the class of 1754, when seventeen years of age, he for a time, later acted as surgeon in the British army, but subsequently, taking holy orders, was inducted into the rectorship of Saint Mary's, Burlington, where as physician of bodies and souls he remained until driven thence by the war.

Throughout the period of constitutional debate from 1767 to 1775 Jonathan Odell remained passive, hoping for peace. Arrested by the Burlington committee in October, 1775, for certain sentiments which he had expressed in his letters touching the attitude of the continental congress, he brought upon himself the heavy hand of the provincial congress. Upon the 4th of June, 1776, in honor of the King's birthday, Odell had written some intensely loyal verses to be sung by some British officers then prisoners in Burlington. The celebration had been held upon a nearby island in the Delaware, but the echoes of the song rang throughout the colony. It was upon the 20th of July that the provincial congress directed that "a person suspected of being inimical to American liberty"—Jonathan Odell—be

Golden, of the county of Burlington, have offended against the form of their allegiance to this state; when the said inquisition was found true, and being properly certified, was returned to the Inferior Court of Common Pleas holden in the county of Burlington, on Tuesday, the third of November, and proclamation made thereupon in open Court, as the law in that case provided directs, that they, or any person on their behalf, might appear and traverse the inquisition. Now NOTICE is hereby given, That unless paroled, pledging himself to remain within a circle of eight miles, the center of which was the Burlington court house.

Until the middle of December, 1776, Jonathan Odell remained peacefully in Burlington, and upon the arrival of Count Dunop, for whose winter quarters Burlington had been selected by the British commander, unquestionably spared the inhabitants of the town from insult and pillage. But the appearance of American gondolas on the river front was the signal for a chase with the rector as quarry. Hunted by a body of armed men, Jonathan Odell was later compelled to take refuge among the King's troops, leaving his wife and three children to the mercies of the soldiery. For several days he remained concealed in Governor Franklin's mansion at Green Bank, on the Burlington river front, where, in a secret room, under the care of the witty Quakeress, Margaret Morris, he evaded the search parties of New Jersey militia. Here the rector of Saint Mary's hid himself in this room, called the "auger hole," until the 18th of December, when Margaret Morris records in her journal: "Our refugee gone off to day out of reach of gondolas and Tory hunters."

Upon his arrival in New York Odell was active, not only in the discharge of his duties as chaplain of a corps of loyalist troops, but was much sought after for his fund of information concerning the personal characteristics of the American leaders and of the physical and social conditions of the Middle states. In 1778 he plunged into the boiling sea of satire. Framed upon the classic models of Dryden, Pope and Churchill, the prevailing note of the four, is the general idea which formed the basis of the political system of the American loyalists. While it was recognized by them that the English ministry had blundered in a system of taxation, nevertheless, by appealing to the sympathies of the English people and the Parliamentary leaders, the colonies could defeat this policy by persevering in keeping their opposition within constitutional limits. But the greater blunder, in fact, the national crime, was the pushing of constitutional opposition into open rebellion, into treason, and into ultimate dismemberment. In poetic terms Odell characterized the Revolution as "a sort of insane phrensy, produced by the wicked few in administering to their victims this potion of political necromancy—this hideous hell-broth made up of lies, sophistries, ambitions, hatreds, hallucinations."

Refusing to cross the seas after the close of the war, Odell remained in America, cried aloud that the contest be renewed, and, finding all in vain, sought in Nova Scotia an asylum where he died in a ripe old age. But the Jonathan Odell in the northern wilderness was the Jonathan Odell of Burlington and New York, proud, defiant, unbending, unconquered and unconvinced. TO THE PRINTERS.

CAPTAIN Duncan, late of the Rose Letter of Marque, with his Crew, who so bravely distinguished themselves in a severe Action with a French Frigate, arrived here late last Night in a Flag of Truce from Elizabeth-Town, several of those gallant Seamen were by Mistake detained at their Landing, in order to be put on board the Ships of War; but Admiral Gambiers being informed thereof, he was pleased to direct, that they should immediately be set at Liberty, and to give express Orders, that no Prisoners returning from Captivity in future, shall be obliged to serve on board the Kings Ships. I therefore think it my Duty to request, that his Majesty's faithful Subjects may be made acquainted therewith through the Channels of the public Newspaper.

EXTRACT FROM THE TRIAL OF MAJOR GENERAL LEE.

MAJOR GENERAL LORD STIRLING, President. Brigadier-Generals, Smallwood, Poor, Woodford and Huntington. Colonels, Irvine, Shepherd, Swift, Wigglesworth, Angel, Clarke, Williams, Febiger, Members. JOHN LAWRENCE, Judge Advocate.

Brunswick, July 4, 1778.

The Judge Advocate produces the General's orders, (Washington's) for the court to sit. The President, Members, and Judge Advocate, being sworn, the Judge Advocate prosecuting in the name of the United States of America, the Court proceed to the trial of Major-General Lee, who appears before the Court, and the following charges are exhibited against him: First, For disobedience of orders, in not attacking the enemy on the 28th of June, agreeable to repeated instructions. Secondly, For misbehaviour before the enemy on the same day, by making an unnecessary, disorderly, and shameful retreat. Thirdly, for disrespect to the Commander in Chief in two letters, dated the 1st of July, and the 28th of June.

Major-General Lee pleads, not guilty.

Camp, Englishtown, 1st July, 1778.

Sir,

From the knowledge I have of your Excellency's character, I must conclude, that nothing but the misinformation of some very stupid or misrepresentation of some very wicked person, could have occasioned your making use of so very singular expressions as you did, on my coming up to the ground where you had taken post; They implied, that I was guilty either of disobedience of orders, of want of conduct, or want of courage: Your Excellency will therefore infinitely oblige me, by letting me know on which of these three articles you ground your charge, that I may prepare for my justification, which I have the happiness to be confident, I can do to the army, to the Congress, to America. and to the world in general. Your Excellency must give me leave to observe that neither yourself nor those about your person, could, from your situation, be in the least judges of the merits or demerits of our manœuvres, and, to speak with a becoming pride, I can assert, that to these manœuvres, the success of the day was entirely owing, I can boldly say, that had we remained on the first ground, or had we advanced, or had the retreat been conducted in a manner different from what it was, this whole army and the interests of America would have risked being sacrificed. I ever had (and I hope ever shall have) the greatest respect and veneration for General Washington, I think him endued with many great and good qualities, but in this instance, I must pronounce, that he has been guilty of an act of cruel injustice, towards a man, who certainly has some pretensions to the regard of every servant of this country; and, I think, sir, I have a right to demand some reparation for the injury committed; and unless I can obtain it, I must in justice to myself, when the campaign is closed (which I believe will close the war) retire from a service, at the head of which is placed a man, capable of offering such injuries; but, at the same time, in justice to you I must repeat, that I, from my soul believe, that it was not a motion of your own breast, but instigated by some of those dirty Earwigs, who will forever insinuate themselves near persons in high office; for I am really convinced that, when General Washington acts from himself, no man in his army will have reason to complain of injustice or indecorum. I am, Sir, and I hope ever shall have reason to continue, your most sincerely devoted humble servant,

CHARLES LEE.

His Excellency Gen. Washington.

Head-quarters, English Town, June 28, 1778.

Sir,

I received your letter (dated through mistake the first of July) expressed, as I conceive, in terms highly improper. I am not conscious of having made use of any singular expressions at the time of my meeting you, as you intimate. What I recollect to have said, was dictated by duty, and warranted by the occasion. As soon as circumstances will permit, you shall have an opportunity either of justifying yourself to the army, to Congress, to America, and to the world in general; or of convincing them that you are guilty of a breach of orders, and of misbehaviour before the enemy on the 28th inst. in not attacking them as you had been directed, and in making an unnecessary, disorderly and shameful retreat.

I am, Sir, your most obedient servant,

George Washington.

Major-General Lee.

Camp, June 28, 1778.

Sir,

I beg your Excellency's pardon for the inaccuracy in mis-dating my letter. You cannot afford me greater pleasure than in giving me the opportunity of showing to America the sufficiency of her respective servants. I trust that the temporary power of office, and the tinsel dignity attending it, will not be able, by all the mists they can raise, to offulate the bright rays of truth: In the mean time your Excellency can have no objection to my retiring from the army.

I am, Sir, your most obedient humble Servant,

Charles Lee.

General Washington.

Camp, June 30, 1778.

Sir,

Since I had the honour of addressing my letter by Col. Fitzgerald to your Excellency, I have reflected on both your situation and mine, and beg leave to observe, that it will be for our mutual convenience, that a Court of Inquiry should be immediately ordered; but I could wish it might be a Court-Martial; for if the affair is drawn into length, it may be difficult to collect the necessary evidences, and perhaps might bring on a paper war betwixt the adherents to both parties, which may occasion some disagreeable feuds on the continent, for all are not my friends nor your admirers. I must intreat therefore, from your love of justice, that you will immediately exhibit your charge, and that on the first halt, I may be brought to trial. I am, Sir, your most obedient humble Servant,

Charles Lee.

The Court having considered the first charge against Major-General Lee, the evidence and his defence, are of opinion that he is guilty of disobedience of orders, in not attacking the enemy on the 28th June, agreeable to repeated instructions; being a breach of the latter part of Art. 5, Sec. 2, of the Articles of War.

The Court having considered the second charge against Major-General Lee, the evidence and his defence, are of opinion, he is guilty of misbehaviour before the enemy on the 28th of June, by making an unnecessary, and in some instances, a disorderly retreat, being a breach of the 13th Art. of the 13 Sec. of the Articles of War.

The Court do sentence Major-General Lee to be suspended from any command in the armies of the United States of North America, for the term of twelve months.

Stirling

M. G. and President.

The Court adjourned without day.

Extract of a letter from Elizabeth Town, November 19, 1778.

It is reported, that the American Army is about to go into winter quarters; for this purpose part of it has already crossed the North River, and head-quarters, we are told, will shortly be established at Lord Stirling's Seat,¹ at Baskenridge, in this State.

With pleasure we can inform the public, that an act was passed the 20th instant, by the Legislature of this State, entitled, An Act to authorize and empower the Delegates of the State of New Jersey, in Congress, to subscribe and ratify the articles of confederation and perpetual union between the several States.

THE first year of the NEW JERSEY GAZETTE being nearly ended, the Printer proposes, in favour of his Customers, to continue the same to the first day of January next at the present price: and that each subscriber do settle his accounts (which will be sent) to that time with the several Gentlemen to whom the packets are directed, who are desired to receive the money, and transmit it by Post or other safe conveyance.

The present price of the Gazette being much less than that of any Paper printed in the neighbouring States, and moreover having been fixed at a time when measures were taking to establish a limitation of prices, and the general expectation was that it would be adopted and continued, the price of the Gazette from the first of January

United States Lottery Tickets,

Are to be sold by William Gamble, Esq. in Bordentown.
—New-Jersey Gazette, Vol. 1, No. 51, November 25,

TO BE SOLD.

A Very valuable Farm and Mill in Amwell township, Hunterdon county, West New Jersey: The land is very good in quality, and contains about 340 acres, with a proper proportion of woodland and meadow, an extraordinary good orchard of apple and other fruit trees. The house is a genteel spacious brick house, the dimensions 50 feet by 36, four rooms on a floor, and two stories high, with kitchens, barn, and other out houses, the situation extremely healthy and pleasant, commanding a very extensive prospect of the adjacent country. The mill house is of stone, 40 feet by 60, supplied by a large plentiful stream of water, being the south branch of Raritan river, and lies in the midst of a great wheat country. Enquire of Edward Shippen, jun. in Fourth-street Philadelphia.—The Pennsylvania Packet, November 26, 1778.

¹ The United States Lottery was one among the many financial mistakes of the continental congress. Established on November 1st, 1776, the plan devised contemplated the issue of one hundred thousand tickets, to be drawn in four classes. It was proposed to raise $5,000,000 in the form of a four per cent. loan. Managers and State agents were appointed. Purchasers of tickets were few in number, and the first drawing, scheduled for March 1st, 1777, was postponed from time to time. Many purchasers of tickets in New Jersey and other states met with large losses.

With pleasure we can inform the public, that an act was passed the twentieth instant, by the legislature of this state, entitled "An act to authorize and empower the delegates of the state of New Jersey, in congress, to subscribe and ratify the articles of confederation and perpetual union between the several states."¹—The Pennsylvania Evening Post, November 27, 1778.

¹The delegates from the State of New Jersey signed the Articles of Confederation upon the 26th of November, 1778. Ten states had adopted the Articles before New Jersey had taken action.

The matter of consent had been discussed in the General Assembly and Council. In the minutes of the former body, under date of June 15th, 1778, is an "Opinion" which defines the position of the legislature relative to the formal beginning of national unity.

It is stated in the "Opinion" that among the qualifications necessary for delegates to Congress no mention was made of any "Oath, Test or Declaration" being required, other than that taken to uphold the state governments. To this New Jersey desired the addition of some "Test" binding the delegate in his allegiance to the United States, which, "collectively considered, have Interests as well as each particular state." It was further observed that the delegates from New Jersey "assent to no Vote or Proceeding which may violate the general Consideration."

By the sixth and ninth articles the regulation of trade was committed to the separate jurisdictions of the states, involving, said New Jersey, "many Difficulties and Embarrassments and attended with Injustice to some States in the Union." In the opinion of the committee "the sole and exclusive Power of regulating the Trade of the United States with foreign Nations ought to be clearly vested in the Congress, and that the Revenue arising from all Duties and Customs imposed thereon" should be devoted to the establishment of a navy for the protection of trade and defense of the coast, "and to such other publick and general Purposes as to the Congress shall seem proper and for the common Benefit of the States. This Principle appears to us to be just, and it may be added that a great Security will by this Means be derived to the Union from the Establishment of a Common and Mutual Interest."

Against the establishment of a standing army, sustained by congress in time of peace, New Jersey earnestly protested, being "totally abhorrent from the Ideas and Principles of this State." It was also recommended that "Quotas for Supplies and aids to be furnished by the several States in Support of the general Treasury" should be "struck once at least in every five years and oftener if Circumstances will allow."

In recommending that the "Boundaries and Limits of each State ought to be fully and finally fixed and made known," New Jersey sounded a note of warning. By a strange combination of circumstances it was in November-December, 1781, that there assembled in Trenton a congressional court which determined the dispute of long standing between Connecticut and Pennsylvania concerning the ownership of the northern third of that commonwealth, and put an end to the contentions of the Connecticut claimants, which had since 1775 disturbed the settlement of the Wyoming Valley.

"It was ever the constant Expectation of this State," said the "Opinion," "that the Benefits derived from a successful Contest were to be general and

New-York, November 30. General Washington's Headquarters, about 20 Days ago, was at Pauling's Purchase, in Dutchess County, and we hear his Army was cantoned as far as Hartford Eastward; and West, to Short-Hills, in Morris County, New-Jersey.

Last Thursday Captain — spoke with two Privateers from Egg-Harbour, but both belonging to Salem, in New England; one of them was a Schooner of 4 Guns, called —, Prat, Master, the other the Sloop Hornet, Stevens, of 6 Guns: They had retaken a Prize Sloop belonging to the Privateer Sloop Harlequin, from this Port, and the last mentioned Privateer was she that took the ship Venus from London.—New-York Gazette and Weekly Mercury, November 30, 1778.

proportionate, and that the Property of the common Enemy, falling in consequence of a prosperous Issue of the War, would belong to the United States and be appropriated to their use." The jurisdiction over the vacant and unpatented lands, known as crown lands, should be vested in the states whose charters or determined limits embrace those lands; but all real property existing in the "crown of Great Britain" should belong "to the Congress in Trust for the Use and Benefit of the United States. They have fought and bled for It in Proportion to their respective Abilities, and therefor the Reward ought not to be predelictionally distributed." Such a course would leave some states—and here came New Jersey's special pleading—sunk under an enormous debt, while others could replace their expenditures from the hard earnings of the whole confederacy.

The ninth article of the articles of confederation provided that requisitions for state militia be proportioned to the number of white inhabitants in each commonwealth. In the argument upon this proposition the New Jersey legislature took a most decided stand. Quoting from the Declaration of Independence the clause that "All Men are created equal," and that they are endowed with the unalienable rights of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness," the "Opinion" argues the consequence that all inhabitants "be the Colour of their Complexion what it may be," are bound to promote the interests of society according to their respective abilities. While it may be improper for persons of a particular color to bear arms in the defence of the nation, the refusal of personal liberty being justified by necessity or expediency, yet the proportion of military force should be fixed according to the whole number of inhabitants, from whatever class they may be raised. In a state where all are white such a commonwealth obtains an undue advantage over a state of mixed population. In order to equalize the quota of state troops called to war a census should be taken every five years.

To this "Opinion" both houses unanimously concurred. See "New Jersey as a Colony and as a State," Vol. II.

From the LONDON GAZETTE Extraordinary, Monday, August 24, 1778.

Whitehall, August 24, 1778.

The following letter from Lieutenant General Sir Henry Clinton, Knight of the Bath, to Lord George Germaine, one of his Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, was received on Saturday night by Col Patterson, who arrived in the Grantham Packet, from New-York.

New-York, July 5, 1778.

My Lord,

I have the honour to inform your Lordship that, pursuant to his Majesty's instructions, I evacuated Philadelphia on the 18th of June, at three o'clock in the morning, and proceeded to Gloucester Point, without being followed by the enemy. Everything being from thence passed in safety across the Delaware, through the excellent disposition made by the Admiral to secure our passage, the army marched at ten o'clock and reached Haddonfield the same day. A strong corps of the enemy having, upon our approach, abandoned the difficult pass of Mount Holley, the army proceeded without any interruption from them, excepting what was occasioned by their having destroyed every bridge on our road. As the country is much intersected with marshy rivulets, the obstructions we met with were frequent, and the excessive heat of the season rendered the labour of repairing the bridges severely felt.

The advanced parties of our light troops arriving unexpectedly at Crosswicks on the 23d, after a trifling skirmish, prevented the enemy from destroying the bridge over a large creek at that village, and the army passed it the next morning. One column, under the command of his Excellency Lieutenant General Knyphausen, halted near Amely's-town; and as the provision train and heavy artillery were stationed in that division, the other column, under Lieutenant General Earl Cornwallis, took a position at Allen's-town, which covered the other encampment.

Thus far, my Lord, my march pointed equally towards the Hudson's River and Staten-Island by the Rariton, I was now at the juncture, when it was necessary to decide ultimately what course to pursue. Encumbered as I was by an enormous provision train, &c to which impeded the probability of obstructions and length of my march, obliged me to submit; I was led to wish for a route less liable to obstacles than those above-mentioned.

I had received intelligence that Generals Washington and Lee had passed the Delaware with their army, had assembled a numerous militia from all the neighbouring provinces, and that Gates, with an army from the Northward was advancing to join them on the Rariton. As I could not hope that, after having always hitherto so studiously avoided a general action, General Washington would now give into it against every dictate of policy: I could only suppose that his views were directed against my baggage, &c in which part I was indeed vulnerable. This circumstance alone would have tempted me to avoid the difficult passage of the Rariton; but when I reflected that from Sandy Hook I should be able, with more expedition, to carry his Majesty's further orders into execution, I did not hesitate to order the army into the road which leads through Freehold to the Navesink. The approach of the enemy's army being indicated by the frequent appearance of their light troops on our rear, I requested his Excellency Lieutenant General Knyphausen to take the baggage of the whole army under the charge of his division, consisting of the troops mentioned in the margin.* Under the head of baggage was comprised, not only all the wheel-carriages of every department, but also the Bat Horses; A train which, as the country admitted but of one rout for carriages, extend near twelve miles. The indispensable necessity I was under of securing these, is obvious, and the difficulty of doing it, in a most woody country, against an army far superior in numbers, will. I trust be no less so.

I desired Lieutenant General Knyphausen to move at day break on the 28th; and, that I might not press upon him in the first part of the march, in which we had but one route, I did not follow with the other division* till near eight o'clock. Soon after I had marched, reconnoitering parties of the enemy appeared on our left flank. The Queen's Rangers fell in with and dispersed some detachments among the woods in the same quarter. Our rear guard having descended from the heights above Freehold, into a plain near three miles in length, and about one mile in breadth; several columns of the enemy appeared likewise descending into the plain, and about ten o'clock they began to cannonade our rear. Intelligence was at this moment brought me, that the enemy were discovered marching in force on both our flanks. I was convinced that our baggage was their object; but it being in this juncture engaged in defiles which continued for some miles, no means occurred of parrying the blow, but attacking the corps which harrassed our rear, and pressing it so hard as to oblige the detachments to return from our flanks to its assistance.

I had good information that General Washington was up with his whole army, estimated at about 20,000; but as I knew there were two defiles between him and the corps at which I meant to strike. I judged that he could not have passed them with a greater force than what Lord Cornwallis's division was well able to engage; and had I even met his whole army in the passage of those defiles, I had little to apprehend, but his situation might have been critical.

The enemy's cavalry, commanded, it is said, by M. La Fayette, having approached our reach, they were charged with great spirit by the Queen's Light Dragoons. They did not wait for the shock, but fell back in confusion, upon their own infantry.

Thinking it possible that the event might draw to a general action, I sent for a brigade of British and the 17th Light Dragoons, from Lieutenant General Knyphausen's division, and having directed them on their arrival to take a position effectually covering our right flank, of which I was most jealous, I made a disposition of attack on the plain, but before I could advance, the enemy fell back and took a strong position on the heights above Freehold Court-house. The heat of the weather was intense, and our men already suffered from fatigue. But our circumstances obliged us to make a vigorous exertion. The British Grenadiers with their left to the village of Freehold, and the Guards on the right of the Grenadiers, began the attack with such spirit, that the enemy gave way immediately. The second line of the enemy stood the attack with great obstinancy, but were likewise compleatly routed. They then took a third position, with a marshy hollow in front, over which it would have been scarcely possible to have attacked them. However, part of the second line made a movement to the front, occupied some ground on the enemy's left flank, and the Light Infantry and Queen's Rangers turned their left.

By this time our men were so overpowered with fatigue that I could press the affair no farther; especially, as I was confident the end was gained for which the attack had been made.

I ordered the Light Infantry to rejoin me, but a strong detachment of the enemy, having possessed themselves of a post, which would have annoyed them in their retreat, the 33d regiment made a movement towards the enemy, which, with a similar one made by the first Grenadiers, immediately dispersed them.

I took the position from whence the enemy had been first driven, after they had quitted the plain, and having reposed the troops till ten at night, to avoid the excessive heat in the day, I took advantage of the moon-light to rejoin Lieutenant-General Knyphausen, who had advanced to Nut-Swamp, near Middle-town.

Our baggage had been attempted by some of the enemy's light troops, who were repulsed by the good dispositions made by Lieutenant General Knyphausen and Major-General Grant, and the good countenance of the 40th regiment, whose piquets alone were attacked, and one troop of the 17th Light Dragoons. The two corps which had marched against it (being, as I since learn, a brigade on each flank) were recalled, as I had suspected, at the beginning of the action.

It would be sufficient honour to the troops barely to say, that they had forced a corps, as I am informed, of near 12,000 men, from two strong positions; but it will, I doubt not, be considered as doubly creditable, when I mention, that they did it under such disadvantages of heat and fatigue, that a great part of those we lost fell dead as they advanced.

Fearing that my order had miscarried, before I quitted the ground I sent a second, for a brigade of infantry, the 17th Light Dragoons, and 2d battalion of Light Infantry, to meet me on the march, with which additional force, had General Washington shewn himself the next day, I was determined to attack him; but there not being the least appearance of an enemy, I suspected he might have passed a considerable corps to a strong position near Middletown; I therefore left the rear guard on its march, and detached Major-General Grant to take post there, which was effected on the 29th. The whole army marched to this position the next day, and then fell back to another, near Navesink, where I waited two days, in the hope, that Mr. Washington might have been tempted to have advanced to the position near Middletown, which we had quitted; in which case I might have attacked him to advantage.

During this time the sick and wounded were embarked, and preparations made for passing to Sandy-Hook island by a bridge, which by the extra-ordinary efforts of the navy was soon compleated, and over which the whole army passed in about two hours time; the horses and cattle having been previously transported.

Your Lordship will receive herewith a return of the killed, wounded, missing, &c. of his Majesty's troops on the 28th of last month: That of the enemy is supposed to have been more considerable, especially in killed.

The loss of Lieutenant-Colonel Monckton, who commanded the 2d battalion of Grenadiers, is much to be lamented.

I am much indebted to Lord Cornwallis for his zealous services on every occasion: and I found great support from the activity of Major-General Grey, Brigadier Generals Mathew, Leslie, and Sir William Erskine.

I beg leave to refer your Lordship, for any other particulars, which you may wish to be informed of, to Col. Patterson, who will have the honour of delivering these dispatches, and whose services, in this country, entitle him to every mark of your Lordship's favour.

I have the honour to be, &c

H. CLINTON.

TRENTON, DECEMBER 2.

We hear from Baskinridge, in Somerset county, that the inhabitants of that neighbourhood, and those of the most adjacent parts of Morris County, have fallen upon a method to detect horse thieves and robbers; for this purpose they have chosen a Committee, who have appointed a number of men well acquainted with those parts, and properly equipped, to scour every part of the country, which will make it difficult for those villians in future to make their escape from publick justice.¹

We hear that Col. Ward, Muster-Master General, and Lieut. Col Bradford, Deputy-Muster-Master General, were on Friday night last kidnapped, while in bed, by a number of Tories, at Kakiate, near the North-River, who carried them to the enemy, in the city of New-York.

Somerset County, October 21, 1778.

NOTICE is hereby given, that inquisitions have been found against David White, Bernardus Le grange, Joseph Arrowsmith, George Rodney, Richard Campton, jun. and John Smith, for joining the army of the King of Great-Britain; which inquisitions were returned to the last Court of Common Pleas, holden at Hillsborough, in and for the county of Somerset. And upon proclamation being made no person appeared to traverse the same.

By His EXCELLENCY

WILLIAM LIVINGSTON, Esquire,

Governor, Captain-General and Commander in Chief in and over the State of New-Jersey, and Territories thereunto belonging, Chancellor and ordinary in the same.

PROCLAMATION.

WHEREAS the Honourable the Congress by their resolution of the seventeenth instant, reciting that it having pleased Almighty GOD, through the course of the present year, to bestow great and manifold mercies on the people of these United States; and that it being the indispensable duty of all men gratefully to acknowledge their obligations to him for benefits received, did recommend it to the legislative or executive authority of each of the said States, to appoint Wednesday, the 30th day of December next, to be observed as a day of public thanksgiving and praise, that all people may with united hearts on that day express a just sense of his unmerited favours; particularly in that it hath pleased him, by his over-ruling Providence, to support us in a just and necessary war for the defence of our rights and liberties, by affording us seasonable supplies for our armies; by disposing the heart of a powerful Monarch to enter into alliance with us, and aid our cause — by defeating the councils and evil designs of our enemies, and giving us victory over their troops, and by the continuance of that union among these States, which, by his blessing, will be their future strength and glory — and farther recommended that together with devout thanksgivings may be joined a penitent confession of our sins, and humble supplication for pardon through the merits of our Saviour; that so, under the smiles of Heaven, our public Councils may be directed — our arms by land and sea prospered — our liberty and independence secured — our schools and seminaries of learning flourish — our trade be revived — our husbandry and manufactures increased — and the hearts of all impressed with undissembled piety, with benevolence and zeal for the public good.

I HAVE, therefore, thought fit, by and with the advice of the Honourable Privy Council of this State, to appoint the said thirtieth day of December next, to be set apart and observed throughout this State as a day of public thanksgiving and praise for the purposes in the above resolution set forth, whereof all the inhabitants of this State are hereby required to take notice, and govern themselves accordingly. And I do hereby recommend it to the Ministers of the Gospel of every denomination in this State, to perform divine service, and to the people committed to their charge, to attend on public worship on that day, and to abstain thereon from all servile labour, and all recreations inconsistent with the solemnity of the festival.

Given under my hand and seal at arms, at Trenton, the twenty-fifth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and seventy-eight, and in the third year of the independence of America.

WIL. LIVINGSTON.

By his Excellency's command,
BOWES REED, Sec'ry.

TO BE SOLD,

By MARY MIDDLETON, at Crosswicks, Dr. RYAN'S incomparable worm destroying SUGAR PLUMBS. Necessary to be kept in all FAMILIES.

So exceedingly valued by all people who have had of them in Great-Britain and Ireland, for their transcendant excellency in the destroying worms of all kinds, both in the bodies of men, women and children, by not only breaking the knofs of the duo denum, or guts next the stomach, but they pass thro' the smallest passages of the body, purge away those ropy and slimy humours which are the cause of those pernicious vermin, and the source of many other disorders: They are one of the best purges in the world for gross bodied children that are apt to breed worms, and have large bellies: their operation is mild, safe and pleasant; they wonderfully cleanse the bowels of all stiff and clammy humours, which stop up the parts, and prevent the juice of food being conveyed to the liver and made blood, which is often the case with children, and attended with a hard belly, stinking breath, frequent fevers, rickets, and a decay of strength in the lower parts; likewise settled head-achs and pains in the head, swellings, old sores, scabs, tetter or breakings out, will be perfectly cured, and the blood and skin restored to its original purity and smoothness; they purge by urine, and bring away the gravel, and effectually cure all obstructions of the urine, or ulcers in the kidneys. They at once strike at the true cause of the scurvy, and entirely destroy it, and all scorbutic humours and effects, root and branch, so as never to return again: and what makes them more commendable is, they are full as agreeable to both taste and sight as loaf sugar.

I have by these plumbs cured a great many children of whooping or chin coughs and agues, which distempers are very common and troublesome to families, and the want of these plumbs are the ruin of many children's constitutions.

These plumbs enrich and sweeten the whole mass of blood, carry off all gross, corrupt and putrid humours, and create a fresh and healthy complexion in such as are affected by any putrid matter.

The plumb is a great diuretick, cleansing the reins of slime: it expels wind, and is a sovereign medicine in the cholic and gripping of the guts. It allays and carries off sour vapours, which occasion many disorders in the head. It opens all obstructions in the stomach, lungs, liver, reins and bladder, causes a good appetite and helps digestion. It hath been found wonderfully successful to such persons as are going chronic distempers, as asthmas, phthisies, or shortness of breath, dropsies and yellow jaundice. Now I hope all impartial persons are satisfied, that the medicine which upon such humours, will almost reach any distemper, if not too far gone, since corruption and putrifaction are the forerunners of all diseases; therefore no better physic can be taken for all ages, sexes and constitutions, from infancy to old age. These plumbs are highly serviceable to the female sex, from the age of fourteen to twenty years, and from forty to fifty. Each box contains one dozen of these plumbs, with printed directions. Diagnostic signs of Worms.

PALENESS in the face, itching of the nose, hollowness of the eyes, grating of the teeth when asleep, dullness, pains, and heaviness in the head, a dry cough, and itching in the fundament, white and thick urine, unquiet sleep, often starting, lost appetite, swelled belly, gnawing and biting about the stomach, frightful dreams, extreme thirsts, the body decayed and lean, fits, often vomiting, stinking breath, &c.

Directions for taking them.

A child from 1 to 2 years may eat one plumb, from 2 to 4 one and a half, from 4 to 6 two, from 6 to 8 two and a half, from 8 to 12 three, from 12 to 15, and all above that age, may eat four plumbs, one hour or two before uprising, not to drink during that time, but afterwards drink warm tea, whey or water gruel; in taking them, the patient must stay two or three days betwixt each dose.

In agues, the same quantity must be taken, two, three or four hours before the fit comes on, and be repeated three times. In whooping or chin coughs give the quantity above mentioned.

TO BE SOLD, And immediate possession given, A Valuable PLANTATION, situate at Matcheponix, in the southward of Amboy, and county of Middlesex, adjoining, Mr. Nicholas Van Wickle's; containing 228 acres, about 140 of which are cleared, the remainder good wood land, abounding with plenty of chestnut for fencing. There are on the premises a dwelling-house one story and half high, with three rooms below stairs and two above, though may be divided into four, a kitchen adjoining, a well of good water at the door, and a never failing spring about 60 yards off, very suitable for a spring-house, a new barn now erecting, 42 feet long and 22 feet wide, a young thriving orchard of excellent fruit, about 10 or 12 acres of meadow, part whereof is very good, and 30 more may be made at a small expense. The upland being natural to grass, renders it exceedingly well adapted for grazing, but will also produce good crops of wheat and other grain. The farm will divide very conveniently into six or seven fields, every one of which may be supplied with never failing water. The situation is peculiarly advantageous, being about four miles from Spotswood and the same from Englishtown, where there is a constant market and the highest prices given for all kinds of farmers produce. There are several grist and saw mills within a mile of the place, and wood may readily be transported to New-York market, it being not more than five miles to navigable water to that city. It is also convenient to sundry places of worship, and is surrounded by a neighborhood of the most reputable farmers. The crop of green corn will be sold with the premises, if agreeable to the purchaser. For terms apply to Mr HENRY DELATUSH, on the farm, or to the subscriber in Mansfield and county of Burlington.

TRENTON, DECEMBER 9.

On the 25th ult. ABRAHAM VAN NESTE, Esq. was elected a Member of Council for the county of Somerset, in the room of FREDERICK FRELINGHUYSEN, Esq. lately appointed a member of Congress.

The Honorable the Legislature, on the 5th instant, passed an Act, “to raise the sum of £100,000 by Taxation, for discharging the debts and defraying the necessary expences of the state of New Jersey.”

The Sentence of the Court Martial upon Major General LEE, is confirmed by Congress.

We hear that a few days ago a British armed vessel, bound from Halifax to New York, and richly laden, came ashore near Barnagat, in this State. The crew, about sixty in number, surrendered themselves prisoners to our militia. Goods to the amount of £5000. have been taken out of her by our people. And it is said a number of the prisoners have already arrived in Bordentown.—Other particulars are not yet come to hand.

Since our last one Division of Gen. Burgoyne’s army, who surrendered themselves prisoners of war to Major General Gates at Saratoga, on the 17th of October, 1777, passed thro’ Pitts-Town on their way to Virginia: the other two divisions are also on their march for the same place.

Last Saturday the court of oyer and terminer ended at Gloucester, West Jersey, when the following prisoners received sentence of death for high treason, viz. Harrison Wells, Wm. Hammet, John Dilkes, Joshua Dilkes, Patterson Cook, Thomas Nightingale, Isaac Lord, David Lloyd, Gideon Urine, Abraham Fennemore, James Birch, Daniel Fusman, Charles Stringe, Lawrence Cox, John Franklin, Joseph Dill, and Joseph Pratt. Benjamin Bartholomew also received sentence of death for burglary. Friday, the 29th of January next, is appointed for the day of execution.—The Pennsylvania Evening Post, December 9, 1778.

To BE SOLD by Public Vendue,

On the 21st day of this instant, (if not sold before by private sale) by the subscriber, for cash or one year's credit, together or in lots as may best suit the purchaser,

TWELVE and a half acres of land, pleasantly situated on Salem road, near Mantua-creek-Bridge, in the township of Deptford, county of Gloucester, and western division of New-Jersey, about twelve and a half miles below Cooper's Ferry, whereon are a handsome good two story brick house, kitchen, barn, a blacksmith's shop, and other out buildings, a young apple orchard, and a pump of good water at the door, conveniently situated either for a tradesman or shop keeper.

Also thirty acres of woodland, (excepting four or five acres whereof being clear and in good fence) about half a mile from the aforesaid premises. Also five acres of good meadow ground, on Great Mantua Creek, within about forty rods of the said premises. And also five acres of cedar swamp within about six miles thereof, and one from Delaware River. Attendance will be given by LUCAS GIBBS.

TO BE SOLD,

A Very valuable tract of Land, situate on the Raritan River, two miles from the town of New Brunswick, in the state of New Jersey, commonly known by the name of the Island Farm; containing about two thousand acres. There is a very large proportion of woodland to it, which renders it particularly valuable, as from its vicinity to the river, the conveyance of the same to the New York market will be attended with very little expence. The land is in general good, and seldom fails of producing good crops; its situation is remarkably high and healthy, commanding a most beautiful and extensive prospect from the place where the house stood, so much so, that the city of Amboy lies open to view. There is a large quantity of fresh and salt meadow, and much more may be made; a fine thriving orchard, and sundry other improvements and advantages, which are unnecessary to enumerate, as the character of the farm is so well known and established. The tract was divided in the survey into three separate farms, on one of which are a house and barn, and some improvements, and will be sold together or separate, as may best suit the purchaser.

The dwelling-house, barn and outhouses having been destroyed by the enemy, and the Proprietors being obliged to reside at a distance from the farm, induce them to dispose of it. Those who are inclinable to view the premises, are requested to call on MR. JOHN DENNIS, in New Brunswick, and for the terms are desired to apply to THOMAS LAWRENCE, or JOHN LAWRENCE, jun. in Philadelphia, or to ANTHONY WHITE, Esq, now residing at the Union Iron Works, in Sussex, in the state of Jersey.

As the Proprietors will not have occasion for the money, the purchaser may have any time for the payment of the same, on giving security and paying interest.

TO BE SOLD.

A FARM containing sixty acres, in the township of Amwell, adjoining Hopewell, occupied by John Allen: the whole cleared and under good fence, excepting about ten or twelve acres of choice timber land, reserved for the support of the farm. The land is very fertile, has on it a framed house with three rooms well finished, a barn, stables, barracks, &c. a bearing orchard of a hundred trees, about fourteen acres of good meadow. The land is smooth, lying a little to the sun, and watered with a brook running through it, and a spring before the door. Any person inclining to buy, may apply to the Rev. Abner Brush, residing in that neighbourhood, who will agree on reasonable terms, and give an indisputable title for the same.

ABNER BRUSH.

N. B. The subscriber expects to return in a few weeks to the State of New York, and to sell within that time.

TWELVE DOLLARS REWARD.

STRAYED from the subscriber, four heifers, three of which are three years old, the other two years old; one of them is red with a white face, two are black or red pied, and the fourth is brindle, all marked with a half crop under the near ear and a slit in the off ear. Any person that informs the subscriber, or John Denton, at Princeton, Somerset county, New Jersey, where he may get said heifers again, shall have the above reward, or three dollars for any one or more of them, paid by

TRENTON, DECEMBER 16.

The Courts of Oyer and Terminer and General Gaol Delivery for the County of Gloucester were opened at Gloucester on the 17th of November last, and ended on the 5th of this month. During the session Benjamin Bartholomew was convicted of Burglary, and Jonathan Chew, Harrison Wells, William Hammett, John Dilks, John Franklin, Joseph Prat, Joseph Dill, James Birch, Daniel Fusman, Abraham Fennimore, David Lloyd, Lawrence Cox, Gideon Urine, Joshua Dilks, Charles String, Thomas Nightingale, Paterson Cook, and Isaac Lord, were convicted of High Treason. On Saturday se'nnight sentence of death passed against the above offenders.

In a New York paper of Dec 2,¹ Brigadier General Browne, (having sailed for his government with a number of troops) gives an invitation to all gentlemen refugees and others who are inclined to settle on any of his Majesty's Bahama Islands, and offers every encouragement to those who are desirous to retire thither during the rebellion.

¹This offer attracted attention from many towns in New Jersey, particularly those in the eastern division of the State.

We hear that the Legislature of this State have ordered a genteel sword to be presented to Captain Nathaniel FITZ RANDOLPH, of Woodbridge, in consideration of his merit and services.

CALEB CAMP, Esq. is elected Speaker of the House of Assembly of this State, in the room of John Hart, Esq. detained from publick business by sickness.

The Council and Assembly in joint-meeting have appointed the Honourable John Witherspoon, Nathaniel Scudder, John Fell, Frederick Frelinghuysen, and Elias Dayton, Esqrs, delegates in Congress, for the ensuing year.—The Honourable John Imlay, Esq. Judge of the Court of Admiralty; Joseph Bloomfield, Esq. Register, and Joseph Potts, Esq. Marshall, Jonathan Deare, Esq. Collector of the Customs in the Eastern district; Capt. Nathaniel Fitz Randolph, Esq. Naval officer. Samuel Deck, Esq. Collector of the Customs in the Western district; Thomas Sinnickson, Esq. Naval officer. Elisha Boudinot, Esq. Commissary of Prisoners for this State.

It is reported that the Britons and tories intend shortly to make an excursion from New York to Shrewsbury: but as their late disaster on the plains of Monmouth must still be recent in their memory, and as a considerable part of the American army is now in this State, under the immediate direction of the Commander in Chief, we presume there is little danger—Yet it has been deemed proper to be prepared, and with this view, we are told an order has been issued to drive off the cattle from their neighbourhood, where it is most probable the enemy may attempt to land.

The inconveniences attending the usual mode of taking in or collecting subscriptions for a newspaper, especially in times of publick commotion like the present, have induced the Publisher of the New Jersey Gazette, upon consideration, to alter the plan upon which he proposed to proceed the ensuing year when the advertisement in number 51 and 52 was given to the publick. To avoid the necessity of opening accounts against the individual subscribers, and the difficulties attending the settlement of numerous arrearages of small sums, he means to pursue the following plain and easy expedient, which will be more certain and cheap to his kind Customer and less embarrassing to himself.

Every Gentleman who will become a subscriber for twelve papers shall receive two more for his trouble, and so in proportion for a greater number.

The subscription-money to be paid to the Publisher by the persons engaged for the papers at or before the expiration of each quarter; and, to enable those to be punctual in making their remittances, the individuals who compose each packet are expected to pay by quarterly advance.

The several persons who become Subscribers to the Publisher, will find a proper mode of keeping accounts with those whom they engage for, exemplified in the accounts for the preceding year, which will shortly be sent with the several packets.

The Publisher will be obliged to the several Gentlemen who collected subscriptions for him the preceding year to continue their kind offices for the ensuing on the plan now proposed.

If this mode can be carried into practice, the Publisher agrees to lower the price of the Gazette to a Dollar and an Half by the quarter.

It is hoped the above will meet the approbation of the Publick as being more advantageous in every respect than the other plan of publication. By this means the Paper may be carried on without loss, and useful knowledge highly interesting to all.

As it is of importance to know what preparation ought to be made, and the number of papers which will probably be wanted, it is earnestly requested that all practicable dispatch may be used in sending in the subscriptions agreeably to the above plan by the first of January next.

The Publisher returns his acknowledgments to the Publick for the encouragement hitherto given, in this arduous undertaking; and he flatters himself that, with their further assistance, the Plan which he now wishes to prosecute can be readily carried into execution, which, as it will take less time, will enable him to bestow more pains in collecting the most interesting and entertaining Matter for the benefit and amusement of his Readers.

TO BE SOLD,

At the forks of Little-Egg-Harbour River, in Gloucester county, State of New Jersey, THE premises whereon the subscriber now lives, with all the buildings and improvements thereon, to wit, a saw-mill and grist-mill, both remarkable for going fast, and supplied with a never failing stream of water. The mills are within a mile and a quarter of a landing to which vessels of seventy or eighty tons burthen can come; Scows that carry seven or eight thousand feet of boards can go loaded from the mill tail. There is a sufficient quantity of pine and cedar timber to supply the saw-mill for a great number of years, and also a great quantity of cedar fit for rails, near the water side, which may be easily exported to those parts of the country where they will sell to a great advantage. There is also on the premises a dwelling-house that will accommodate a large family, also a barn, stables and out-houses, a number of houses for workmen and tradesmen, also wet and dry good-stores, and indeed every building necessary to render a place convenient for carrying on business and trade extensively. Any person inclining to purchase may be further informed by applying to the subscriber, at the place aforesaid.

SARAH RAMSAY.

AT PRIVATE SALE, BY THE SUBSCRIBERS,

That Farm and Tract of Land called Mount Penn, in Monmouth county,¹ East-Jersey, fronting on the sea, distant from Philadelphia fifty odd miles, containing 1200 acres in two improvements, the one having a neat frame dwelling-house and a cellar under the same, with a well of water at the door, 30 odd acres upland cleared, and as much more ready for the plow at a small expence, about 400 natural and grafted young thriving apples trees in two orchards, 45 or 50 acres of swamp and lowland lately cleared, the greatest part in fresh meadow, which premises are as fruitful for timothy grass, red and white clover, as any in the province; the salt marsh is extensive and high, and will keep a remarkable large stock of cattle, the situation of the dwelling house affords a prospect of Little Egg Harbour Inlet, where the shipping coming in from sea ride at an anchor, with an extensive view of the shipping plying to the Northward and Southward, together with a sight of all the cattle on the salt marshes. The salt marsh is supplied with fresh water and laid out by ditches, that part may be pastured, the other for mowing, which can be changed annually at conveniency; the great road from Cape May to Shrewsbury runs thro' it within fifty yards of the dwelling. This situation will suit a tavern-keeper, store-keeper, blacksmith, or a company of Philadelphia merchants, in order to expedite their sea trade. The other improvement is a small log dwelling-house, and a young bearing orchard of apple and peach trees. On the North end of the Tract is a considerable body of cedar swamp, suitable for the necessity of the present time, and is about four miles from a landing. There is a stone quarry on the premises. One other tract of marsh, joining the above, containing by estimation, 103 acres, equalled by few lots of salt marsh, a brook of fresh water bounding it on the West side, and is situate on the Head of the Tide in Burlington county, West-Jersey, together with some other lots of salt marsh and rough upland. These lands are near the Friends Meeting-house of Little Egg-Harbour, and about five miles from the Baptist Meeting house of Mannahocking. Before the present troubles in the neighbourhood of these lands, the markets for beef and pork was as good as at Philadelphia. The situation is healthy, and is near the East Plains¹ that abounds in the autumn with gentlemens game; besides there is no scarcity of wild deer. It is very convenient for carrying on a whale fishery, as at times during the winter and spring, swarms of those profitable fish are seen on the coast. Many of the inhabitants in the neighbourhood of these lands are respectable. Titles as good as any in the Jerseys will be given. Any person desirous of purchasing may know the terms by applying to JAMES FREELAND, at the Friends Meeting house of Little Egg-harbour, or JOHN DONNELL, at the house of Mr. Jacob Naglee, near Vine in Second street, or at his shop at Mr. JOSIAH COATS'S hatter, a few doors below the Church, in Second-street, Philadelphia.

Also to be sold, a small share of property in East-Jersey, having some oak and pine land due on it. Enquire as above.

Wanted, a quantity of refined or unrefined SALT PETRE: A good price will be given. Such as may have this article for sale may apply to JOHN WILLSON, on the north side of Market-street, and opposite the Meal Market.

TRENTON, DECEMBER 23.

IN GENERAL ASSEMBLY of the State of New Jersey, December 12, 1778.

WHEREAS there are sundry of the counties of this State unimproved and untenanted tracts or parcels of lands, the owners or proprietors of which are inhabitants of some of the other United States:

Resolved, That notice be given in the New Jersey Gazette to the owners or proprietors of such lands, that the same are by law made subject to a tax in like manner as other lands of equal quality the owners or proprietors of which are inhabitants of this state, in order that they may take proper measures for having the tax assessed on them discharged; and that the several Printers of Newspapers throughout the United States be desired to publish this for the information of all concerned.

Extracts from the Journals.

JOS BLOOMFIELD, Clerk of Assembly.

Departed this life, on Saturday the 14th of Nov. last, the worthy and much lamented Mr. HENRY GREEN, of Shrewsbury, in the 49th year of his age; and the second day following his remains were decently interred in his own burying ground, mournfully attended by a large number of his acquaintances.

It is with pleasure we can inform the publick, that of a thousand sick and wounded, admitted into the General Hospital at this place, since the departure of our army from the valley forge, only forty-three have died, and not above fifty (convalescents and inoculated patients) remain in charge of the surgeons.

MARRIED, on Tuesday se'nnight, in this place, CHARLES SIMMS. Esq. Lieutenant-Colonel of the second Virginia regiment, to the truly amiable Miss NANCY DOUGLASS, daughter of Mr. WILLIAM DOUGLASS, late of the City of New York.

Also married last Thursday evening, at Fair View near Bristol, Pennsylvania, JOSEPH BLOOMFIELD, Esq. Major of the third New Jersey regiment,¹ to Miss POLLY M'ILVAINE, a young lady of merit and fortune.

On Saturday last the gallant Major LEE, with his corps of Light Dragoons, passed through this place from camp, on his way to Burlington, to go into winter quarters.

The Eastern Post was not arrived when this paper went to press.

The Thanksgiving day being fixed on Wednesday next, the publication of this Paper will be postponed till Thursday.²

Wanted by the Printer hereof, Two Journey men. They will be exempted from actual service in the militia, and receive handsome wages.

On SATURDAY next, the 26th, inst, December, will be sold at the house of the subscriber, opposite the Church in Trenton, An assortment of MERCHANDIZE, HOUSEHOLD FURNITURE, amongst which are feather beds, a desk and dining table, also wearing apparel.

JACOB BENJAMIN.

WANTED IMMEDIATELY

TWO JOURNEYMEN FULLERS, who will have good encouragement and be exempted from military duty by applying to WILLIAM DENNISTON, near Morris-Town, East-Jersey.

—The Pennsylvania Packet, December 26, 1778.

Burlington, Dec. 16, 1778.

The subscriber begs leave to hint to his friends and employers that having felt the inadequacy of the price he has hitherto charged, to the continual rise of every article of consumption in a family, finds himself under a necessity to raise his price, for the BOARD and EDUCATION of YOUTH, to thirty-six pounds per quarter; or six pounds ten shillings (the former price) to be paid in shop goods or country produce; for which he is willing to allow twenty pounds per cent. more than the price such goods or produce were at in the year 1774. The latter proposal is hinted purposely to prevent the charge of intentional exorbitancy; and he doubts not but every one, who will be kind enough to calculate, will find the above mentioned price still short of a just proportion. His employers may depend on the personal attendance and assiduous endeavors of their friend, &c.

—The Pennsylvania Evening Post, December 28, 1778.

From the London Gazette. September 16.

Admiralty Office, Sept. 13, 1778.

Captain Venture, of the Hannah armed Vessel, arrived this Day with Dispatches from the Lord Viscount Howe, Commander in Chief of his Majesty's Ships in North America, to Mr. Stephens; of which the following are extracts:

Eagle, at Sandy Hook, July 18, 1778.

The enemy continue in the same situation, as mentioned in my Letter of the 11th inst. The position they have taken has enabled them to intercept about nine or ten mostly small trading vessels bound to this port: together with the York armed Sloop, and one of the bomb tenders of the squadron.

I understand that the Packet, which sailed from England in May, has been taken by an armed Brig mounting 14 guns, and carried into New-London.

Eagle, Sandy Hook, July 26, 1778.

By this opportunity you will receive the farther reports of my proceedings, sent subsequent to the 6th instant, (the date of my first Letter) by the Grantham Packet, and a later Conveyance.

I have now to add, That on the 22d in the Morning the Enemy weighed and stood from before this Port to the Southward, with the Wind to the Eastward, followed by the Advice Boats which I had stationed without them. They were left, on the 23d in the Morning, in Latitude of the Delaware, and about 30 Leagues from the Land, steering by the Wind at East, on the Larboard Tack.

The Weather having been very favourable the last three Days for prosecuting an attempt to force the Entrance of this Port, and the Toulon Squadron not appearing on this Part of the Coast, I conclude the French Commander has desisted from the purpose he is reported to have declared to that Effect.

On the 25th inst. the Dispatch, sent for Halifax the 10th, returned with Letters from Captain Fielding of the 19th.

Captain Fielding on the most laudable motives, ordered away the Centurion and Reasonable from that Station, to strengthen the Squadron here, as soon as he heard of the appearance of the enemy on this coast: The two ships are not yet arrived, but from the last observed position of the French squadron, and Easterly Winds since prevailing, I flatter myself they will escape to the Northward of the Enemy, and may daily be expected at the Hook.

The Renown, which had been appointed to conduct the West India Convoy, came in here from Antigua, the same Evening, with the Dispatch.

Eagle, Sandy Hook, July 31, 1778.

No opportunity for sending off the Dispatches you will receive herewith having earlier offered, I am enabled, in addition thereto, to acquaint you, for the Information of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, that the Reasonable joined me here the 28th, and the Centurion, with the Cornwall, Yesterday.

Captain Edwards parted Company from the Squadron with Vice Admiral Byron in a sudden and hard Gust of Wind the 3d instant, in Latitude 48.53 and Longitude 31.16.

No Intelligence having been since received of the Vice Admiral, I am preparing to put immediately to sea, with the force collected at this port, in quest of the French squadron, supposed, when last seen on the 28th, to be steering for Rhode Island.

TRENTON, DECEMBER 31.

“The 3d inst. at Totowa, Bergen county, departed this life, JANE the consort of JOHN BYVANCK, late merchant of New York, leaving behind her three small children— In her life she exhibited conjugal affection, maternal tenderness, disinterested benevolence and friendship: and died, as she lived, in charity with mankind, and full reliance on the merits of her dear Redeemer.”

A few TIERCES of the best WEST INDIA COTTON, To be SOLD very CHEAP, by JOHN REYNOLDS, in TRENTON. Also a neat RIDING-CHAIR, with good HARNESS.

NOTICE is hereby given that there has been judgment entered at the last Court of Common Pleas, held for the county of Somerset and State of New Jersey, against Richard Cochran, Joseph Stockton and Charles Roberts, agreeable to the directions of an act of the General Assembly, in that case made and provided: all persons who have and claim, interest, or demand to, in, or against the said estates, to appear with their respective accounts, vouchers and evidences at the house of Henry Harrison, inn keeper, at Rocky-Hill, to make good the same, on Monday the 15th day of February next, where attendance will be given from ten o'clock in the forenoon till five in the afternoon --- And all persons indebted to said estates, are desired to pay off the same as soon as possible; and all those who have any goods, chattels and effects, bonds, bills, notes, books of accounts or other writing, are desired to deliver them immediately to me or some one of the Commissioners, or they must expect to be proceeded against as the law directs.

30 DOLLARS REWARD.

RANAWAY from Benjamin Vaneleave's Esq. in Maidenhead, the 26th instant, (Dec) a Negro WENCH named Dinah, 28 or 30 years of age, five feet six or seven inches high, black and very lusty. She was lately bought of Parson Van Arsdall at Springfield, and lived formerly at Rocky-Hill, and hath a brother living with Colonel Scudder, in Freehold, and its likely is gone there. Any person apprehending said wench and applying to Mr. Phillips, innkeeper, in Maidenhead, shall be entitled to the above reward and reasonable charges, paid by WILLIAM CRAB.

ON the 20th of November last a certain person who called himself Daniel Nucom, and said he was a drover, and lived in Pennsylvania, sold a bull to the subscriber as his property: and about two weeks after Samuel Rusk came for the said bull, which he proved to be his own: This is therefore to warn the publick of the imposter. He is a short well set fellow, about 35 years old, and speaks a little broad: He had on a light-coloured coat, swan-skin jacket, leather breeches, half-leg boots, and scolloped hat: he rode a sorrel horse, with a white mane and tail, and one wall-eye. Any person taking up said Nucom, and securing him so that he may be brought to justice, shall have FORTY DOLLARS reward, paid by,

JOSHUA STOUT.

Hopewell, Dec 20.

ALL Persons indebted to the estate of James Jackson, jun of Upper Freehold, in the county of Monmouth, deceased, on bond, bill or book debt, are requested to make immediate payment: And all those that have any demands against said estate, are once more earnestly requested to bring their accounts properly attested, within three weeks after the date hereof, in order to receive their just dues, and enable the subscriber to make up his accounts with the legaties,
